Journal Jottings

Ionia wants a street railway.

Mt. Clemens yearns for a big hotel.

That new job type is here and ready for business.

S. Lee, of Vergennes, has returned from Kalkaska.

From ten acres Geo. Rose of Keene got 400 bushels of wheat.

Excellent eating apples have been in market for some time.

Seth Robinson impounded only nineteen cows last Saturday.

M. Lyon of Vergennes has been to Kalkaska. Caught some trout, too.

Peaches will be small this year—small and scrumy. Too much dry weather.

You can legally shoot wild ducks now and that's probably the reason why you don't want to.

Don't want any more polar waves in August, please. The ladies prefer "Saratoga waves."

Rev. E. Cooley of Ionia preached two very able sermons at the Lowell M. E. Church last Sunday.

The papers daily announce that Gov. Croswell is going to be married. Who has a better right?

A woman named Van Caukin, was run over by the cars at Dayton last Thursday and instantly killed.

Readers of the JOURNAL are invited to favor us with "personal" items—arrivals from abroad, departures, etc.

The Superintendents of the Kent County poor have a pretty little infant girl to give to some good family.

An extra pressure of business for a week or two must be our excuse for limited local. We'll make it up presently or soon.

The Saranac Local says that a twelve year old son of Supervisor Pardee hauled in a 28 pound catfish the other day.

The rope walker was here (Prof. DeVeer) but couldn't find a place to stretch his cable—so he walked off on his ear.

Robert E. Sheeran, manager of the Cass Club of Detroit called on the JOURNAL yesterday.

The best of all drinks for warm weather is Gunther's Mead. Sold in Lowell only at J. C. West's.

Geo. Stone, aged 21 last Monday, received from his parents a birthday present of a handsome gold watch and chain.

Kusterer's brewery of Grand Rapids had a $1,200 scorch one day last week. Ah, but didn't the fire laddies get there lively?

The Saranac Local has again changed hands, F. T. Stevenson of the Ionia Sentinel composing room, having purchased it of W. E. O'Bryon.

Frank Howard opens a barber shop in the Huxley building on the bridge. Steve Arleth also occupies the same building, for the manufacture of cigars.

Kerosene accidents are reported here and there as usual but none of these accidents have been caused by the reduction in the price, we notice.

Farmers are requested to report at this office the number of bushels of wheat per acre raised on their farms this year. Send reports not later than Aug. 27.

Nearly all the wealthy editors have been to Petoskey this summer, or are going. We must be content with a photograph of the late camp meeting.

Mrs. Smith Bailey of Vergennes owns a young turkey that attends strictly to business. Said turkey has laid since last April 85 eggs and has never once stopped to "set."

The Wesleyan Methodists hold their camp-meeting on the farm of Alva McCormick, seven miles south and west of Saranac. Begins to-day and continues one week.

The four acres of land south of the cemetery, mentioned in a recent number of the JOURNAL, have been purchased for cemetery purposes. This is a wise decision.

We have received the premium list of the Central Fair Association whose next annual fair will be held at Hubbardston Sept. 23—26 inclusive. A. A. Sunderlin, of Hubbardston is Secretary.

Lowell: The Journal has bought a new power press and is going to put on a handsome new dress soon. Everybody is glad to note such signs of prosperity in Jimcrax's paper.—Sat. Eve. Post.

A movement is being made to establish telephonic communication between this village and the D., G. H. & M. depot. We trust it will be done. It would be a great convenience to many of our business men.

Reuben Quick went Frank King one better in the buzz-saw business and now carries two disabled fingers. You can't play a buzz saw as you do a piano without getting hurt. It is the worst deceiver ever let loose.

Zeke Clark was thrown from a track wagon on Train's course Friday morning, receiving slight injuries. The horse kicked itself loose and ran away; was stopped on Bridge Street near the post-office.

Services have been held at the Congregational church nearly every Sunday since Mr. Busser left. The church has no pastor but somebody reads a sermon and thus it is run on what might be called "the European plan."

Mr. G. Oberly, who has been confined to his room with a broken leg for fourteen weeks, is able to be out on crutches and we are all glad to see him. For eight weeks he lay on his back almost as helpless as a dead politician.

Senator Conkling and Mrs. Ex-Governor Sprague are subjects for dissection just now Mr. Ex-Governor Sprague is reported to have charged bayonets with a shotgun and driven Conkling "offum" his real estate. Time will tell all about it.

F. O. Taft is now prepared to make cider. He has had his cider mill reconstructed and put in good shape and will make cider on shares or any way to suit customers. Also pays cash for apples. Go and see him and take along a load of apples.

Pickle Grand Rapids. Changed from suicide to slashing up each other with jack-knives. And early in the season it was all "archery." Somebody ought to hold a mortgage on the habits and customs of the people there and see if that wouldn't steady them down a bit.

Bro. Hine of the Lowell JOURNAL promises his readers, all that is wanting to make his paper one of the best local sheets in existence,—a new dress. Glad to see this evidence of the JOURNAL's prosperity; it shows that the Lowellites know how to appreciate a good thing.—Saranac Local.

Graham's new brick building will soon begin to rise. S. Brower will superintend the job which is sufficient guarantee that the work will be well done. We understand that George Beebler has fully decided to put up a brick building adjoining Graham on the west.

The LOWELL JOURNAL man does not believe the story of the Lenawee county man who has a beard 7½ feet long. Mr. JOURNAL, it is an awful story, but it's a true one.—[Det. News.

Blackburn says "he who doubts is damned," and we don't feel like asking any questions.

Frank Adams left Lowell last Saturday at 5:17 p. m. went to Traverse City and Petoskey, saw all the sights, got his health, and arrived home Monday morning a little after seven o'clock, thereby losing a little over two hours of working time during his absence. He looks just as young, for all we see, as he did the day he went away.

In the libel suit of Waldron vs. Grand Rapids Post, there was one juror that couldn't pull the other eleven over to his side consequently the Post was not driven into the ground so far out of sight as Mr. Waldron desired. Plaintiffs in libel suits are a generous lot of fellows but why they should bestow all their wealth on the lawyers is one of those things no fellah can find out.

The new Freeport Church, which was recently dedicated, is a very handsome gothic structure, 32 by 50, and cost about $2,500. The able pastor, Rev. Mr. Jones, informs us that the entire debt, $350 was raised at the dedication, and that everything pertaining to the church is paid for. This speaks well for Freeport and the active, enterprising people of that vicinity who have put their shoulders to the wheel and hands in their pockets.

We don't know as there is any way to keep pond full of water or to prevent it from being drawn down stark naked, but if there is it certainly ought to be done. Many and bitter and just are the complaints we hear because the pond is so frequently lowered until its black, filthy, miasmatic bottom is laid bare to give off its terrible disease breeding odors. If the supply of water is shut off above let us know just how much of that kind of foolishness we are obliged to put up with. It may be actually necessary to draw off the water here occasionally to permit the repair of machinery etc., but it should not be done oftener than the actual necessities of the case require. Let something be done. We have no right to encourage sickness and disease; the contrary is our imperative duty and we must attend to it.

Bowne Brevities.

Ladies' social at the church on Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Reed of Scottville, N. Y., sister of D. M. Skidmore, is visiting friends in town.

Mr. and Mrs. John Spoor, of Colo, N. Y. have been visiting at W. T. Remington's.

The little stranger stopping with Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Denise, is a future President instead of President's wife as stated last week. Mistakes will happen in the best regulated families.

Mrs. D. Gostelow has been on the sick list; is now able to be out. J. E. B.

Grattan Gatherings.

Friday morning vegetation was badly frozen in some places.

Mrs. J. Randall of Grattan Center, is visiting Lowell friends.

Sheldon Ashley, and Mr. & Mrs. Wm. Slayton, are enjoying Petoskey scenery.

Grattan Grange Charter is to be draped in mourning for brother John Scott, deceased.

H Lessiter had eleven acres of wheat that yielded 32 bushels per acre; balance of crop 26 bushels per acre.

Rev. O. Kilgore was called from Ashley, Sunday to preach the funeral sermon of Mrs. Galusha, an aged lady without friends, who had long been supported by the town of Oakfield. MAUD.

Matrimony on the Fly.

The Ionia Telephone of the 8th chronicles the following:

Yesterday John Smith, who hails from Manchester, Eng. a ditcher and farmer by occupation, remarked as he passed by the washing room of the Sherman House, that he wanted a wife. Mrs. Mercy Holtzler retorted that she was his Huckleberry. Smith went to Justice Clark and asked him if he could adjust a matrimonial harness for him. The Justice asked him what innocent creature he had beguiled by his irresistable fascinations, and he replied that he did not know her name, but would go and get her, do accordingly left and in a few moments reappeared with the above named object of his affections, and the two were "hitched" and went on their way rejoicing. The courtship and marriage not having consumed fifteen minutes of their valuable time. Our Devil's mouth is watering for cake, but we presume it will be minute-pudding.

Base Ball.

A game of base ball between the Cass Club of Detroit and a picked nine of Lowell and vicinity took place on Malcolm's fair ground yesterday afternoon. The Detroit club is composed of a fine lot of fellows, and for amateurs are well up in the game. The nine are, Howard, catch; Reid, 1st, b; Weiss, pitcher; Fisher, s. s.; Hanrahan, c. f.; Jackson, 2d, b.; Reidy, l. f. M. F. Chipman is president of the club and R. E. Sheeran manager.

The Lowell nine, or Brindle Sox, was composed of C. Fox, Catch; S. Crawford, pitcher; W. Barnett, s. s.; A. Lamb, 1st, b.; W. Hughson, 2d, b; F. Mangold, 3d, b; C. Howe, l. f.; C. Maynard c. f.;

The game was called at 2:30, the Lowell nine taking first innings. The result of the game stood 14 to 5; the Cass playing eight innings. It was a very pretty game and a good crowd of people witnessed the sport. With practice the "Brindle Sox" would make a fine club. The Cass boys play at Hastings to-day.

Vigorous Talk.

Albert J. Chapman, of Detroit, brother of E. A. Chapman, of this village, one of the most prominent greenbackers of Michigan, recently wrote a letter to the Indianapolis Sun, vigorously denouncing the Democrats and greenbackers who are supporting the Ewing ticket in Ohio. He claims that the Republican party has made some big mistakes but that Democratic ascendency would be the worst thing that could happen to this country. He sees that the struggle in 1880 is going to be between the Republican party and the Democratic party and he is in no doubt as to which way greenbackers should vote. He even goes so far as to say that "the man is an enemy to the Republic, himself, and his wife and children who votes the Democratic ticket."

Base Ingratitude.

Now see here. What savage breast will not be soothed? Hath music no charms to salve the soothage? We grow not, be the hornspunes! else why this, to-wit, from the G. R. Times of Friday, the 8th.

We will concede that music is the highest of art. It is a delicate, subtle, or grand sentiment as the case may be. It appeals to the better element of poor human nature, and pulls up suffering manhood to a higher standard.

But for all of this, no confounded Ionia band ought to march down our streets at half-past six o'clock in the morning with drums beating and shrill fife tooting as was the case yesterday morning. An editor who retires to putative rest at four or five o'clock a. m. doesn't feel like slathering much sentiment around an hour later, and as for his better nature—if he has one—no bard, nor man, nor mule, could reach it with a shaft five hundred feet long. It music be the food of love, let that accursed Ionia concern reserve it until later in the day, and then play on.

Beware of the "Yellows"

The Eagle says that Grand Rapids people are likely to have all the peaches they want at present, and even more. The growers at St. Joseph and in that section of the state are shipping most of their fruit here, and several hundred baskets a day are already arriving. There is a reason why this fruit comes here instead of going to Chicago, its natural market. The orchards there, many of them are afflicted with the "yellows" and so seriously the Chicago board of health has prohibited the sale of much of the fruit from that section in that city. Buyers here will do well to make a note of this fact. Our people certainly do not want peaches that are unfit for the consumption of the Chicago people, and should be protected against them as the Chicagoans are. Our Board of Health should see to the matter, and if need be, appoint a competent inspector to examine every basket of fruit received from the section of the Fruit Belt which is afflicted with the yellows or any other disease that damages the fruit. This matter deserves and needs especial attention.

Sam Stickney, late of the Duke House, has taken unto himself a wife. So has Castello Hart. The wedding notices have not been received.

Rev. H. Morley having resigned as supply since the last of June will preach his final sermon in the Baptist church next Sunday morning. His text will be in 1 Cor. 16:13. Subject Faith and Duty.

Stick A Pin Here.

This is the way the money goes
Pop! goes the weasel.—Shakespeare.

Does the oldest inhabitant remember the time when the people were more free to spend or expend their money than they are at present? Crowded excursion trains every day—crowded with people who go to spend money and have a good time. Can they afford it? Undoubtedly they can, most of them, or they wouldn't go. They "didn't used to" when times were hard and money was close. Regular passenger trains full every day. This, at this season of the year, means that people are going off to visit old friends, for a few weeks—friends they haven't seen for many a year; or going to the sea shore or some other comfortable retreat where they can get their money's worth. Going and coming and coming and going all the time. There have been more visitors in Lowell from abroad this summer than during any other summer since we came here. More Lowell people have gone away this summer than have been away any other summer since we came here—except Centennial year. And it is fair to presume that what is true of Lowell is true of other towns. Then again more money has been expended for improved agricultural implements, twice over, this season than in any other season for many years. And there is more building this season than there has been for many years. And not only this and much more but better than this there is a general good feeling among all classes—a hopeful confident feeling that we are fast getting out of the mire upon solid ground—have already got there in fact. Every indication points that way certainly. We are on a safe and solid footing and it is the road of prosperity to the frugal and industrious. There are many individual burdens yet to be lifted, we know that, but a glance at the records in the County Register's office will show you that these burdens are being lifted very rapidly. A where few years ago five mortgages were entered one was discharged; to-day five mortgages are being discharged where one is entered. We are all glad to see better times. We have been waiting for them to return, some patiently some impatiently, and now that they are here let us remember the expensive lessons of the past and, in the language of the young philosopher, "go slow and learn to peddle." Don't try to bore a two-inch hole with a gimlet. Wait until you can get a two-inch auger and then bore away. That's the idea—stick a pin in it.

Some Young Men.

They spend too much money.
They smoke too many cigars.
They wear too many good clothes.
They make too many livery bills and too many store accounts.
They think they must live as high, and have as much of everything, and everything as good, as those who are older and can afford to live high and have everything they want.
There is where they make a mistake.
They can't afford to make such a mistake.
They can't light on the top round of the ladder the first jump.
But they think they ought to.
By and by they lose their grip.
By and by they lose their credit.
No money, no credit.
Then look out!
Young man, you are in a bad boat, then.
You are right where you must do one of two things—curtail—turn over a new leaf, or go to the dogs.
If you don't turn over a new leaf people will suspect you and ask "where does he get his money?"
For God's sake, and your own sake, and your friends' sake so live and act that you will not fear to tell how and where you get your money, or how you use it.
Young man, young men.
You who live up or beyond your income.
Live within your income.
If poor, keep your credit good—you can do that.
A poor man can't afford to be dishonest or without credit.
Salt down something every week!
How are you going to do it?
Smoke less, drive less, dress no better than your employers, don't buy what you don't need, be steady and reliable and keep a curb bit on until your habits and character are firmly established.
If you will do this ten years from now you will be men of influence and standing and can afford the luxuries your seniors are able to have and enjoy.
If you don't, ten years hence you will be worse off than you are now, with no credit, no influence, no money, no friends.
You will be one or the other—mind that.

The Governor's Sweetheart.

A correspondent at Charlotte furnishes a Chicago paper with a pleasant picture of the lady who is to become the Governor's wife. The correspondent writes:

"Miss Lizzie Musgrave is the name of the lady who, it is reported, is soon to marry Governor Croswell. Several of the Detroit papers have mentioned the engagement, but as yet have been unable to ascertain the name of the young lady.

Miss Musgrave is the youngest daughter of Hon. Joseph Musgrave, President of the First National Bank, and also a member of the firm of Musgrave & Lacey, grain and wool dealers, who represent large capital. She has four sisters—one the wife of Hon. E. S. Lacey, Cashier of the First national Bank; one the wife of P. R. Leiter, Postmaster, and one the wife of H. A. Lee, of Lansing. One other is unmarried.

It was while visiting her sister at Lansing that she became acquainted with the Governor, and the courtship has been principally carried on at that place, although he has visited her here. She is a lady of considerably more than ordinary attractions, highly educated and accomplished, purely refined and always conducting herself with a natural dignity, which was never oppressive but always insured the respect and admiration of all she met.

Miss Musgrave is 27 years of age, has a fair blooming complexion, dark hair and eyes, and perfect contour. Probably it is impossible for any lady to hold a higher place in the affections and esteem of a community than does Miss Musgrave here. The time of the wedding is not yet made public.

Teachers' Institute.

The State Teacher's institute for Kent County will be held at Grandville commencing at 2 o'clock P. M. Monday, August 25th and closing Friday following. Prof. N. H. Walbridge, Cedar Springs, Conductor, Dr. A. H. Weston, Grandville, Local Committee. Experienced educators will be present to give instruction at the day sessions, and evening lectures will be delivered as may be arranged. Every teacher in the county is earnestly requested to attend this institute. Township Superintendents and School Directors are requested to consider themselves personally invited to attend the Institute, and urged to use their influence to secure the attendance of teachers in their respective townships and districts.

Should the date of the Institute occur during the term of any schools, the school board are requested to have a vacation during the week of the Institute, that the teachers may attend.

Attendance upon Institutes is free, as the law providing for registration fees has been repealed.

Full particulars in regard to board, etc., may be obtained upon application to the Local committee.

All O. K.

Saturday's Eagle contains the following which will be of interest to a majority of our readers:

Our readers learned some time ago that Messrs. L. H. Randall, L. E. Hawkins and J. S. Farr, of this city, with three Colorado men, had taken a bond for the famous Bassick mine in Colorado, and had thus bought it. Since then little has been said about it, and many of our people had begun to believe that Messrs. Randall et al. had lost their investment, as several other Grand Rapids people have who have invested in mining stocks. But such is not the case. Though the gentlemen have been quiet, they have been busy, and at last have accomplished what they desired to. They have formed a stock company under the laws of the State of New York with non-assessment provisions, with a capital stock of $10,000,000, of which one-tenth or one million, is retained by Mr. Bassick, the original discoverer of the mine. The bulk of the balance is the property of the New York men who have paid, in cash, several times as much for it, to our townsmen and their partners, as was paid for the mine when bonded. The balance of the stock is owned by Randall et al., and it is no small slice, either. As the Bassick is already one of the richest mines in the country and its prospects are excellent for growing better, it will be seen that the gentlemen from here have made a good thing. It is expected that the mine will pay dividends of 1 per cent. per month, at once, and will do even better, later.

There don't begin to be bibles enough in Lowell to hold all the dust. We must have more bibles or less dust, or we shall begin to shout "overproduction" again.

"Eternal punishment?" Well, we can't stop to argue the question but will just remark that if we all live and do as we ought to there won't be enough of it to hurt anybody.

Leaning his arms upon the gold plated railing of our carved mahogany counter—the one we use for coarse work—he remarked—"Ah, I see Doc. is here." "Doc.—what Doc?" we incautiously inquired. Then he closed one eye, and stuck his fifteen cent cane out toward a late arrival of Congressional reports and said "Pub. Doc." And the only way we could get out of it was to look him square in the face and tell him "O Smarty, that was the Doc-u-ment was it?" He went away with a shade of sadness in his countenance, muttering to himself "that's worse than Eli Perkins ever dared to do."

The Sweet Singer of Michigan has been seized with another attack of vertigo and the Saturday Evening Post is the lucky recipient of an acrostic written by the author. Here it is in all its native loveliness:

ACROSTIC.

Just at the close of evening
Usted to sit a child alone,
Listening to the bird's sweet music
In the woodland near her home.
And ever she was thinking,
Always in a happy mood;
Musing how in the future,
On her way, she might do good.
On life's journey she is going:
Reaching forth a helping hand,
Ever ready to soothe the weary,
On a cheering word extend.
Forgetting not her path of duty,
Even though storms may rise.
Do not judge this lady harshly,
God will judge her when she dies.
Even now she is waiting,
Resting on the hope to come,
Trusting that in the future
On her name no stain may come—
Never still. Thy will be done.

It is our sad duty to announce the death of Mr. I. D. MORRIS, of this village, which occurred at his home early this morning. He died of congestive chills and was confined to to his room only a few days. Mr. Morris, "Uncle Daniel," as everybody called him, was a good man—everybody's friend. We shall all miss his cordial greeting and genial presence. For many years he has been poor in health, and yet always jovial in spirits. We believe "Uncle Daniel" is "up there."

The funeral is announced for Friday at 10 A. M. and will probably be held at the M. E. Church. His age was 65 years.

Further Extracts from his Great Speech in Maine.

The Fallacy of Greenbackism Thoroughly Ventilated.

I have thus stated my view of the successful execution of the resumption act, and of the beneficient results in the reduction of interest on the public debt and the general improvement of business.

Now let us examine the specific complaints of our fellow-citizens who have been hitherto opposed to resumption, and to the entire financial policy of the Republican party. First, they said resumption would have nothing but coin in circulation. This I have shown to be entirely delusive. The resumption act provided for no contraction of the currency, but United States notes were to be retired only as a greater amount of bank notes were issued. The only contraction that has occurred since the passage of the Resumption act has been by the voluntary withdrawal by National banks of a portion of their circulation, when they found it could not be profitably employed in business. Every act done under the Resumption act tended to increase rather than diminish circulation, and now that act this circulation is at par with gold, the coin itself becomes an important factor in the volume of circulation, and coin and currency are alike available for the transaction of business.

The amount of coin and currency in circulation on the 1st instant was as follows:

Gold coin	$186,681,015
Fractional currency	15,942,805
National currency	17,999,999
Bank deposits	229,618,027
Total	$710,195,846
Coin, estimated	$332,443,217

Showing an aggregate of $1,042,639,063, or $313,17 per inhabitant.

The amount of National bank notes has been actually increased since the 1st of January to the amount of $31,000,023, so that the result of resumption has been to increase instead of diminish the actual circulation.

GREENBACKS.

Again, they demand that the bonds should be paid in greenbacks. There was a question, upon which honest men fairly differed, whether the 5-20 bonds were not profitably payable in United States notes. They insisted that this should be done, though the payment of the bonds in greenbacks would have increased their issue, in violation of the limit of $400,000,000 prescribed by the loan laws, and would thus have kept United States notes in perpetual financial use in circulation; but now they have been so paid by resumption. All the 5-20 and 10-40 bonds redeemed this year, amounting to $537,676,550, have been paid in greenbacks, and the interest on all the bonds is paid in greenbacks, and all talk of repudiation or even any question of good faith with the public creditors.

They also demanded that the customs duties should be paid in greenbacks. This is now daily done, without question, as the result of resumption.

We receive United States notes for all purposes and all demands, and pay them out for all purposes and all demands. Resumption has enabled us to do this. It has accomplished every object which the Greenbackers sought to accomplish by the repeal of the resumption act. Should they not be content? What more do they want? Are not we who have brought about these results better entitled to the name of Greenbackers than they who would forever keep the greenback a dishonored and irredeemable note? We propose over the birth of the greenback, and, regarded as the child of the law, democratic leaders denounced them as a fraud, while the mark of Cain on their brow, as worthless, to be bought some day by the cord. We have crowned them with honor. They are no longer depreciated, but may travel the circuit of the world proud in the best coin ever issued from the mint.

GREENBACK POLICY.

The policy of the modern Greenbacker is to depreciate the greenback, to destroy its purchasing power, to make it depend, not upon the intrinsic value of the coin into which it can be converted, but upon some imaginary change given by law. The people of Maine will have to choose between those Greenbackers who strictly preserve the national faith, seek to maintain the prosperity of the country, and those who, with utter disregard of the public faith, wish to restore the old state of affairs, when the greenback could only be passed at a discount, and could neither be received for customs duties nor be paid upon the public debt. They would revive the old distinction between the bondholder and the noteholder, when a 100 cent gold dollar was worth 100 greenbacks and an 80 cent irredeemable note was the pay of the laborer. We would have one money for all, and the poor money, each dollar of which will buy 100 cents' worth of food and clothing.

One would suppose, fellow citizens, that our Greenback friends, from the their prophecies had been proven to be false alarms, after we have secured and enjoyed for a brief period the blessings of a sound currency, redeemable in coin, would be content. It is well enough alone, but, dropping the Resumption act, they come to the front with a new set of dogmas, and invite us them a contest with the Republican party.

The first clause of the Maine platform is as follows: The convention congratulates the people of Maine that the increase of our material prosperity, evidence of the Government in time of profound peace from $1,100,000,000 in 1865, to $2,000,000,000 in 1873, is a fact so startling as to alarm every friend of the country; that the reduction of the rate of onto interest and at the same time increase of the revenue, by such an amount as to vastly increase the coin interest continually, under the pretext of economy by the reduction of the rate of interest, is such a fraud upon the people as to merit the most severe condemnation.

Now, this is a curious medley of deceptive statements, the purpose of which would seem to be to show that the public debt was increased in a profound peace from $1,100,000,000 in 1865, to $2,000,000,000 in 1873, in truth and in fact, the interest bearing debt, in 1867, was $2,381,000,224.96, and now that the refunding operation is completed, it is $1,797,645,445.200. It is true that the debt in 1865, is, and all payable in coin; $217,924,100 was in the form of compound interest notes, bearing 6 per cent compound interest, and $600,000,000 was payable in Treasury notes bearing currency interest at the rate of 7 3-10 per cent; but the latter, having matured, was converted eleven years ago into 6 per cent. coin bonds, a decrease of the rate of interest of 1 3-10 per cent. In fact, the interest bearing debt has been reduced since 1865 in the sum of $583,886,504.96, and the annual interest charge on this debt has been reduced from $150,977,094.87 to $85,713,778.50.

The statement as made would be absolutely false, but for the equivocation upon the words "coin interest." Now all our interest, though nominally payable in coin, is in fact payable in United States notes. Our friends have neglected, or hardly ever, make their statement technically true, but really false, for the interest-bearing debt has been reduced near $600,000,000, and the yearly interest $67,000,000.

Exactly how our greenback friends can say that the reduction of the rate of interest under the pretext of economy "is such a fraud upon the people as to merit the most severe condemnation," is past finding out. The truth is that the intelligent commercial world, except only the Greenbackers, has been from time to time, and wonder at the remarkable success of the Government of the United States in the reduction of its debt and interest. No nation in the world, in ancient or in modern times, has ever made so rapid or greatly reduced the immense burden of debt imposed upon us at the close of the war as we have; so that now the debt per capita is less than it was at the time we paid the interest in the public debt.

But they say that this administration has increased the interest bearing debt, and we point to the reduction of debt statement for proof. I have already explained how this was temporarily done in the process of refunding the debt. But on the debt statements published, the 5-20 bonds will have disappear or cease to bear interest; so that our opponents, if they will not hereafter be misled by the operation nor be able to mislead others.

COIN OR NOTES.

Again, they resolve as follows: "That we favor the unlimited coinage of gold and silver, to be supplemented in full legal tender paper money sufficient to transact the business of the country." We have now unlimited coinage of gold, and there is but little, if any, objection to an unlimited coinage of silver at its market value. To the resolution, "I'l was not for the interest of commerce generally, that the Government should be the whole of our commercial transactions should be based upon an aggregate of silver and gold bullion, rather than that it should rest only upon gold." I am in view of the facts by Hamilton and Jefferson. But to secure such a basis the coinage of silver must be the market ratio. Free coinage of silver at the ratio of sixteen to one means the single standard of silver. What subject to is the coinage of a silver dollar worth only eighty-eight cents, and which thus will demonetize gold and leave us only silver as the basis of our coinage. Silver could not been the foot-ball of demagogues until they open the discovery to repudiation that the Republican party is opposed to the coinage of silver, while it was the Republican party, and the resumption act itself, that provided for the coinage of silver dollars, which is a fact current use in place of the fractional currency, and that nearly every one is coin it without limit at its market ratio while the Greenback element wishes to coin a silver dollar worth only one average eight-five cents, and at a time to change the law impair contracts and to banish gold. Such proposition is opposed to the acknowledged by all the world beside, that the law of trade silver has been precisely in comparative value with gold, and that the silver dollar of twenty-four years ago, when compared with fifteen per cent. less, compared with the silver dollar of to-day. We have tried the experiment of coining the silver dollar at a ratio so disproportional in 1873, and have coined $35,800,000. Every effort has been made to put it in circulation, and yet it is now in the hands of persons, but the Treasury Department holds over $9,000,000 of the issue of which $6,518,912 have been since returned to the Treasury, the sensible course to be pursued with the counterfeiting so successfully that scarcely any less happens in this way. Compared with the old system of State banks, they are in every respect superior, and no sensible man would exchange the National system for the State bank system.

These banks are free, are organized under general law open to all alike; so that the business of banking is as free as that of blacksmithing. There is no monopoly in it, except that only men having money can bank precisely as only those can farm who have money or rent land. These banks are chartered for twenty years, and the earliest to expire will be in 1882; so that the question of their discontinuance cannot honestly be determined until then. They are required to pay greenbacks for bank notes, if seriously attempted, would make such a stringency in money and such a disturbance in business, that in comparison with the panic of 1873 would be a shower to a hurricane. The withdrawal of the circulating notes from the banks would, necessary, compel the sale of the bonds deposited to secure security, and this would unquestionably lead to the collection of loans and discounts, which would affect every village and hamlet in the land.

It is objected to the National banks that they draw interest on the United States bonds held to secure their notes, also on the circulating notes issued by them. As to the bonds held by them, they are the property of the stockholders, and not the property of the Government. We require them as security to the holder of the notes because it is best security, and it goes out of existence the interest of the bonds will still have to be paid by the Government. As to the circulating notes, a part of them must be held in reserve and a part loaned in business men; but for this privilege, open to all alike, they have paid to the National and State Governments as high as averaging $16,000,181 a year for the use of the notes, a sum greater by 50 per cent. of the entire amount of their circulating notes. If the tax is not sufficient you can increase it. But, it is said, the Government might issue greenbacks and loan them to the people at cost. In doing so, however, it would be forced to take back the notes of the banks; it would violate the public faith, pledged in an express provision of the law creating the public debt, that the amount of United States notes shall not exceed $400,000,000; it would make necessary a larger issue of greenbacks, depreciate the increased amount of United States notes, and would eventually lead to the abandonment of all the old gold standard, and again launch the country on the sea of irredeemable money, with the inevitable result of wide spread ruin, panic, and bankruptcy. So the fear of the shrewd, sagacious people of Maine can not see that by yielding to such demands they would violate the public faith and specie resumption act, open the sluiceway to repudiation and Communism? Let us in due time, as their charters expire, deal with these National banks, and meet the wants of the public interest, preserving always the public faith and the credit of the country.

A FIXED VOLUME OF CURRENCY.

This platform says: "The volume of currency should not vary to the chance of production of the precious metals or the caprice of corporations." I think dogma is as false as it is bad in face. Money is only needed to buy products, and the quantity, value and demand for productions create a demand for money, or less money in precise proportion to their amount. A fixed volume of paper money is what we have had, and what we have complained of, and of the chief merits of the system of free banking is that it gives an opportunity for the ebb and flow of money, the increase or diminution of the volume depending, not upon the caprice of corporations, but upon the demand and necessity for currency. In this respect National bank notes have greatly the advantage of paper money issued by the Government, which can only be paid out according to the wants and necessities of the Government in the conduct of public business. The true doctrine is, that a volume of paper money, always redeemable in coin and receivable for paper by ample reserves, increasing and diminishing according to the demands of business, should be provided by the General Government under general laws, free and open to all alike. Our present system, consisting of gold and silver coin equal to one dollar, and United States notes and bank notes, always redeemable, comes nearer the ideal form of money than has ever heretofore been devised by man.

Entertaining Angels Unawares.

Two "drummers" sat in front of a hotel Wednesday night, watching the promenaders. Among came by and Kate "togged out" in silks and ribbons, and two feminine angels were seated on the two observers. A dangerous game for the girls but it was sufficient to captivate the men. The two travelers agreed to let the hack and mantered down the avenue with the darlings. Then a personal history was confided, and the girls told the men their friends were informed that of course (any one can never tell) has said, really one of the charmers was the daughter of the president of the First National Bank and the other was an Elkhart banker's child. The two travelers agreed to let the hack go and struck something immense. They had taken a young lady to a dance house at one bold stroke. Highly-colored stories of their private carriage, their diamond jewelry, their business interests and the damsels into the hack and drove off. Finally the quartette brought up at Hunter's and the young lady left, leaving the gentlemen there one of the girls begged to be taken home as she had to practice on the piano before retiring. The men resumed their traveling and after an almost endless wandering brought up at a well appearing dwelling on a side street, and escorted their disappointments made, and then for the first time the two suckers got an inkling of the game they had played, and the girls' daughters entered their luxuriant homes by the back door. Yesterday morning the disgusted sample men left town anxiously inquiring about their evening friends, of such wealth and position in society, and at the very last moment, they had cooled sidout of town. They couldn't stand the racket the boys gave them.—Cold-water Republican.

THE RAPIDITY at which the government lands are being taken up in the West for farming purposes is gratifying. As many as 14,000,000 acres of land have been taken up in the United States during the single year of 1873, and the amount taken up has been proportionately never before known in history. It had amounted in 1872 to nearly half a million of people. A dispatch from Washington, shows that the sale of new lands still goes on on a large scale, and six million acres have been disposed of in the year ending June 30, 1874, to homestead entries alone, showing that there has been no falling off this year. All the first-class government land in Michigan has been sold or homesteaded for some time, but there is still a considerable amount of desirable farming land in the hands of railroad companies and private parties, which can be bought quite cheap, cheaper we believe than the public lands in the West.

The reason why life insurance is in its present condition is not so much because of the depressed state of business throughout the country—for distress should recommend insurance, not check it—but it is because of the gross deception practiced by some companies upon the community, the willful mismanagement of trust funds, the deceptive statements made for the purpose of concealment and the offering of pernicious and seductive plans of insurance.—Philadelphia Press.

The Ohio Idea.

From the New York World [Dem.]

Gen. Ewing surely ought to know that no adjustment of our "dollar" can harmonize the selfish interests of debtors and creditors alike. He cannot mean that the nation shall make and give away, without price, any kind of dollars; yet that is really what lies at the core of the "idea of Ohio," if it has any core. What better starting point and perpetual standard of a "dollar" can we have than our existing gold dollar in association with an equivalent silver dollar? It matters not which has the precedence if both are alike. They are both Democratic dollars. They are both the dollars of Jefferson and of Jackson. They are the inevitable dollars of the future. With the growing employment of bank-checks very few government dollars will be needed or used, but all the dollars we have must be good dollars.

The Iron Boom.

From The Chicago Tribune.

When it is said that "Furnaces that have been idle for years are being put in blast," that "rolling mills are running night and day," that "that there is a rapid advance in prices of iron," that "every manufacturer of railroad supplies has more orders than he can fill," and, finally, that the "boom" is so pronounced that "all the mills have sent out circulars advancing prices"—when these are found to be the conditions of the iron market and the iron industry, a decided improvement in every department of labor and trade may be expected soon to follow. It is quite impossible that the iron workers should prosper without stimulating every other industry and promoting the healthful growth of every department of trade. And there is good reason to believe that this result has been already attained.

The Wheat Crop and the Wheat Trade.

The following very interesting and instructive article is taken from the Michigan Farmer of last week:

We have been looking over the reports of the wheat crop and the wants and supplies of the several countries which are concerned most in the wheat trade, and we will try to sum up what has been published in as clear and succinct a form as possible.

We notice that the Agricultural Department Report for July 1, which has lately been issued, and agrees with us that the crop is of a higher quality than the crop of 1878, states that this year there will be a surplus of wheat for export after supplying our own necessities of 160 millions to 175 millions of bushels. That the West Indies, South and Central America, the British North American colonies and the East Indies will take about ten to fifteen millions of bushels, leaving a balance for the supply of European wants of 140 millions of bushels. Meanwhile there is left over from the crop of last year, a large amount of surplus wheat which may be reckoned equal to twenty-five millions of bushels that has to be added to the surplus of this year. If this statement approximates the actual condition of the wheat country, we have on hand a surplus of wheat equal to the whole estimated consumption of Great Britain, including her own product and the foreign supply of one year! or an amount somewhere between 180 millions and 200 millions of bushels. This is the condition in which the wheat trade enters upon the wheat year of 1879 and 1880, which commences with the first of September.

It is estimated, as we have published in a former Farmer, that the whole wants of the wheat-consuming countries of Europe will be equal to 280 millions, and of this the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland will require 140 millions of bushels. What proportion of this amount will the United States be called upon to furnish is one of the great questions of the day in commercial circles. Upon the answer to this question depends the important one of higher or lower prices. It is one of the most important to the farmers of the great northwest, and in fact to every farmer in the wheat-growing States.

One of the countries which furnishes to Europe the largest proportion of the supplies required of is Russia. That vast area stretching from the Danube and the northern shores of the Black Sea to the Baltic, and to the latitude of Moscow, furnishes a surplus of wheat, when there is a favorable season for its growth, that reaches almost as much as that of the United States. This season the accounts that have reached us from all that vast region watered by the Don and Volga Rivers, indicate a more than usually large crop, which almost signifies that France will be supplied with all the wheat she needs from the source and that Germany will have her necessities largely met by the more northern portions of Europe including Russian Poland, which are now in connection with the Baltic parts by railroads.

We find that in the years 1876-7, 1877-8 and 1878-9, during ten months, Great Britain was supplied with wheat from the following countries besides the United States: Russia, Germany, France, Turkey, Egypt, Chili, British India, Australia and British North America. Russia in 1876-7 furnished about one-third, in 1877-8 one-third, and in 1878-9 one half of the wheat furnished by countries other than the United States. The coming year, having not only to furnish her own quota, but also that of those countries which have heretofore supplied it. Whenever Russia is not able to perform that work then comes the opening for the United States. In fact for the past three years her supplies have been very regular, so far as Great Britain is concerned, as the following table shows:

	Bushels.
1876-7	7,600,000
1877-8	11,600,000
1878-9	16,200,000

These figures represent for ten months of 1876-77 and 1877-8, just about one-third of the foreign wheat supplied by all other countries, not including the United States. For 1878 9 for the same ten months ending June 30, 1879, Russian wheat represents one half what other foreign countries supplied. While Russian wheat did not increase in its proportionate supply to Great Britain, it is well known it entered largely into the supply of those countries on the Continent which were short of a crop. It is generally known now by mail advices to the 21st of July, that the harvest reports from South Russia are satisfactory, and promise a full export surplus. This being so we may regard her supply as making up just what will be needed on the Continent, and as leaving the American crop to supply the wants of Great Britain, which for the next year will just about use up our 140 millions of surplus.
