Price of Milk Raised To School Students

It will be necessary to raise the price of milk to students beginning February 1, announced Superintendent Harold Chambers this week. The reasons for this raise are due to two things: namely, the price of milk to the school was increased by 1/2 cent per half pint since September 1, and the Government reimbursement has been reduced by 1/2 cent. The new price will be 3 cents per half pint. The cost to the students for the 21 school days in February will be 63 cents.

In selling milk to students, the school merely charges enough to cover the cost of the milk plus a small extra for clerical details in processing the invoices, making accurate records for each school, and other minor costs. Any extra money over and above costs is returned to the students in the form of reduction in the price of milk.

To encourage the use of milk by school children, the Federal Government reimburses each school a fluctuating rate of 2 or 3 cents per half pint. The school purchases milk from local dairies on a bid basis. This year the Joppe Dairy was the lowest bidder. Last year it was the Knapp Avenue Dairy.

The officers would like to see a good turnout to this first meeting of the New Year.

Elementary Students To Conduct Sales at School

The Forest Hills Board of Education has granted permission to the Elementary schools to conduct through the students, occasional sales within the school building of such items as carmel apples, popcorn, potato chips, home-made candy, dixie cups. Permission was granted when it was realized by the Board that the children not only make a little money that can be used in the purchase of items useful in the classroom, but also learn how to handle money in the buying and selling of goods.

The Elementary Principals in their monthly meetings have been authorized to decide which items shall be included in these sales.

The Holidays have come, and gone, and we have now entered a new year. Here as elsewhere the Season starts with colored lights festooning the streets and large decorations on the street lights, all ushered in by a Santa Claus parade.

Then St. Petersburg becomes different. Here is a "Christmas tree mile." 2nd St. runs through town and out along a causeway to the Municipal Pier, and is lined on both sides with Australian pines. These trees are decorated with colored lights, each sponsored by a different organization or business, thus each is different. The effect of a double row of trees all blazing with colored lights is impressive, but when seen across the water on either side where the reflections more than double the effect, the sight seems unreal, magical. Naturally there are ever so many distinctive and unusual decorations all over the area, but the street of lighted Christmas trees remains our outstanding favorite attraction.

Of course Kevin and Glenn were very busy at school. First day they made cookies, coming home simply stuffed from all the sampling that seemed necessary. Next day they decorated them with colored frostings, candies, etc. Third day they were put into cellophane bags and tied onto the Christmas tree which they then pronounced most beautifully decorated tree ever. For their program Glenn became a Scrooge and Kevin was Santa Claus. Doesn't that sound just like a school program anywhere?

The Ford Falcon station wagon, newest entry in the economy car field, has the longest cargo space and the greatest load floor area in its class. The new station wagon, which will go on sale this spring, features a roll-down rear window operated either by a manual crank or optional electric control. This six-passenger station wagon will be offered in two- and four-door models.

Then the Christmas cards began arriving. Some people sent greetings extra early so they could be forwarded and we would be sure to have them. Because they did not know where we were, some did not send any. An item of interest to anyone who is not sure of an address, be sure to send it first class mail. A card with a three cent stamp is cancelled, and in order to receive it we pay an additional three cents. The curious thing is that the cards which carry a personal message are always more warmly received.

We became more and more imbued with the spirit of things and decorating the cabin and having a tree were not sufficient. So we got a lot of green and red plastic, a string of outdoor lights, and made ourselves a real seagoing wreath. We took the ring buoy down and decorated it. First the string of lights was wrapped around it (holly berries?). Then it was covered with strips of deep green plastic, and finally decorated with a big red plastic bow. It was a really effective wreath.

To make our holiday season truly familiar and more delightful we had old friends and relatives to visit with. First Tom and Fran Lunan down here for a winter vacation, dropped in on us, and went day sailing with us a number of times. All of us went to an egg nog party they gave Christmas afternoon. Then some cousins called on us, Col. and Mrs. Frank Collins from Washington D. C. We had not seen them for a long time, and were delighted to have a visit with them. Then they asked us to have dinner with them at their place at Clearwater. We also met a cousin of the Skipper. We had not seen Anne since she was a little girl. She is married now and she and her husband, Dr. Henry Wright, have three children and live in Tampa. They took us out to dinner at a most elegant place, where we had a very good dinner and a marvelous time visiting. We have found that no matter where

Research Fails to Uphold Ability Grouping; More Failure Than Success

"The case for putting young students of high ability in separate sections in all subjects and (4) students taught in a special high school which admits only students of high ability."

Dr. Olson continued, "Ability grouping has been rather widely accepted in special education for the mentally retarded, the physically handicapped, the blind, the deaf, and so on. The advocacy in these cases is not entirely on intellectual or educational grounds. Such grouping recognizes a custodial and therapeutic function in addition to a strictly intellectual activity. Similarly, in work in the nursery school and kindergarten, the child care aspect of the function receives recognition."

Dr. Olson cautioned the audience stating, "The teaching profession and the public should not be stampeded into innovations in grouping. There are more failures than successes on the road. New departures should be accompanied by research appraisals to assist in finding durable solutions."

Referring to a recent study completed in this area, he said, "The study indicated that there is no significant difference in subsequent college success in terms of grades and honors for students of equated capacity (general equal ability) taught under the following four conditions: (1) students taught in mixed ability classes in high school, (2) students of high ability segregated for some honors section, (3) students of high ability in separate sections in all subjects and (4) students taught in a special high school which admits only students of high ability."

you go, you soon find someone you have known somewhere. And make new friends. New Years Eve Skipper and I went to the Club for cocktails with a very good friend we've made while here. Then Skipper stood us all to a steak dinner—and we all went to bed early! At midnight I awakened to hear horns all around us, joined by horns on several boats; but the rest of the crew slept blissfully on. The Lunans had a delightful vacation while down here. In addition to sailing with us they took us out to Anna Maria for a picnic the Sunday after Christmas. It was a perfectly marvelous day, and we really enjoyed the drive. We went over the spectacular Sunshine Skyway Bridge. Way out in the center of Tampa Bay this bridge climbs up to a tremendous high span, high enough for any boat to go under. When cars go up the slope to cross the center span they look for all the world like little cars on a roller coaster. But when they come down, the slope suggests a ski slope. There is SOME view from the top, but you have to keep on moving. Lit up at night the bridge is magical. We found Anna Maria built up a lot since we were last there ten years ago, but found it still a lovely charming island. The hamburgers were good too. The day was lovely and sunny and warm. The twins had swim pants with them and went shelling along the beach. The Lunans' cocker Happy, went swimming. Then the twins went swimming. Finally Tom could stand it no longer. He had no swim pants, so he went in with his slacks rolled above his knees, and said it was about the most enjoyable swim he'd had for a long long time. Before the end of their vacation they drove down to Key West, and saw a lot of Florida before they started for home again.

In a couple of days Dr. and Mrs. Nelson Clark from Holland will join us, and we will start south. Just exactly where we go will depend largely upon wind and weather. If it is as interesting as we believe it will be, you can read about it next week.

Bumper Pusner Is Unwanted Driver

The sign on the back of the truck-trailer read: "Don't hug me, I'm going steady."

Another motor van bore the admonition printed on its tailgate: "If you can't stop in time, smile as you go under."

These and similar messages of grim humor are the truckers' way of warning the driver behind to stay away from trouble. They refer to one of the most common driving habits found on the streets and highways today, a habit which often leads to death and injury, that of "following too closely."

To call attention to this dangerous practice, the Michigan Association of Chiefs of Police are putting up 15,000 posters throughout the state devoted to the "Bumper Pusner" in their continuing program of characterizing drivers who are Unwanted in Michigan.

The accident record of the Bumper Pusner is bad—with 12 killed and 2,440 injured last year, representing an estimated loss of $1.6 million. But the accident statistics tell only a small part of the Bumper Pusner's record. Police point out that few traffic tickets are issued for this violation until an accident has resulted and even then, the ticket may refer to some other violation more immediate to the accident. Yet following too closely is the driving error which made the accident almost inevitable.

The description on the police poster devoted to the Bumper Pusner points out that this driver depends on his driving skill rather than on his driving sense to keep out of trouble. The result is that he often over-estimates his skill and becomes involved in rear-end and side-swiping collisions when he has to stop or is attempting to pass.

In many instances the Bumper Pusner is lucky—because other drivers compensate for the mistakes of this foolish driver. Police officials point out that the Bumper Pusner can be readily identified whenever traffic congestion occurs. Slowly moving traffic is always a warning to good drivers that there are dangerous driving conditions present. This is the time when the Bumper Pusner rides close to the car ahead, depending on the driver ahead to think for him. When a sudden stop is necessary, the Bumper Pusner finds himself unable to stop in time and the resulting rear-end collision often produces serious whip-lash injuries to the back and neck of the passengers in the lead vehicle. Even at slow speeds such whip-lash injuries can be serious.

When the Bumper Pusner operates on the open highway or on rural roads, he is even more dangerous because of the higher speed involved. Of the 12 fatalities credited to "following too closely" last year, 10 of them happened in rural locations. In all accidents involving this violation, half are in rural and half in urban locations, but the injuries are generally more severe in the rural areas.

The police posters suggest certain defensive measures the good driver can adopt when overtaken by a Bumper Pusner. First attempt to warn him off by flashing brake lights "on and off" rapidly. This may alert the following driver who hasn't realized he's getting too close. If this doesn't work, police suggest you pull over to the side of the road and let the Bumper Pusner pass. Sudden stops in front of the Bumper Pusner should be avoided as he hasn't room enough to stop in time.

HIDDEN TALENT

Lowell Thomas's much-discussed appearance as the reluctant subject on "This is Your Life" turned out to be a surprise boost for the program, Ralph Edwards said. "Thomas was the best thing that could have happened to us on opening night. It brought us reams of free publicity. I'm going to submit it to the TV Academy as the best comedy of the season," Edwards said.

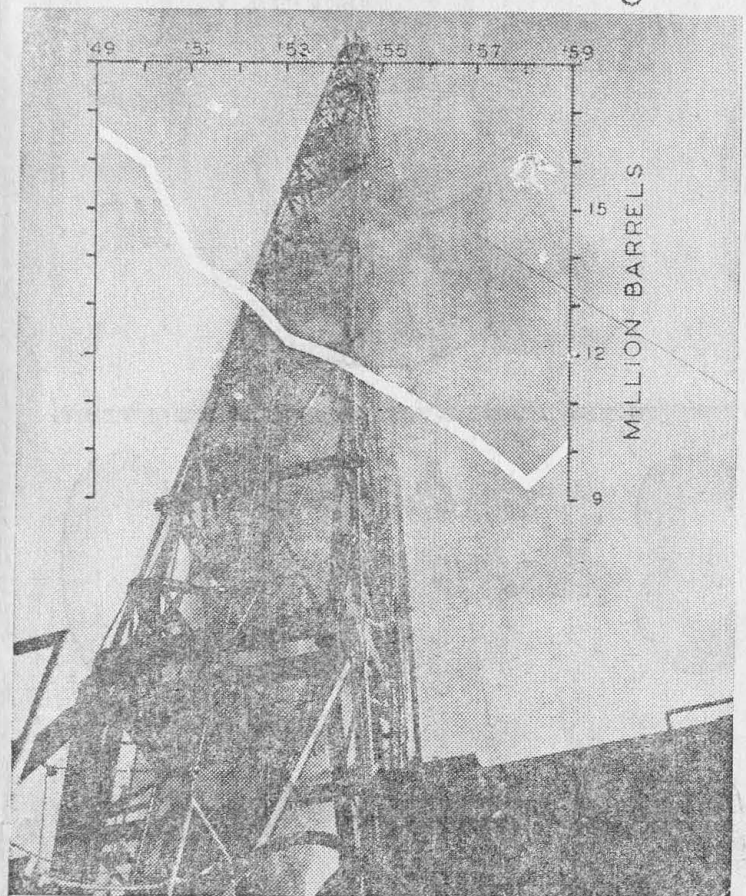

TV BRIEFS:

Walt Disney, who brought Davy Crockett and, more recently, Swamp Fox to TV: "I think TV is missing an audience it could have if it would put on something with substance. I am against the men who merely invent gimmicks."

Noted author, critic and educator Gilbert Seldes, discussing "egg-head" criticism of TV: "In relation to TV today, the hostile one-sided critic is making the same mistake he made in the 1920's about the movies and jazz."

Oil Decline Halted in Michigan

Yields from the relatively new Albion-Pulaski-Scipio pool area were instrumental in halting a 10-year oil production decline in Michigan during 1959. With this southern Michigan area producing approximately 30 percent of the state-wide total, oil output rose to an estimated 10,210,800 barrels, highest figure since 1956. Viewing the area's steady expansion and the increase in drilling interest there, Conservation Department geologists feel Michigan's oil production may near 12,500,000 barrels in 1960.

Our Michigan
BY WILLARD BAIRD

If Michigan has nothing more than mere size, we would have plenty to brag about.

In land and water area combined we are the biggest state east of the Mississippi river and tenth largest in the nation.

The flag of Michigan proclaims dominion over 57,022 square miles of land area and nearly 40,000 square miles of water surface—a total of 96,791 square miles.

Our land area covers 36,494,000 acres—larger than England or Austria...twice the size of Ireland... nearly five times as big as Switzerland.

Michigan's upper peninsula—nearly one-third of the total area of the state—is as big as Connecticut, Delaware, Massachusetts and Rhode Island combined... and larger than either Belgium or Switzerland.

Until 1959, Michigan could claim the longest coastline of any state in the Union.

When Alaska entered the union, Michigan had to revise its claim. But we can still say we have the longest freshwater coastline 3,121 miles of any of the states and rank second in total length of water frontage.

Our broad expanse of Michigan territory embraces 40 percent of the water surface of four of the Michigan and Superior. In that respect, we are far ahead of our neighboring states, for second-ranking Wisconsin controls only 10 percent of the Great Lakes surface.

We have 11,037 inland lakes—ranking from small bodies of 10 acres of water surface (the smallest we count as a lake) to the 31.3-square-mile Houghton Lake in Roscommon County.

Our streams and rivers traverse some 36,350 miles, a distance of the world. Of all the states we are indeed entitled to the proud claim of Water Wonderland, the slogan we imprint on our Michigan license plates.

We are the seventh most populous state in the country—and the fastest growing state in the midwest—and, with our 23.4 percent gain since 1950, second only to California among the industrial states recording the greatest population growth this decade.

Early historical records credit a French explorer, Etienne Brule, with being the first white man known to have seen the inland empire of North America, including the vast territory which is now Michigan.

Brule's trip through upper Michigan waters in 1618, on an expedition searching for a new passage to the Pacific and the Orient, beat the Pilgrim landing at Plymouth Rock by two years.

Brule was only 19 when he discovered Lake Superior on his upper Great Lakes expedition while serving as a scout for Samuel de Champlain, then French governor of Canada at Quebec.

Continuing Brule's explorations of the Michigan territory, Jean Nicolet—commissioned by Champlain to renew the search for a new route to the Orient—passed through the Straits of Mackinac in 1634. Seven years later, French Jesuit missionaries Isaac Jogues and Charles Raymbault built their first mission at Sault Ste. Marie.

By 1668 two other Jesuits, Fathers Jacques Marquette and Claude Dablon, were able to establish a permanent French settlement at Sault Ste. Marie. Founded more than 100 years before the American Revolution, their mission—now grown to a community of 20,000—became the nation's third oldest city.

Marquette, after opening his Sault Ste. Marie mission, founded another at St. Ignace in 1671. That was the same year that Francois St. Lussion in the name of King Louis XIV formally proclaimed French possession of the Sault territory and the Great Lakes area. The flag of France floated over northern Michigan outposts from that time until the arrival of the British 90 years later.

More than 80 percent of the Interstate 94 (US-12) expressway from Detroit to the Indiana state line—a distance of 217 miles—is now open to traffic or under contract.

Though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down; for the Lord upholdeth him with His hand.—(Psalm 37, 24.)

Be a man's thoughts and acts ever so evil, he is not beyond redemption as long as he earnestly reaches out for the hand of God. It will never be withdrawn from him as long as he contritely seeks forgiveness.

A RHYME OF RESOLUTIONS

(a new year's poem for drivers)

by CAROL LANE

I'll signal turns with light or hand,
So those behind will understand.

Before I pass I'll look to see
If someone else is passing me.

I'll always stay enough behind
The car in front for peace of mind

I'll always dim my light at night,
(for folks in front, they're overbright)

Let's keep 60 full of cheer
By careful driving all the year!

HAPPY NEW YEAR!
Carol Lane

I'll always note the legal speed
It's fast enough to meet my need.

My Neighbors

"Speak to me, Melvin!
Melvin! Do you hear me?"

By Frank G. Morris

Santa comes to lucky politicians only in the even-numbered years when there is a state election, and then only to half of those who had hung their stockings on a ballot box.

In the holiday seasons of the in-between years—like the festivities of last week—an astonishing thing happens to the professionals of both parties.

They yield to the eternal spirit of brotherhood, although probably feeling a little silly about it.

There are exceptions of course. Like Guy Nunn, the UAW broadcaster, who devoted his Christmas Eve TV program to a denunciation of merchants for allowing people to "waste" their money on Christmas gifts.

Nunn said the money spent to keep alive the Christmas spirit of giving should have been sent overseas to be added to the billions that the taxpayers of the United States are spending annually to help the needy of other lands.

But there was different thinking from that of Nunn's one night last week in a Detroit bar when Democrat and Republican politicians were together talking like humans and wishing each other the very worst in the election next November.

Goodwill and fellowship may have been engendered by compassion. For Republicans at the table were confident that the bells of the New Year's Day 12 months hence will herald a return to power of the GOP, and Democrats were just as sure that Santa's return next year will bring them control of the legislature.

So they were arm-in-arm under the mistletoe until a Republican asked a question propounded first by the dean of the Lansing press corps:

"After 11 years in office, what legacies is Gov. Williams leaving to Michigan that will be reasons for pride in years to come?"

The juke box flipped to a stop. New Year jubilation gave way to unaccustomed stillness. Even the bartender became thoughtful.

Finally, a successful Detroit Democratic politician who has been a part of the UAW, shouted an answer.

"The Mackinac Bridge," he cried. "It will endure for centuries as the achievement of Soapy Williams."

And that is true. Although former U. S. Senator Prentiss M. Brown contributed a part of his life to fulfilling the dream of a bridge, no one can take from Williams the credit for pushing the legislation that made it possible. So far, the wonderful bridge has cost the taxpayers only $250,000 a year, which is diverted from highway funds.

"Granted," said the Republican. "Gov. Williams built the bridge. But what else did he build for Michigan in his 11 years?"

There followed noisy argument about nebulous things. Democrats claimed the Governor had brought state government closer to the people; had instilled public consciousness of affairs in Lansing; had, by his presence, forced successive Republican legislatures to adopt more liberal programs.

This kind of boasting is poppycock. Interest in government, and better understanding, is increasing throughout the nation. It results from the superior communications of the era—better newspapers and better reporting; a radio in every home, and televisions where reception is possible.

Finally, a Republican at the table said:

"Gov. Williams will be remembered for the wildest spending programs in the history of all the states. Fortunately for Michigan, he was held in check by Republican legislatures."

The Republican politician made a bad guess when he said that Williams will be remembered for his attempts to spend the people's money faster than taxes could be raised.

When the legislature finally ended the long tax battle before Christmas, new taxes to yield at least $65 million a year had been enacted. The lawmakers, because the Republican-controlled Senate struggled to the bitter end for a balanced budget, fixed the budget at $400 million.

This was an increase of $20 million over last year.

The new taxes boost state general fund revenue to $421 million, leaving a balance of $21 million to be applied to the deficit.

Yet the people forget that last January 27, Williams went before a joint session of the House and Senate and demanded a spending program of $600 million.

The Governor at that time sought to increase state expenditures by almost 65 percent by asking new taxes to raise $140 million and bond issues to finance the rest.

Except for his first legislative session of 1949, when Williams said no new taxes should be enacted, this fantastic trick has been an annual event.

When he did not get the income tax he had sought in 1950 and 1951, Gov. Williams stood before the legislature in 1952 and predicted that state sovereignty would ultimately be surrendered to the Federal Government, which was at that time headed by President Truman.

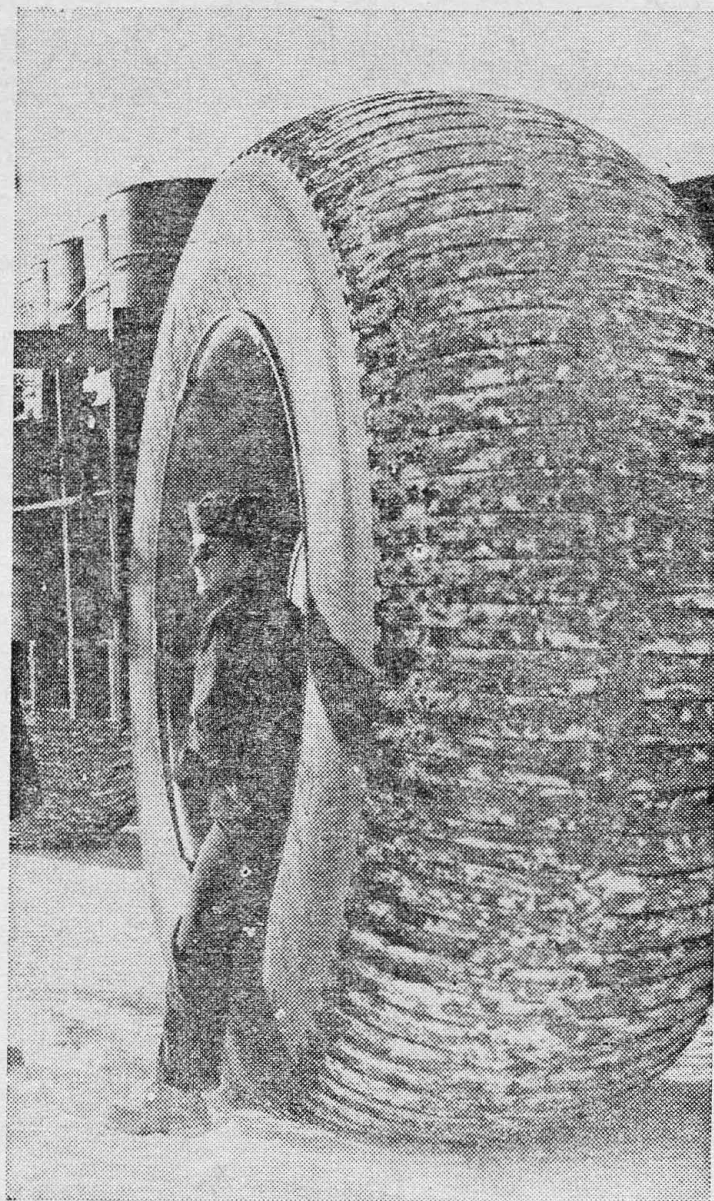

Williams sneered at the Republican legislature in 1950 when the budget was held to $285 million, and he ridiculed the annual raises.

Well, general fund appropriations for the present year have reached $400 million at last and state taxes have been raised to $421 million.

In the last decade, taxes have been increased 66 percent.

The population increase, due mostly to immigration from southern states, has been 24 percent.

If it is true that the people are more concerned today about conditions in Lansing, maybe they will ask why tax growth is almost triple the population growth—and why the heavy budget this year would have been 50 percent greater had Williams won his fight with the legislature.

Dentistry Has Rewards

Dentistry, just completing its first century of service as an independent profession, offers a number of opportunities to its members, reports a University of Michigan professor of dentistry.

Dr. Floyd D. Ostrander (DDS), a past president of the Michigan State Dental Association, says that dentistry is a rapidly growing profession. The type of person who should become a dentist he describes as:

1. A person of the highest integrity;
 2. A person who likes other people;
 3. A person who wants to make an adequate financial return while contributing to the health and happiness of mankind;
 4. A person who is a good student and is not afraid of work; and
 5. A person who has adequate ability to work with his hands.
- "For the youth who can qualify," Dr. Ostrander concludes, "dentistry offers a challenging and rewarding career. The financial returns will be comparable to those in other professions, and the satisfaction which comes from being a part of the health team will be great."

Search For Snow Man of The Himalayas Next Fall

Sir Edmund Hillary, the New Zealander who conquered Mt. Everest, will return to the Himalayas with an expedition to test high altitude survival by climbing 27,790 foot Mount Makalu without oxygen.

He will accomplish this by a gradual ascent of the mountain which he believes will acclimatize the group during the treacherous four-month Himalayan winter.

The expedition will also conduct a carefully planned hunt for the Abominable Snowman. Native reports and frequent evidence of footprints indicate that the creature inhabits the Mt. Makalu area. As the expedition ascends the mountain, Hillary will establish look-out posts which will gradually be moved higher as the winter progresses. According to the New Zealander, this will be one of the most thorough and prolonged snowman searches ever attempted.

Hillary has obtained permission from the Nepalese Government for the expedition which will be launched in September of 1960. Accompanying Hillary will be Dr. Griffiths Pugh, eminent British physiologist, who will be in charge of the high altitude survival experiments. A U. S. physiologist, quite possibly from one of the armed forces, will also be invited to join the expedition. Another member of the scientific team will be a glaciologist, who will gather data on unusual ice formations and other phenomena found in the desolate Himalayan mountain range.

It is Hillary's intention to fly the expedition members and equipment to Katmandu the latter part of September. They must then hike approximately 170 miles to the foot of Mt. Makalu, world's fourth highest mountain. Main camps and a string of look-out posts will be established between 17,000 and 18,000 feet.

The hunt for the Abominable Snowman, or "yeti", as it is called by the natives, will be carried on for the first four months of the expedition. Hillary has invited an eminent American zoologist to take charge of the search for the Snowman.

Belief in the existence of this creature is based primarily on the tracks discovered on many isolated snowfields of the Himalayas. The tracks indicate a creature of considerable weight, walking upright, with feet similar to a large, abnormally broad human foot.

The famous British explorer, Eric Shipton, who will accompany Hillary on this expedition, discovered and photographed "Snowman" tracks in 1951 in Menlung Valley, which will be the area of Hillary's primary search. If no positive evidence is found in this valley, the search will move to another area where tracks have been sighted.

The glaciological experiments will be carried out in January and February by excavating a deep hole in the Barun Plateau and examining ice strata, temperature, wind strength and snowfall at 20,000 feet.

The publishers of the encyclopedia said that a full report of the expedition will be carried in their annual supplement whose circulation of one million, five hundred thousand makes it the largest selling book printed in English. The photographs and scientific information will be included in the encyclopedia itself.

Remember That Oaken Bucket?

Only the most incorrigible of romantics would describe childhood as "the golden years of carefree, happy play untroubled by the worries of the world."

So says Elton B. McNeill (PhD), associate professor of psychology at the University of Michigan. McNeill specializes in clinical work with children and teaches classes in child psychology.

"Looking back, it does seem that today's problems and responsibilities are more weighty and troublesome than the ones you had as a child. But this view is constructed of a combination of a hazy memory and the safe perspective of time," McNeill says.

"If you recall nostalgically a youth spent on a farm, you are likely to remember only the cool well water that slaked your thirst on a blistering summer's day. We selectively omit those memories that are painful or unpleasant in order not to disturb our idyllic image.

"This has been labelled 'old oaken bucket' thinking and is characteristic of the general conception each of us has of his own childhood," McNeill says.

"Even the most casual observation of the emotional ups-and-downs of the daily life of an average child presses home the truth that there is at least as much pain in childhood as there is pleasure.

"It's not that a child weeps as much as he laughs. It is rather that his conflicts cut deeper than his

Training in Importance of Homemaking Skills is Objective of Home Ec. Courses

Home Economics courses provide for girls the same learning opportunities that industrial arts classes do for boys. However, Home Economics may not be the proper name for the courses as the content embraces more than cooking and sewing. Perhaps, a more proper name would be food and clothing technology. Using a cooking or a clothing unit, the teacher strives for the same learning experiences for girls that the industrial arts teacher does for boys. The item being made by the girls provides for the concepts:

1. Training in the method of planning and completing a job.
2. Training in the appreciation of doing good quality work.
3. Training to develop the appreciation and respect of and for tools and equipment and what they can do. (In Home Economics, some of these tools are obvious.)
4. Training to develop the sense of importance of and for detail work and the need for cooperativeness between people.
5. Training in leisure time and hobby activities.

In addition to these objectives, girls do learn to cook and sew. Many object to the school teaching these two skills stating they should be taught in the home. Perhaps, in philosophy, they are right. In practice, however, one finds that over a third of the mothers of high school girls are employed. Thus, the opportunity for mothers' teaching is limited to pouring cereals, making instant coffee and sewing on an occasional button. Of the two-thirds who are not involved in outside employment, many have stated "I don't know how I would find time to teach my daughter the things she learns in Home Economics." If we keep track of the objectors to Home Economics, we would probably find the vast majority would be men. One could wonder how they would react to their idea if they had to take over mother's chores for a few days.

Aside from these comments, the context of the courses offer far more than the traditional cooking and sewing units. At present, it is roughly estimated that one out of five women are employed in either the food or clothing industry. Thus, for vocational preparation alone, Home Economics is a valuable part of a girl's high school training.

joys. A tally of the number of angers, resentments, jealousies, irritations, and rebellions that accumulate in just the child's first 10 years is ample evidence for the pain of maturing."

Aggression is the child's answer to these frustrations, says McNeill. "Aggression is important to the development of his personality. If he accepts the pressures of others passively, he acquires a psychic structure not of his own fashioning.

"Since children grow in a setting in which there are other children, aggression seems to be an inevitable consequence of living with others. Jealousy of other children, competition with them for a place in the family, and disputes over property are inescapable."

January 1 became generally accepted as New Year's Day in the 1500's when the Gregorian calendar was introduced. But the new year still begins on March 21 in Iran. And the Hindus have a different New Year's Day for each of their many religious groups.

Before a girl begins a unit in cooking or sewing, much pre-planning must be done. Students are instructed in the importance in following directions, they are taught the importance of accuracy in measurements, the care and maintenance of equipment. Also, students study the importance of well-balanced diets, and their effects on health. This is more important than we realize. For instance, in Hillsdale County, one of our better agricultural counties, a study was conducted on the food consumption of the school children in the county. Children were asked to record their menus for a two month period. The County Health Department then studied these menus and found less than 5 percent of the students were eating a well-balanced diet. Doctors are constantly stating we are the best fed but not the best nourished people in the world. If our future homemakers overcome this one fallacy alone, the courses would be completely justified.

Thus, whether we consider only the objectives of basic education, or the objectives of vocational preparation, or for practical homemaking, Home Economics is a vital and important part of the high school curriculum.

At present, the Home Economics room is a converted classroom. Soon the area under construction will be finished and the school will have an adequate instructional area.

Anyone interested in the course content of the Home Economics classes is welcome to visit the classes and discuss any idea you have with the Home Economics teacher, Miss Constance Claffey. Dean Van Landingham, Principal

James W. Metcalf

James Metcalf has produced an exciting and brilliant film on what is perhaps the most interesting and colorful area of the Western Hemisphere. Strung out like pearls on a string of beads, the West Indian islands stretch across the Caribbean in a huge semicircle. Starting with Jamaica, the necklace runs for four thousand miles and ends up in the curious "A. B. C." islands of the Netherlands Antilles, Aruba, Bonaire and Curacao. They also include Antigua, Martinique, Guadeloupe, St. Lucia, Grand Cayman, Barbados, Grenada, Tobago and Trinidad. He also filmed the tiny, out-of-the-way islands that the average traveler never sees. As a result, we will be privileged to visit such unusual places as St. Lucia with its steaming, drive-in volcano; Grenada, one of the world's foremost spice islands; and Tobago, the lovely island setting of Daniel Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe." We will witness pearls being sold by the half-bushel, the delicate beauty of the rare pink flamingo and the romance of old pirate strongholds. This is a true color masterpiece of the exotic Caribbean featuring on-the-spot recorded musical backgrounds, and presented by a highly talented travelogue artist.
