'Praise and Appraise Your Schools' Visit School During Education Week

Will you visit your child's school during American Education Week, November 8-14?

The Michigan Education Association reveals that 26 million adults visited their schools throughout the nation during AEW in 1958. In Michigan, 70,000 teachers and 1.6 million students have extended this invitation to everyone: "Won't You Come to our School?"

This year's theme is "Praise and Appraise Your Schools."

Formed in 1921, American Education Week grew out of the revelation that a shocking percentage of American people were illiterate and physically unfit. Representatives of the National Education Association and the American Legion established a plan for "securing for America a program of education adequate to meet the needs of the 20th century, and which will give every boy and girl that training and equipment which is rightfully his under our democratic government."

From 1922 on, the observance has been co-sponsored by the U. S. Office of Education, and in 1938 the National Congress of Parents and Teachers became the fourth national sponsor.

The basic purpose of American Education Week is to make every American aware of the important role education plays in democracy... and to help him realize that good schools are his personal responsibility.

The purposes of American Education Week are to increase public understanding and appreciation of education; to explain the modern school—today's curriculum, current teaching methods and materials; to increase pupil appreciation of their school; to reveal school problems and needs; to strengthen the bonds of cooperation between school and community.

"American Education Week is an opportunity extended to educators and laymen to work together in common cause for the benefit of the children of this nation, and of the nation itself," says Dr. E. Dale Kennedy, MEA executive secretary.

"Public education is a shared responsibility between those who serve in the schools and those who make the school program possible through support by taxation and contributions of services. Taxation is not limited to those outside the profession, for all of us contribute through our taxes to the development of the schools of this country.

"This, then, is a joint responsibility which we have an opportunity to review and appraise during American Education Week, 1959."

President Eisenhower has officially proclaimed the period from November 8 to 14, 1959, American Education Week.

"Let us display to the world and to ourselves our pride in this primary instrument of democracy—public education—complimented by private education, which is supported by the willing sacrifices of each citizen and which benefits all," the President said.

Your Help Will Save 100

There is a grim probability that 500 persons will die on our Michigan highways between now and January 1. Among them would be 65 children under 14, 70 older teenage boys, 20 older teenage girls. They would average out about 60 mothers and about 155 fathers, 85 nice old grandmas and granddads, and 45 others of no special classification.

They are all walking around now doing the things they always do, walking and driving. The people who will contribute in some way to their death are also going about their daily rounds, building the chain of attitudes, experiences and habits that will climax in this one fatal experience.

Can't we get through to some of these people somehow before the point of no return? Couldn't we somehow re-invigorate our channels of communications—gently nudge some, jolt others, out of the way in time? Do we have to have them all die?

Could we get through the thought barrier to even one out of five? Could we save 100? Thirteen bright-eyed kids, eighteen young people, the hope of the future, forty-three mothers and dads, the backbone of the nation and seventeen matured people who should be allowed to enjoy the balance of their lives in peace.

Can we do it? Will you try?

Retarded Reading Skill Leads To School and Home Problems

Continuation of Discussion on Reading

From our discussion on the development of the reading skill, we find that it is far more complex problem than we first realized. Those who are retarded in their reading development face an almost impossible job in learning the subject matter of the Junior High and Senior High School classes. Experience shows those most retarded become behavior problems and quit as soon as they are legally of age. While this simplifies the class room problem, it is not a solution. Research into this area reveals that these students make up the bulk of the unemployed and comprise the majority of the inmates of our prisons. In addition, they are fertile ground for all of the half-baked "ism" ideas that come down the pike.

The students less seriously handicapped struggle manfully to keep their heads above water. From a survey of the results of the testing that we do in the Junior and Senior High school, we find approximately 30 percent of our students reading below expectations. Often these are some of our most capable students, students who could make tremendous contributions to society as Doctors, Lawyers, Scientists, etc. but who will miss because of their reading handicap. These are the ones the colleges are talking about when they state too many incoming freshmen are improperly trained.

Thus, a student who falls behind at the start of his reading development is doomed to go through life working and earning at a level less than he or she should.

Now, what is necessary for an adequate reading program? Here we will consider those features within the scope of a school.

First—a complete testing program beginning with a Reading Readiness test in Kindergarten and extending through grade 12.

Second—a person skilled in the administration and interpretation of the test results who also knows educational methods so he can help the teacher with the reading handicapped.

Third—in each room there must be a collection of materials graded to various reading levels. This will enable the better students to be challenged and the slower students will be helped as they will have materials they can read.

Fourth—a teacher with time to do some reading improvement work. This teacher would work with individuals and small groups on the particular reading problem of the individuals. Then, as the students reached Junior and Senior High, the teachers could concentrate more on the subject content and less on remedial work.

Fifth—some of the latest machines developed to improve the skills of the average and good readers, such as

- Reading acceleration, a scanner.
- Film strips on reading skills.
- Films for acceleration.
- Tachistoscopes to teach phrase and clause recognition.

Sixth—an adequate library of graded materials to use with the various reading levels. At present, we have less than one fifth the number of reference texts required for North Central Membership.

If one would visit the various class rooms in the district, he would find a better than average teacher, a room too full of bright youngsters, text books, and a few reference materials. Not one of our Elementary schools has anywhere near enough reference material in any class room. Not one of our Elementary schools has more than a token library. Visual aids, film strips, etc., are practically nonexistent. In the Junior and Senior High School, the situation is comparable. Our library has only one-fifth the number of books required for membership in North Central. There isn't enough dictionaries to have one in a class room. The reference books found in most of the rooms belong to the teachers. Why the dearth? The answer is somewhat clear. Time and Money. The average school system has accumulated books and references over a period of years. We would have to spend a comparable amount in one or two years to catch up.

To state specifically what books, what model machines; how many hours of reading improvement teaching are needed at this time would be somewhat foolish as new books, materials, machines are constantly appearing every day. Prices vary—on some items we would need to require bids.

However, we do know this!! It costs more to keep a person in a corrective institution or jail per year than it does in school. The latest figures we remember are over $2,000 a year for institutions and slightly over $200 a year to keep him in school. At present, Michigan is spending as much for mental institutions and prisons (counting all types) as we are for schools. If a few dollars were added to the reading improvement program, we would have to save only a few students a year to return our investment ten-fold. In short, if we do not adequately educate youth, we will pay more for mental and corrective and unemployment compensation.

In all sincerity, Forest Hills is a better school than the average because we have a better than average faculty, dedicated to their profession. Working together, we will continue to build a finer Forest Hills.

PROGRESS?

In 1907, a traffic study conducted in New York City showed that horsedrawn vehicles moved at an average of 11.5 miles per hour through city streets. Today, in congested downtown areas of many cities, including New York, the average motor traffic speed has been clocked as low as 6 miles per hour.

MICHIGAN QUIZDOWN SERIES prepared by MICHIGAN TOURIST COUNCIL No. 18

"Aboard The Heather" by Theresa Collins

When we studied the charts before leaving Biloxi, a large proportion of the Gulf ahead of us was marked "Prohibited Area". Commercial vessels could proceed on their courses, others should be ready to leave if asked. Now that we have reached Panama City and look back, it seems that the chief industry of that whole area is the armed forces. There are schools and bases and of course the largest of all at Pensacola. Jets are overhead a lot. They shoot at targets too, which sounds odd on the water. Our twins were fascinated by some army ducks, and saw them a number of times. One broke down on the highway at Biloxi, while the others went zipping on. We also saw them rolling over sandy beaches. And we saw some soldiers fishing from one. It is strange to see one "swimming."

We had a warm sunny day when we left Biloxi for Dauphin Island. Part of the Waterway is quite narrow, but Mobile Bay is more like Grand Traverse Bay, and we were glad of good weather and quiet seas. We approached our destination on the far side of the island by late afternoon. The channel was marked but we knew was shallow. We proceeded very slowly until we dared go no farther, and sent David ahead in the dinghy to sound the Channel and find out if we could get in. He was gone a long time, and it seemed even longer as the sun dropped to and below the horizon. Then a fishing boat came in, and as they passed us we learned that we could not possibly get into that harbor. The channel was always filling up, and we should go way around yonder light and come into a new harbor next to that radar dome we could see. We went back to deeper water and tried that. Now it was really dark. Soon we touched bottom again gently. So again we anchored while David and Mrs. Lunan got into the dinghy and headed for shore. They found some men and asked if there was anyone who could pilot us into the harbor, and there was, "the crash boat." These people were having dinner, but left their meal, came out to our boat, and led the way in. We were glad to be in a snug harbor and have a late dinner. During the night a blow came up. The water in the harbor was absolutely quiet, but the wind pushed at the masts and whistled through the rigging, making us very thankful to be comfortably resting in our bunks.

Next morning we got the mariners weather report. Small craft warnings were up, it was to be clear with a wind of 20-30 m. p. h. from the right direction for us. So we took off, reefed way down. We had a wonderful sail across Mobile Bay, but when we were across and came into the canal it was a novel experience which we loved, sailing with a good wind on absolutely calm water. We sailed or motored through bays and sounds and rivers, and dropped anchor in a deep spot just off the channel. It was a beautiful secluded spot. We took the dinghy and rowed ashore. The twins built revetments along a small stream of strong black tea colored water flowing into the bay. We were in Florida and we hadn't gone aground once all the way!

Next day we went on toward Pensacola. The channel was very narrow. We watched jets, saw an aircraft carrier, saw the old forts that controlled the harbor on both sides of the entrance to what Glenn dubbed Pepsi Cola Bay. We motored across the bay, then down Santa Rosa Sound. We'd had no trouble with bridges before, but here near Navarre was a bridge under construction which looked quite high, but not high enough. We were stuck. The central part was in place. Even though it was Sunday a small tug came by. We asked them how much water they drew, and would they find out if there was sufficient water if we should leave the channel, go a hundred yards or so south to an uncompleted section where the bridge was not yet in place, and get past there. There was. We got by, and wondered why a fixed bridge would be placed there, thus preventing really heavy equipment from coming in to work on all those cays (called Keys) where all those fortifications were installed. It was an interesting day and we made Fort Walton Beach by late afternoon, and stopped at a nice marina. Here we had a shock.

Before leaving New Orleans the Skipper had laid in a supply of new charts, printed September 10. The "bridge under construction" was marked just that. Not that when finished it would have a clearance of only 50 ft. Now we were told there was a bridge ahead of us at Destin with a clearance of only 38 ft. Was this true or not. We decided not to risk it, and possibly be bottled up by that new bridge should they put in just a few more girders. We decided to get an early start and go back 48 miles to Pensacola.

We left by dawn, motoring. Yesterday we had a nice sailing wind, and we had felt so lucky. By 8:30 it came up again. It was beautiful sailing past all those lovely beach houses, with lawns sloping down to the water. We had seen nothing like this anywhere else, and enjoyed it. It was a beautiful day and the wind was firm, so we decided to go out the pass into the Gulf and sail to Panama City. This turned out to be a wise move. The sailing was wonderful. There was quite a sea too, very much like Lake Michigan can kick up. Night came. Before dark Skipper hauled down the mainsail, as he did not want to have to do that in the dark. We kept trying to figure where we were first from the lights then when we dropped them, by the sky glow over the cities and towns. As we approached Panama

City, near which is an air base, there were more lights than ever, marking various installations in the water. Skipper said it was like finding his way into the harbor through a Christmas tree.

It was a beautiful night for sailing, so clear, and we watched the constellations move in their courses as the night passed. The really new aspect of absorbing interest was the glow in the broken water at the bow and in the wake, which they used to tell us was phosphorescence, but which we now are told is caused by microscopic marine animals. It really is beautiful to see the breaking water at the bow glow with a soft blue white light. Sometimes there seem to be bubbles. We were delighted when a wave would break against the side of the boat throwing water into the waterway with bubbles sparkling and squirming in it, before it would run out the snippers. But the action of the boat below was uneasy. We were supposed to take turns sleeping and being in the cockpit. Most likely it was the unusualness, but no one slept very long. We really enjoyed the sail. Even Kevin woke up and came into the cockpit and enjoyed the night and the sail for an hour.

But it ended. Suddenly out of the darkness there was a sailboat ahead of us. We followed it through the channel into the harbor, and dropped the anchor, just as dawn was breaking. Our first 24 hour run, and a wonderful one.

We loved Panama City. They were so very nice to us at the beautiful new municipal dock. And the paper carried our strip, Kevin the Bold." Everyone here was so unusually friendly and helpful, that we really enjoyed the several days we stayed there, in spite of the fact it rained most of the time. Most of us tried a hand at fishing. Both Kevin and Glenn hooked a big bonita, which fortunately got away. Their fishing gear could not have landed them.

However we decided to move on toward Appalachicola. It was a late start for the motor did not want to run properly. After fussing with one thing and another, some new spark plugs did the trick, and we went on, sometimes motoring, sometimes sailing. Now we got into different looking channels. The water was like black coffee, the channel suggested a creek or small river that had been widened. We came through piney woods territory, marshes, cypress swamp and lakes, bayous. Different all the time. We anchored near a Corps of Engineers boat which was working, at removing stumps from the edge of the channel. How it rained!

Today is Saturday. We had more of the same kind of travel, including going through "impenetrable swamp." Now we are at Appalachicola, where this will be mailed. We are planning a Halloween party for tonight. Hope you have fun too.

Forest Hills to End Varsity Season; Play Fennville at East Field Friday

The Forest Hills Rangers will conclude their first varsity football season Friday night with a contest against undefeated Fennville at East Grand Rapids Memorial Field.

Fennville is undefeated over a two year span, and have a string of 15 straight victories. They have won the AL-VAN League Championship two consecutive years.

Fennville is paced by two speedsters in the backfield, Gene Luna and Joe Bedes, both of whom have scored several touchdowns this year on long runs. They are aided by two strong tackles, John Damaskas, 205 lbs., and Stan Nowak, 190 lbs.

They also have a good pass receiving end in Dave Turner. Quarterback, Ted Strand, a left-handed passer, has thrown several touchdown passes with Turner his favorite receiver.

Coach Edward Shy and his assistants Bernard Van Ark and Henry Dole are priming their boys for an upset victory. Coach Shy is shifting his defensive alignment this week in an attempt to stop the high scoring Fennville team.

Fennville's latest victim was Lawrence by a 44-13 score. Earlier in the season Fennville scored 70 points against Bloomingdale.

The game will start at 7:30.

Lose to Byron Center

The Forest Hills Rangers lost another close game Friday night to Byron Center by a 14-6 score. This is the third game of the season lost by one touchdown. The halftime score was 0-0. The Rangers had two opportunities in the first half to score touchdowns, but failed to score after advancing inside the ten yard line.

The game was played in adverse conditions. The field was a sea of mud because of a steady rain that came down throughout the game.

Byron Center scored a touchdown in both the third and fourth quarters. The Rangers scored their lone touchdown in the fourth quarter on a pass from Stiles to Paauwe.

Ranger Reserves Win

The Ranger Reserve team exploded for 5 touchdowns against Rogers last Thursday night to win 33-13. Wilcox scored two touchdowns, and Gager, Oatman, and Hardesty each scored one in the out. Perrin, Dodde and Stiles stood out defensively for the Rangers.

It was the second win of the season for the Reserves against three losses and one tie. The Reserves finish the season Thursday afternoon in a game at Byron Center starting at 4:00 p. m.

Ada 4-H Leader Honored Thursday By Fellow Leaders

Two Michigan 4-H Club extension agents were honored for outstanding work with youth by their fellow extension agents during the annual conference of the Michigan Cooperative Extension Service. The meeting ended Thursday afternoon (Oct. 29) on the Michigan State University campus.

Honored were 4-H Extension Agents Ralph E. Kirch, Kent county, and Robert R. Dancer, Ionia county. Distinguished service awards were presented by the Michigan 4-H Club agents' association.

Kirch, of Ada, currently on study leave on a National 4-H Fellowship, received recognition for his leadership in the Kent county program which includes over 3,500 4-H members and more than 500 adult volunteer leaders. He also has been instrumental in developing two 4-H panorama programs in Grand Rapids to focus attention on 4-H work. Kirch first joined the extension service in 1950 as Branch county 4-H agent. He moved to Kent county in 1953.

Dancer's citation called attention to the career exploration program he has developed in Ionia county 4-H work and to his effective involvement of local people in guiding the 4-H program. Leadership training complimented by delegation of responsibility to local leaders was another important part of Dancer's outstanding work, the citation said.

Dancer has been Ionia 4-H agent for 11 years. He has also served one summer in Jackson county as a 4-H assistant.

Both Kirch and Dancer have held officer posts in the state 4-H agents association.
