Letter to Editor Grand Rapids Township Voters All Can Vote On Annexation to Grand Rapids City, Dec. 7

ATTENTION, GRAND RAPIDS TOWNSHIP VOTERS IN THE FOREST HILLS AND NORTH PARK AREAS

In order for you to keep your fire Protection and your lower insurance rate you must get out and vote NO on annexation December 8. Even though the Forest Hills and North Park areas in Grand Rapids Township are not in the area which is to be annexed to the city your votes will count collectively with the city's and other townships. If the people of the city realize how much more taxes are going to be for them also, they will vote it down and your vote with theirs could stop this unorthodox way of annexation. If the annexation does go through it will take both of our township fire stations and modern equipment with it.

One big article alone which would raise taxes is that 25 percent of the cost of the new highways going through the townships if it becomes part of the city would have to be paid. If it re-with Nick Duiven and Bill Crawford close behind with 9 each. Bob Weaver led Caledonia to victory with 18 points.

Ideas Abound In New Hose

Hosiery from Cary's of course, is a practical Christmas gift. You'll realize it can be glamorous, too, when you see the wonderful new textures, dashing colors and intriguing designs. All in all, you'll find many gift ideas in hosiery departments.

School-girls will love a big batch of the smartly ribbed, checked or tweed sports stockings in knee or above-the-knee length. They are not only very attractive, but wonderfully protective against cold weather. So are pretty tights—complete leotard or separate stockings.

Formal dress sheers make a perfect gift package and every woman enjoys an extra stock of daytime hosiery.

For those who dare something different, select the new diamond textures, novelty embroidered lace or rhinestone decorated stockings.

Buy Iodized Salt Health Dept. Says

Always buy iodized salt! So recommends the Michigan Department of Health, which says a recent survey shows the percentage of housewives who buy goiter-preventing iodized salt has been declining recently.

Both iodized and non-iodized types of table salt are available in most Michigan stores. The state health department is interested in seeing that people understand the important health advantages of iodized salt so they will seek it out in the stores and buy it.

"Before Michigan started its iodized salt and goiter control program in 1923, almost half the boys and girls in this state had goiter," said Dr. Albert E. Heustis. "The rate was also high in adults."

"After iodized salt became available, the goiter rate dropped to about 1 in 100. We want to keep it that low or even lower it."

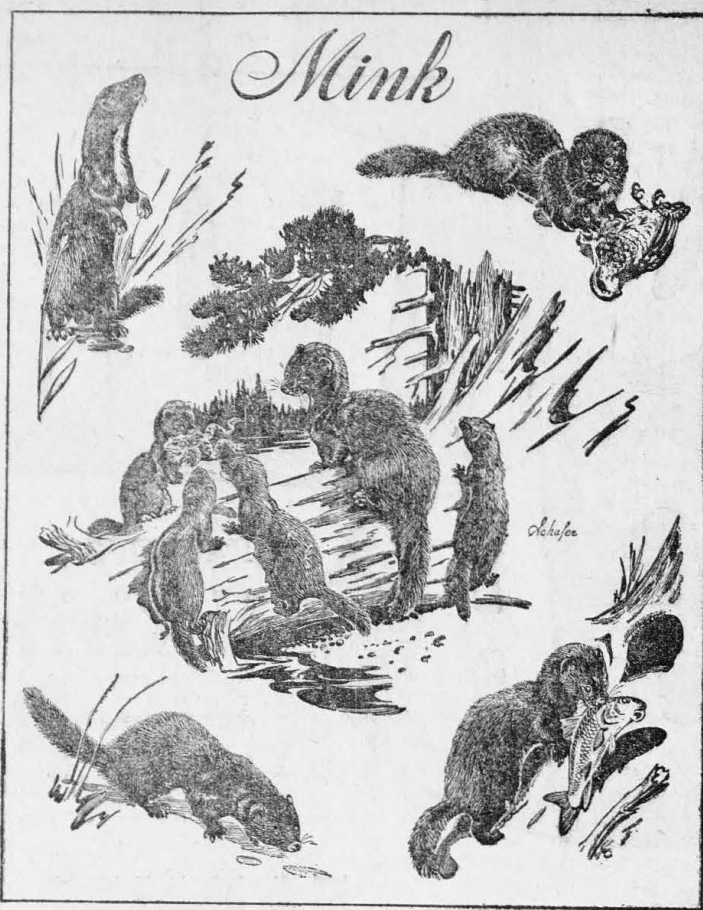

Goiter is caused by a deficiency of iodine in the diet. This deficiency causes the thyroid gland to enlarge into what doctors call a "simple" goiter. Before iodized salt, Michigan diets usually were deficient in iodine because this health essential doesn't occur naturally in the soil or water in Michigan, or in any other state in the Great Lakes area.

"We can keep our goiter rate low if we make sure we get our daily requirement of iodine," Dr. Heustis said. "Whenever you buy salt, look for the word 'iodized' on the label. If you don't find iodized salt on the shelves, ask your grocer for it. Make 'iodized' a 'buy word' in your family."

They call themselves opera lovers, music lovers, wine lovers, book lovers, bird lovers, dog lovers, and art lovers, but they would smirk if a man called himself a beer lover, a TV lover, a bowling lover, or a steak-and-kidney-pie lover.

A kind and unsolicited word from an unknown friend has kept many a talented person from calling it quits.

Jack of All Trades

His fame as one of North America's most valuable fur bearers has long overshadowed the mink's versatility. Whether he is swimming, climbing, digging or hunting, this crafty member of the weasel family does a creditable job. His all-around agility is as valuable for warding off or escaping the enemy as it is in catching food. As might be expected of a predatory animal so adaptable and capable as the mink, his diet is widely varied. He alternates between the role of hero and villain, depending upon his choice of diet.

Because the mink boasts an eye-appealing and lucrative coat of fur, his fame as one of North America's most eminent fur bearers has long overshadowed his robust versatility.

Nature has gifted this crafty animal with the composite talents of other members of the weasel family; a family composed largely of specialists.

Although he cannot swim as well as the otter, climb as well as the marten, catch mice as adeptly as the weasel, dig as well as the badger, or smell as bad as the skunk, he does a commendable job in each of these departments.

His well-rounded repertoire of talents is an extremely valuable asset, both for saving his precious hide, so to speak, or for getting food. When attacked or merely confronted by his chief foes—large owls, bobcats, foxes or man—the mink is quick to find refuge.

Since he is equally at home on land or in water, he might use his swimming skill to shake his pursuer. If water is not close at hand, he can scoot up the nearest tree like a squirrel or dart into any hole or crevice that will hide a rat.

Should no hideaway be available, he can call upon his lightning-like speed and elusive movements to outrun and outdo any ordinary enemy. If cornered, his reasoning will give way to sheer rage and transform him into a savage fighter regardless of his opponent's size.

Although the mink is highly adaptable in many respects, he has never learned to socialize, either with his fellow wildlife creatures or man. A staunch disbeliever of "togetherness," he works himself into a veritable frenzy when approached by others. From looking at the mink's menu it appears that he follows the old saw, "variety is the spice of life." He shows little discretion in his selection of food and is guided primarily by what is available.

When frequenting the waterfront, his usual appetite-appeasers are fish, frogs, crayfish, turtle eggs, and muskrats. When touring the countryside, birds' eggs, small birds, mice, rabbits, squirrels, and domestic poultry are the most common items on his diet.

Depending upon his choice of food, the mink alternates between the role of hero and villain. If his food happens to be mice or rats he is considered a true friend of man. On the other hand, should his meal be trout, chickens or muskrats, the mink is branded a villain.

An ardent and itinerant love-maker during the mating season from late January through early February in Michigan, the male is, at best, a promiscuous cuss. Meanwhile, the female lives the life of a martyr.

The male's attachment to any one mating partner is short-lived. He cavorts freely, leaving the female to bear and protect the young. These are usually born in April or May and average five or six per litter. When born they are about the size and shape of a human's little finger. They are pale in color, blind, naked and totally dependent upon the mother.

Both the male and female are active chiefly at night doing their deeds of good and bad. After their nocturnal outings, they lug their booty home and stow it away until the next evening spree.

Mink dens are generally found near water. Long burrows in banks, holes under logs, stumps or roots and hollow trees are their favorite dwellings. Crannies of rocks, drains and nooks under stone piles and bridges are also frequently selected. The male often takes up his residence in muskrat homes.

The male's constant roaming makes him more difficult to trap than the female whose range is limited. Both are extremely wary of man's trapping devices. They draw the major attention of trappers from around the latter part of November through December which is their prime fur season. Approximately 16,500 mink were taken by trappers in Michigan during the 1958-59 season, about 4,000 above the previous season's mark.

Whether his acts are good, bad or indifferent, the mink is an important and versatile animal. He is truly the wildlife "jack of all trades."

Greetings In Good Taste

Christmas cards, traditional symbols of good will, will achieve their friendly purpose in fullest measure if good taste and common sense are used in ordering, signing and sending them. Here are a few hints that will prove helpful: Buy your cards before December 1 (if you want them printed or engraved, order even earlier).

When your name is not printed or engraved, sign your complete name (there are millions of Johns and Marys).

When the complete family is listed, the father's name should be first, then the mother's, then the children according to age.

Send a card to husband and wife, even if you know only one (unless it is a semi-business card).

Red and green inks are acceptable for signing and addressing Christmas cards.

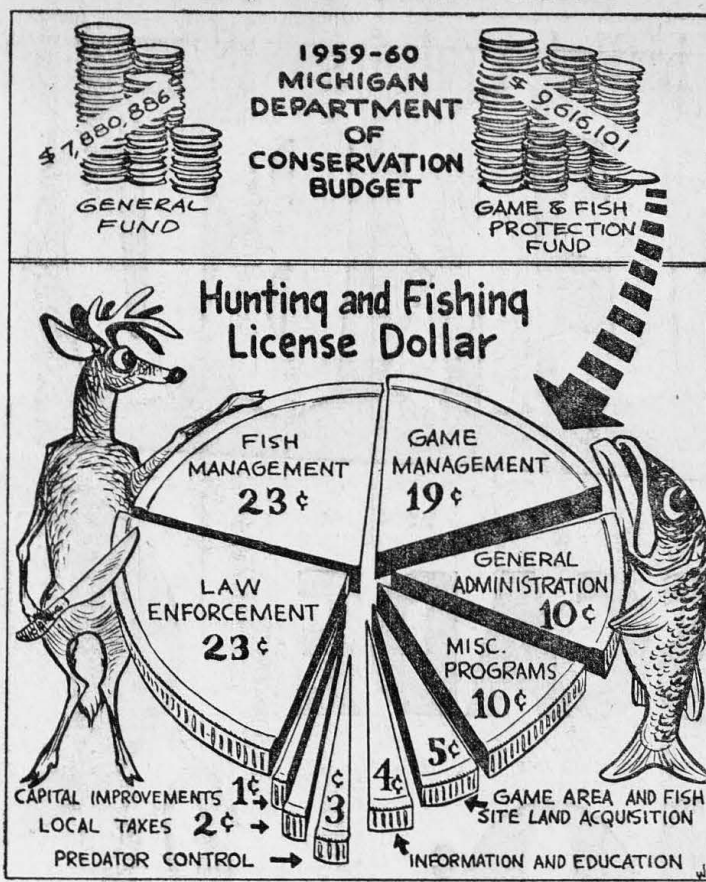

Envelopes should be addressed in handwriting, carefully and legibly. Use postal zone numbers for mailings to large cities. Re-check old addresses.

Use correct postage. A Christmas card deserves first class postage, in a sealed envelope with a four cent stamp.

A return address on the envelope will insure that your card won't hit the dead-letter file.

Dollar$ for Conservation

Michigan's Conservation Department draws from two main sources—the General Fund and the Game and Fish Protection Fund—to expand and conserve the state's natural resources. The General Fund appropriation, totaling some $7,880,000 this fiscal year, comes from state taxes and several federal aid grants. These monies are used to carry out the Department's parks, forestry, lands and geology programs. Completing the budget picture is the Game and Fish Fund (license fees) which is providing more than $9,600,000 for ten major programs of the Department as shown above. Federal appropriations have added about $1,100,000 annually to this fund in recent years.

How to Make Your Home Say "Merry Christmas"

Christmas, with its magic of colored lights, is one time when the individual really comes into his own. With the same basic materials, and the same general ideas to express, it is a source of continual wonder to the vast majority of people that such a thing can be created. And, it is not necessary to go to a great deal of expense to create something which is lovely to look at and which says "Merry Christmas" to all who see it.

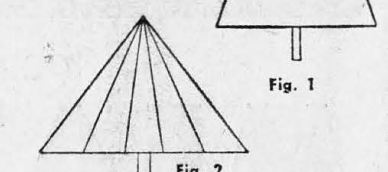

Keeping a few simple rules in mind and giving your imagination free rein, you can make your Christmas decorating a project in which the whole family can share, giving everyone a feeling of satisfaction in his own individual contribution.

Selecting and Caring for Tree
For many of us, the tree itself will always be the central figure in any decorating scheme. Selecting it, bringing it home, visualizing it in its dressed and lighted glory—all add to the sense of anticipation.

Select a tree that is full and beautifully shaped. As soon as you bring the tree home, stand it in a pail or tub filled with water until you are ready to set it up and trim it. This will prolong the life and appearance of the tree, keep the needles from falling and minimize the danger of fire.

Trimming Your Tree

Lights can do a great deal to improve the shape of a tree. If your tree is long and slender, string the lights around it; if it is short and squat, string them in vertical rows, from top to bottom. (See Fig. 1 and Fig. 2.) Don't fast at the number of lights you need for your tree. Professional decorators use this formula: Multiply the height of the tree by the width of the branches at the base, then multiply by three. A tree seven feet tall, and five feet wide at the base thus would have 105 lights.

Using this rule and spacing your lights evenly, you will always have an excellent balanced effect. (See Fig. 3.)

Don't limit yourself to conventional Christmas lights. Lamps which simulate ice crystals or snow balls are now available and produce a very interesting appearance. Consider also the flashing, twinkling or bubbling lights which give the effect of motion and are particularly appealing to children.

Start at the Top

Trees should always be trimmed from the top down. First the Angel, Star, Spear or other tree-top piece should be put in place. Then the lights should be strung, top to bottom. Reflectors and halos add much to the brilliance of lights.

Now you are ready for the "string type" decorations. With this much done, you can begin to place your most interesting ornaments, selecting spots where they will show to best advantage. When all the ornaments have been placed the tinsel can be arranged, each piece hung individually on the branches. Angel hair or a spray of artificial snow may be added at the very end.

The top-to-bottom procedure should be followed throughout. It is the easiest, the fastest and, above all, the safest way. That word "safest" is one which you should be conscious of throughout the Christmas season. All light strings should be inspected carefully and all sets with worn or exposed wires replaced with new U/L approved sets. Protect against short circuits or blow-out fuses by making sure you have at least one set of lights with a safety fuse plug (such as those manufactured by NOMA LITES). This set should be connected to the wall socket or other source of current; other light strings can be attached to it. Should a fuse blow, it can easily be replaced at the socket, with a twist of the fingers.

Christmas All Over the House

Even the loveliest tree has its effect heightened if the rest of the house is decorated attractively and in good taste. Practically every home offers a wealth of simple materials which can be used for novel, imaginative decorative pieces. An ordinary vase can be filled with greens and white branches with ornaments and placed anywhere. Three graduated embroidery hoops decorated with tinsel can be suspended by ribbons around a half-inch wooden dowel inserted in a plastic styrofoam base. A set of vari-colored lights wound around the dowel glow through angel hair; a few small ornaments strung from colored ribbon complete this lovely miniature "tree." Another effective idea is to form a cone of heavy Christmas gift wrapping paper and place it over a dowel. The paper should be heavy enough to keep its cone shape, and translucent enough for the light to shine through.

The traditional Christmas greens provide many beautiful arrangements. Laurel and Pine branches wound around with lights, canes and a few simple ornaments for a glowing effect. Greens banded on a mantle have their beauty heightened by proper placement of lights. A madonna figure combined with spruce branches and creche lighted from behind makes a lovely table truly lovely. An attractive dining room decoration can be fashioned on a tiered plate or lazy susan with lights and ornaments. A set of lights intertwined with Pine or other greens on top of a bookcase makes a beautiful illuminated display. Window wreaths, laurel swags across your drapes and other greens also become much more interesting and original when lights are cleverly used.

One of the most attractive, and least expensive, means of outdoor lighting is to run strings of lights along the eaves or roof edge. Ordinary drive rings, available at any hardware store, can simplify the job enormously. U-shaped, the drive rings can be affixed to the under-edge of the roof, and the lights threaded through them. The same technique can be used in outlining doors and windows with lights. The drive rings will keep them in position, prevent sagging or uneven effects. (See Fig. 5.)

Cauliflower and Brussel Sprouts in Good Supply

Let's take a look at two members of the fascinating cabbage family—cauliflower and Brussels sprouts. Fall is peak season country-over for cauliflower and there are more Brussels sprouts October through December than at any other time according to Virginia Helt, Consumer Food Marketing Agent for Michigan State University in the Grand Rapids area.

Cauliflower is by far the most popular of the two vegetables. Brussels sprouts, increasing in popularity, can be termed the "baby" of the cabbage family. The tiny heads are used much the same as cabbage and are enjoyed for their flavor and variety in meals. But few think of them as a leading source of Vitamin C. If cooked and served properly, a generous serving of sprouts will give all the vitamin C you need for a day. So it is an important vegetable to feed the family.

Cauliflower quality is much improved in many stores compared to what has been on the market. Cauliflower is good served raw on any relish plate or in any garden-green salad. Others prefer it cooked. Some eating only the white florets. Others enjoy the whole plant, leaves and all. No matter how you plan to prepare it, the secret of cooking cauliflower is to cook it in boiling hot water for as little time as possible, and cook just until tender.

Brussels sprouts are also easy to fix. Place the sprouts in large amount of boiling salted water. When they begin to boil the second time, count 8 to 12 minutes, and they should be fork tender. Serve with a cheese sauce, or serve plain with butter, salt and pepper. They are delicious served with meat and fish.

Keep in mind, too, the candlers, lampposts, angels, snowmen, Santa Claus figures and other "ready-made" decorations which are available. They can be combined with greens, ornaments, ribbons and other materials with very good results. This idea is particularly adaptable in window treatments where both imagination and a safe, convenient light source are most desirable.

Your House a Christmas Card

We have all experienced that warm glow of good feeling and fond memories which can come from just glancing at a house which seems to wish the whole world a "Merry Christmas."

Here too, safety must be the watchword. All outside wiring must be rubber-insulated and heavy-duty—#12 or #14 cord is best. A permanent, protected outdoor type receptacle is the most satisfactory current source. Lacking that, you can use a porch or garage light. Should that not be convenient, an indoor light socket can be used safely in this manner—get a board about six to nine inches wide, cut to fit snugly under any window. Drill a hole in the board, put it in position and close the window so that it meets the board. The outside wire can then be run through the hole and connected to an indoor socket. Brace lock the window with a stick (See Fig. 4)

One of the most attractive, and least expensive, means of outdoor lighting is to run strings of lights along the eaves or roof edge. Ordinary drive rings, available at any hardware store, can simplify the job enormously. U-shaped, the drive rings can be affixed to the under-edge of the roof, and the lights threaded through them. The same technique can be used in outlining doors and windows with lights. The drive rings will keep them in position, prevent sagging or uneven effects. (See Fig. 5.)

Many people prefer a single color for their outside lighting, but try using one white light at the top of the tree or other prominent place. And, don't forget spotlights which can be placed conveniently on your lawn to illuminate and focus attention on a creche, elfin figures, or other interesting features.

METHODS OF OPERATION

- Specializes in head-on and run-off-roadway collisions
- Drives when mental faculties are slowed or dulled by narcotic effects of alcohol
- Drives erratically; sometimes too slow, usually too fast; often weaves
- Does not operate car smoothly in stop-and-go driving; makes sudden starts and stops
- Drives blissfully ignorant of hazards and his/her less-ened ability

RECORD

DRINKARD is known to be involved in accidents killing 291 and injuring 4,428 people last year in Michigan. DRINKARD often escapes detection so complete record is unknown.

REMARKS

DRINKARD refuses to believe his/her judgment, perception, alertness and physical coordination are impaired by alcohol. Michigan citizens are warned against riding with this Unwanted Driver who is ten times more likely to have an accident than a non-drinker. Citizens are urged to call police to accident scene when DRINKARD is involved.

The next victim of DRINKARD is unknown.

No Water, No Air Nothing On the Moon

The poet who first rhymed moon with June, spoon and croon could have been the same man who named the bumps and holes on earth's natural satellite.

The first rocket ship to the moon may well land in the Sea of Tranquility, for example. If it misses that mark, it could land in the Sea of Crises.

From that point, a spaceman could walk north to investigate the Sea of Fertility and the Sea of Nectar. Hopping across a mountain range and the Catharina crater, he would come to the Sea of Clouds, just west of the Sea of Moisture. He might want to bypass the Ocean of Storms and stroll south between Copernicus and Kepler—both craters named for scientists—to the Bay of Dew.

On his way back to the spaceship, he might look over the Lake of the Sleepers and the Lake of the Dead.

Of course, these names—translated into English from Latin—might confuse a spaceman with no poetry in his soul. Experts say there is no water on the moon—and the "seas" and "oceans" are just dry plains.

The Small Fry Can Help

If you have a small daughter who imitates everything you do, you have a wonderful opportunity, according to Eleanor Densmore, County Extension Agent in Home Economics. Not only is it a perfect teaching setup, but it's the foundation of that deeper relationship between mother and daughter that does so much to mold character.

Probably when you make pie, she wants to make pie, when you make cookies, she wants to make cookies. It's a wonderful opportunity for you to teach her the right way in so far as her years will permit. Skills and information acquired this way are never forgotten. Of course, you can overdo the heavy superintending. Remember, it should first of all be fun.

What are some of the things you can teach her by example? Wash hands before handling food, wear an apron, grease cake and cookie pans, roll and handle dough, and cut out cookies.

Gradually teach new skills and don't be afraid to let her experiment a little. You'll be amazed at how much help she'll soon be.

Too often we are too busy and we think it's easier to do it ourselves than to trouble to teach them how.

One of the fringe benefits is that often the child learns to eat and like a new food, all because she helped fix it and she just can't resist eating it because she "fixed it all by herself."

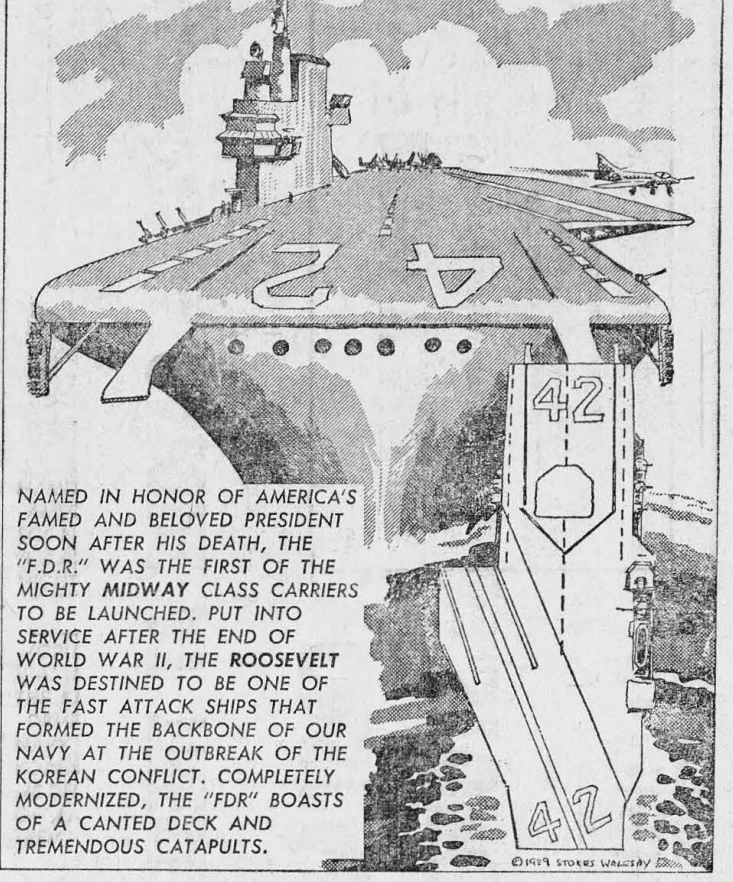

Be generous with compliments and do taste her concoctions even though you are skeptical. Teach her to clean up after her baking by setting a good example yourself. In fact, probably the reason you don't want her messing around is because you don't want to clean up after her. So teach her how.

What we need to build that wonderful new world we talk about is fewer architects and more bricklayers.

What I don't do today is seldom done tomorrow.

U. S., Europe Trade Trees For Christmas

A Christmas tree—like the grass—is always greener in the other fellow's yard.

The Scotch pine is becoming a favorite Christmas tree in northern U. S. because of its lush, long-needed beauty and lasting qualities.

As its name implies, this tree is not native of North America, but had to be imported originally from Scotland and elsewhere in Europe, reports G. Robinson Gregory (Ph. D.), associate professor of resource economics at The University of Michigan.

The favorite Christmas tree in Scotland, on the other hand, is the Sitka spruce. You guessed it!—this is a native North American tree, growing extensively along the northern Pacific Coast, for which seed had to be exported to Europe from British Columbia and the U. S.

Until recent years, Professor Gregory adds, almost all of England's few Christmas trees were imported from France. Post-war rise in British incomes coincided with the availability of aromatic evergreens from Britain's large plantations. As home production increased, imports declined and "just about wrecked the French Christmas tree industry."

Balsam fir, the biggest U. S. seller, is similar to the tree first used—the silver fir in Germany. Reputedly introduced here by Hessian troops during the Revolutionary War, the Christmas tree tradition spread through northern Europe during the 19th Century. Martin Luther, inspired by moonlight on a snow-draped evergreen, is credited with first lighting a tree with candles.

Some Michigan trees move to market early in November, but the bulk of them begin to move the latter part of the month, reaching a peak during the first half of December. Many are imported from Canada.

The trees come from three main sources: 1. Contractors who secure cutting rights and harvest wild trees on private, state or federal lands; 2. Pulpwood harvesting operations which yield tree tops usable as Christmas trees, and 3. Commercial growers, who plant nursery stock on private acreage, prune, shape and tend the trees over the six to 10 years of growth required. The latter group supplies high quality trees, though a relatively small proportion of the total supply as yet, Professor Gregory explains.

What is the best Christmas tree to buy?

"The Scotch pine earns its growing popularity," according to Frank Murray, forest manager in the U-M School of Natural Resources. "It grows fast, maturing in six to eight years, it is attractive, holds its needles, is easiest to grow in the nursery and easiest to transplant."

The buyer should try to get a fresh-cut tree and then keep it in water to preserve the "almost fire-proof" quality of a fresh evergreen, Murray adds. Such care also helps keep the needles on the tree.

ANNUAL CHURCH MEETING

The annual congregational meeting of the Ada Christian Reformed church will be held at the church on Monday evening, December 7, at 8 p. m.

Dairy Herd Production Records Boost Income

Accurate dairy herd production records, used wisely, could help many Kent County dairymen boost their income over feed cost.

For instance, the average dairy cow in Dairy Herd Improvement Associations last year produced about 11,000 pounds of milk and about 415 pounds of butterfat. The average Michigan dairy cow, on the other hand, produced about 7,000 pounds of milk and 265 pounds of butterfat.

A further breakdown of these records shows that the average DHIA cow returned $300 over feed costs. This was nearly twice as much return as the average cow.

"This doesn't mean that records themselves boosted this return, of course," says Larry Johnson, Extension Dairyman at Michigan State University. "It does mean that the herd owner of these DHIA cows made wise use of the records on his cows in making management decisions in culling and feeding his cows."

"Of course," Johnson points out, "you have to have the records before you can make the right decisions to boost your herd income."

In Kent County, there is one Dairy Herd Improvement Association in which county dairymen can take part to get these needed records on their herds. October is the month to enroll in order to get a complete year's records on the herd and Kelley urges dairymen to get in touch with the County Extension office right away if they are interested.

The office has full information on the program here in the county.

One reason young children go all out for evening television is that it supplies an excuse not to go to bed till nine o'clock or later.

Tools Win Warm Reception From The Home "Handyman"

If you've got a "handyman about the house"—one who likes to repair and build things, and who finds his greatest off-the-job happiness in putting about his home workshop—then your Christmas gifting problem is practically solved in advance!

No matter whether he's a novice or seasoned home craftsman, he'll prove equally receptive to any gift that will help him in his pursuit of his "do-it-yourself" activities.

First thing required is, of course, a good set of basic hand tools, including hammer, saw, bit brace, plane, chisel, pliers, hand drill, level, etc. Many manufacturers have assembled these sets in rugged metal chests. When you give one of these, you can be sure that every essential item is included.

For tackling more ambitious projects, power tools are just the thing. The drill kit does a whole host of jobs around the house in a matter of minutes, from sanding chairs, tables and chests to stirring paint and polishing the family car.

Designed especially for the home handyman, the portable power saw comes in lightweight but sturdy models.

The portable router makes the finest wood joints for tables, bookcases, chairs, etc. It performs inlay work, mortises doors and dovetail drawers.

For the home workshop itself, there are stationary combination units that function as drill, lathe, saw and sander all rolled into one. And, of course, there are power tools for specialized purposes such as a lathe, radial saw, drill press, jointer, shaper, sander and grinder.

Report Cards, Important Indication of Students' Progress, in Eyes of Teachers

Within a week, students will be bringing home their report cards. The peaceful atmosphere of the home and school will be greatly disturbed. Before this happens, we should take a look at this thing that disturbs us—marks. To some the mark or grade is the end product of going to school. To others, only an indication of what the child is doing in relation to others. Some would give money for "A" and "B" grades. Others would throw grades out of the educational system.

No one has really defined grades. No two people agree on what they mean. To us, they are an indication of what the teacher sincerely feels the child has learned. The teacher cannot prove the grade should be a "C". The parent or student cannot prove it shouldn't be a "C". Again, it is what the teacher honestly feels is a fair evaluation of the learning of the student. In some classes where a factual knowledge can be measured, there is no question on a grade. The answer is right or wrong. However, when a subjective factor is present, evaluation becomes increasingly more difficult. For instance, the question could be "Discuss the importance of Nolds to the Medical Profession", or "What effect did Franklin's work in France have on the outcome of the Revolutionary War", or to be more general, write a paper depicting your thoughts and analysis of a poem by Robert Frost or Wordsworth. These questions and essays defy exact measurement.

The teacher reads and studies all students' papers and attempts to assign a grade that will differentiate between the better, the average, and the poor. No one is more qualified to do this than the teacher trained in the subject and in techniques in teaching the subject. To ask some one else to evaluate a paper who is not trained and has not read all of the other students' answers and papers is as sensible as discussing the price of Chili beans in Afghanistan. Yet, it is these subjective factors that arouse the emotions of the students who only see themselves and their latest paper. Parents jump to conclusions on facts presented by the student. This jumping invariably is embarrassing as students do not present the whole picture, only those arguments they feel parents want to hear. Anyone with two or more children quickly realizes this.

Perhaps your children are different, but personally, I find this situation often—one child claims the other started the rumpus, the second claims the first. Who do you believe? Are they lying? Or, is the issue really important enough to have the parents become really concerned and disturbed? If we recognize these psychological inconsistencies in your people and teenagers, in particular, we would have fewer headaches and less ulcers.

Grades are important, all arguments notwithstanding. High school grades are the best predictors of college achievement human beings have as yet developed. With all their indefiniteness, they are the best we have.

We of the faculty could "play politics" and grade high those students who we know will "give us a rough time", and we would have fewer problems, fewer headaches. This, we know, would be unethical and immoral and the most detrimental thing we could do to the student. If he goes on into advanced training, he will soon meet his "Waterloo". Such false recommendations would jeopardize all future students as receiving institutions would distrust the records of our school.

Thus, the faculty will continue to be as fair and honest as we know how and will continue to mark what we feel is earned—whether pleasant or not. We believe "So the twig is bent, so growth the tree" and "as ye sow, so shall ye reap".

Thus, if you have a question on your student's grade, you will be most welcome to come to school, share a cup of coffee with us and reach a common understanding on what is better for Junior or Sue. We do not know all the answers, but we are concerned and do want to make this school second to none in the state.

Dean Van Landingham.
