Forest Hills Debaters At Work on Arguments In 1960 Competitions

Forest Hills Debate team under the direction of Phillip Fletcher, is one of 232 Michigan High Schools who have launched their highly competitive interscholastic debate season.

Second largest in the nation, the debate program is conducted by the Michigan High School Forensic Association under the sponsorship of The University of Michigan Bureau of School Services.

State Forensic Manager, M. L. Cabbage estimates 1,500 Michigan High School students will participate in 1,500 judged debates during the 1960-61 year.

The 1960-61 debate topic is: "Resolved, that the United Nations should be significantly strengthened."

Schools participate in four "at home" and four "away" debates during the regular season which ends in February with the start of elimination tournaments.

The Superintendent's Corner

The New Library which is now under construction at the high school was designed cooperatively by the Board of Education, the school Administrators, and the architect, Perkins and Will, of Chicago. Its plan was approved by the accrediting department of the University of Michigan.

Because of the uniqueness of the design and the flattering picture which appeared in a local newspaper recently, a few taxpayers have expressed the fear that it will be a costly building. However, this is not true due to the Board's insistence that the cost be kept within bounds. As a result, although the building departs from the design of the other buildings on the grounds, its cost per square foot is the same as it would have been were it a plain rectangular

Cascade Christian Church To Hold Annual Christmas Work Shop, December 3

The Cascade Christian Church will hold its annual Christmas Workshop on Saturday, December 3rd. From 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. the Fellowship Hall will be crammed with children and adults working side by side on many beautiful and useful home decorations and gifts.

Nylon net wreaths hand decorated wooden bowls, jewelry, door decorations, mosaic tile trivets and candy dishes, napkin holders and felt craft ideas, as well as all types of leather craft gifts, tree decorations from egg cartons, several kinds of angels, wren houses and feeder stations, are some of the projects.

A repeat from last year will be the candles made from sheets of beeswax. There will be a table where even the youngest can do an apron and decorate his or her own Santa Claus cookie.

There will be several demonstrations on cake decorating and on wreath making; also ideas with evergreens and pine cones.

The idea table will be loaded with centerpieces, mantle and table displays and many clever ideas to enhance the holidays.

Several ways of making your own Nativity scenes will be displayed.

The Cradle Roll Guild will again have a cookie bar where a sample cookie and the recipe can be purchased. The Deacons Guild will serve luncheon and dinner at a nominal cost. Coffee and donuts will be available all day.

This is not a money making venture—but rather a project to revive the true Christmas Spirit. Families are being invited to come together, planning on spending several hours, in which to make many decorative items for their home, and many lovely gifts.

Everything is sold at cost, for we believe sincerely that it is not what something costs, but the thought and love that goes into the gift that counts.

This is one experience you won't want to miss: The Christmas Workshop—December 3—Cascade Christian Church.

Groom Gifted To Lead, Says U-M Professor

Because democracy's survival rests on the shoulders of future intellectual leaders, Americans are realizing that schools should pay increasing attention to gifted students, says a University of Michigan professor of Latin.

"A good deal of the out-dated opposition to ability grouping on grounds that it is anti-democratic has disappeared," Prof. Frank O. Copley (Ph. D.) reports.

Dr. Copley says the Advanced Placement Program, which he describes as "the most practical, sensible and realistic program" in existence for superior and talented students, "is making itself felt all over Michigan, particularly in the southeastern corner of the state."

Dr. Copley has made an 18 month tour as a consultant to Michigan schools on programs for superior and talented students. A grant from the Carnegie Corporation financed the tour.

Advanced Placement classes can be set up in several ways. Dr. Copley says the best is special classes for those in the program.

When this can't be done, students may work on advanced placement courses by independent study or by completing work additional to that required by regularly offered school classes, he explains. Student report to instructors on their progress and for supervision.

"In such cases it is interesting to see what the student does on his own. With course syllabi and instructions to report on their progress. Some proceed remarkably, but they were mainly students with strong moral fiber and bright intellectual outlook."

A third method is the "out of hours class" where students voluntarily meet with teachers outside regular school time—sometimes in the teachers' homes. Dr. Copley reports that one teacher found it difficult to get students to leave after lessons.

"One of the most popular forms of ability grouping is the 20-60-20 method," he says, explaining that the 20 represents students with demonstrated intellectual talent, the middle 60 is the largely undifferentiated group, while the lower 20 symbolizes slower students.

"This approach is more suited for the moderate or middle-sized schools and is more practical than elaborate groupings which sometimes involve as many as 15 groups. Only large schools usually attempt such elaborate ability grouping."

Eagles, hawks, and owls are protected members of Michigan birdhood. It is illegal to molest or kill these birds or to remove or destroy their nests, eggs, or young save for one exception. Farmers or landowners may kill hawks or owls (not eagles!) on lands they own or occupy IF these birds are doing REAL damage to poultry or domestic animals. Eagles are fully protected in Michigan. Staring at you (clockwise from bottom to top) are an immature bald eagle, a young redtail hawk, and half-grown great horned owl. Stiff penalties stand behind their legal protection.

1960 Cooks Find Thanksgiving Menu Preparation Easy

The Pilgrim homemaker boiled and toiled for days to prepare for the first Thanksgiving dinner in 1621. But, thanks to methods of food preservation she never dreamed of, her modern sister can put a similar feast on the table in a matter of hours.

It was almost 200 years after Governor William Bradford decreed a day of thanksgiving that canning was invented. A candymaker named Nicolas Appert published the report of his invention in 1810, after collecting the prize of 12,000 francs that the French government had offered for a method of preserving food for its troops.

Now the housewife can simply open a can of mince-meat, pumpkin, or cranberry sauce—or any of the other foods that bring the yearly retail value of canned foods to approximately $4.5 billion.

Or, she can roast a frozen turkey and open a package of frozen corn, part of the $2 billion worth of frozen food that is produced annually. The Pilgrims probably kept some foods on ice, but it was the mechanical refrigeration developed in the late 1800's and the quick-freezing process of Clarence Birds-eye developed in the 1920's that made freezing an important means of food preservation.

In Thanksgiving dinners yet to come, the housewife may serve a freeze-dried turkey, one that has been quick-frozen and the moisture removed. Freeze-drying was used in the days of the Pilgrims but only for preserving biological specimens in the laboratory. Just a few decades ago, scientists began to apply this method to food. A shipment of freeze-dried food currently is nourishing the World Book Encyclopedia Scientific Expedition to the Himalaya, led by Sir Edmund Hillary.

Recently scientists have been experimenting with irradiation as a method of preserving food. If further experiments are successful, tomorrow's turkey dinner may be chock full of gamma rays.

Question Value of Flu Shots Worth

To have, or not to have flu shots? That is a question thousands of persons ask themselves at this time every year, and it's a good question doctors at the state health department say.

In the fall and winter months of 1957-58 and again in the first three months of this year, the occurrence of epidemic influenza served to re-emphasize the fact that influenza is still a major contributing cause of death.

Studies made by the U. S. Public Health Service and the Michigan Department of Health reveal that thousands of flu-associated deaths might have been prevented through vaccination. The vast majority of the deaths occurred among high-risk groups, particularly the aged, the chronically ill, and the pregnant.

Therefore, Dr. Albert E. Heustis, state health commissioner, is urging persons in these high-risk groups to see their doctors about vaccination against the flu as soon as possible. The most vulnerable are people over 65 years old, pregnant women, and persons suffering from diseases of the heart, kidney, and lungs.

There is an opinion, and usually a valid one according to the commissioner, that sometimes the effects of flu shots can be almost as bad as having the disease itself. Since the flu virus from which the vaccine is made is grown in chick embryos, persons sensitive to eggs or egg products are advised by their physicians to skip the shots. Non-sensitive people normally will not experience reactions.

The vaccine now commercially available prevents about 7 out of 10 cases of flu, including the Asian strain. Two shots given two to four weeks apart provides protection for the current season only. New protection must be obtained each year.

Mental Health Needs Defining, Says U-M Prof.

It's hard to talk about "emotionally disturbed children" till we know what "good mental health" is, a University of Michigan psychiatrist says.

Dr. Jack C. Westman, assistant professor of psychiatry at the Children's Psychiatric Hospital of the University Medical Center, says that a hard and fast definition of "mental health" is lacking because "The signs and symptoms of emotional disorder are not as clear-cut as those of physical disease."

Another problem is that members of the family, involved in the child's troubles, may be the last to notice anything wrong with him. For these reasons, the school has been found to be a reasonably efficient screening device for discovering emotionally disturbed children, Westman explains.

He lists some of the "danger signs" often thought to be indicative of emotional problems. Although not conclusive, they are:

1. The child works far below his intellectual capacity. His grades are low.
2. He may have specific learning disabilities. For example, he can do work not dependent upon reading.
3. He may have difficulty in accepting the authority of teachers and adults.
4. He may not get along well with other children, being either overly aggressive or extremely passive and withdrawn.

It's always well to remember that big words do not always convey big thoughts.

Pilgrims Brought Their Own Turkeys

We can thank the Pilgrim Fathers for that delicious turkey on Thanksgiving Day, says Warren W. Chase, chairman of the Department of Wildlife Management at The University of Michigan.

"Domestic turkeys were brought to this country by the Pilgrims," he says. "Most of us have always assumed that the Thanksgiving food of the Plymouth Rock Colony was the wild turkey, but it's been well documented that the people who came over on the Mayflower, as well as other groups arriving in the early 1600's, brought domestic turkeys with them.

"Just the same, these were American birds originally," says Chase. "Domesticated first by the Aztecs of Mexico, the turkeys were taken to Europe by the Spaniards after the conquest of Mexico which was completed in 1521."

Chase explains that at the time of the Spanish conquest, the Aztec Indians had reached a high degree of culture and large flocks of domesticated turkeys were found in their possession. Meanwhile, the American Indians, still savage, had not domesticated the turkey.

"From Spain the domestic turkey rapidly spread over continental Europe and the British Isles. The turkey first appeared in England about 1524. Domestic turkeys were probably brought to France before 1543, into Germany about 1530, and into Italy in 1557.

"The domestic turkey brought here by the Pilgrims by the circuitous Mexican-European route, had a marked effect upon the North American wild stock due to hybridization. It is well known that the domestic form has interbred with all races of the wild turkey."

"As early as 1760, settlers noted that the wild turkey was becoming less abundant. It was rare in New England by 1843. The last wild turkey was killed in Michigan in 1897. However efforts in stocking are bringing the wild turkey back in selected areas," Chase points out.

Christmas At the County Jail

Each year, Sheriff Arnold Pigorsch, working with Chaplain Leland Hoyer and the churches in the community, have endeavored to infuse some of the Christmas spirit into the cold realities of the jail.

In addition to special Protestant and Catholic services, each person in the jail is remembered with a small Christmas package. These are collected and distributed by the Chaplain and some of the people of the community.

These packages usually contain a candy bar, some toilet article and some notions. Some of the basic articles suggested for men are: tooth brushes, tooth paste, soap, shaving cream, blades (Gillette thin only), handkerchiefs, combs, fruit, candy, hair brushes, religious articles and books.

For the women, powder, deodorant, hair cream, tooth brushes and tooth paste, perfume, combs, bobby pins, emory boards, fruit, candy, jewelry, books, religious articles and undergarments.

Those who are interested in participating in this project are invited to do so individually or in groups. Items for both men and women may be taken or sent direct to the jail. If money is contributed checks should be made payable to "Christmas at the Jail" in care of Kent, City Sheriff, 701 Ball Ave. N. E.

Plastic Rain Coat That Breathes, Now on Market

A raincoat that is waterproof and at the same time cool. If you've sweltered in plastic raincoats and been soaked in water-repellent ones, this will be good news to you, according to Eleanor Densmore, County Extension Agent in Home Economics.

A new finish has been developed for rain wear that lets the fabric "breathe" so that body heat passes through yet rain does not. This finish is described as an ultra-thin microporous plastic resin coating applied to the fabric surface. Treated with heat, the resin swells and forms honeycombs of tiny interconnected holes. These billions of small openings do the trick. Air and body vapors and heat pass through them but water doesn't.

When and where can you get a raincoat like that? Just as soon as the manufacturers can get some made up. The fabric has been made available to them and they will be quick to take advantage of it. So before very long you'll be finding it made up in rain wear. The finish has been applied to cotton poplins and twills, dacron and cotton blends and nylon taffetas. It is expected to eventually find its way into children's clothing and gear for hunters, fishermen and skiers.

More Flexible Fiber On Market is Wool

The most flexible and pliable fiber you can find today has been around for many years. It's wool. Fabrics from wool can be shaped through shrinking and stretching with steam to be fitted smoothly over curves or eased along edges.

Eleanor Mullikin, home economist at Michigan State University, explains that there are two general types of wool fabrics—woolens and worsteds. Each type lends special characteristics to finished garments.

Woolen fabrics are woven from soft, loosely-spun woolen yarns. The fabrics drape into folds and may be gathered.

Worsted fabrics are made from tightly twisted yarns and produce springy fabrics. These are unsuited for draping, but the firm construction lends itself to sharp folds, pleats and crease lines. Worsted fabrics resist wrinkling and are capable of holding a press, so they are especially good for tailored garments.

Keep Ponds Ready for Fire Protection

Farm-pond owners can get some cheap fire protection by keeping a hole open in the pond ice this winter.

"Sounds difficult, but it really isn't," says Richard Pfister, agricultural safety engineer at Michigan State University.

Farm fire dangers hit a peak in the winter, he says. Ice makes matters worse by sealing up natural water supplies needed to fight fires.

Pfister notes that very few of Michigan's several thousand farm ponds have devices to make water readily accessible in winter.

He mentions several easy-to-install types of "access hydrants."

One is wooden barrel containing a brine solution of four pounds of salt per gallon of water. The covered barrel is put in a pond with its top above the ice. The bottom should extend below the ice layer.

In case of fire, a farmer can simply knock out the bottom of the barrel and insert a suction hose.

Another device is a soft plastic wastebasket at least 20-inches high. A hole can be cut in the ice and the wastebasket inserted and weighted with enough bags of gravel to push it 12 to 15 inches below the surface.

When water is needed, the bags can be lifted out. A pull on one side of the basket will free it from the ice. Water buoyancy will help push the basket loose.

A third type is a dry hydrant. A pipe is extended from the bottom of a pond, river or creek to a point near key buildings. The pipe acts like a regular fire hydrant except there is no water pressure. Water must be pulled through with a pump.

"Ice fishermen also might use the barrel or wastebasket type of access hydrant," Pfister points out.

This Week Dedicated to Crop Thanksgiving Help; Local Leaders Involved

The week of November 20-27 is being observed as CROP week throughout Kent County by the Kent County Council of Churches, with special offerings and special fund raising projects under way to provide funds for a hot meal program for school children in Hong Kong. Many churches will hold special offerings at the Thanksgiving service for CROP.

This year's goal for Kent County is $5,000, the entire sum to be earmarked to buy rice in southern states to be shipped to Hong Kong. With other groups providing the meats and with labor provided in the area, it is estimated that $0.00 given in this way will provide one hot meal a day for one child for one year.

Don Oosterhouse, local attorney and Kent County CROP Chairman, reports that local representatives have been provided in most participating churches, as well as with the County Grange and other interested agencies. He also states that anyone not otherwise contacted who desires to give may do so by mailing contributions directly to CROP, c-o Kent County Council of Churches, 3 Federal Square building in Grand Rapids.

CROP (Christian Rural Overseas Program) is the disaster feeding and self-help arm of the World Service Division of the National Council of Churches.

CROP representatives in the Lowell area are Rev. David H. Debbink, 212 N. Hudson Street, minister of the Lowell Congregational church; Kenneth Pletcher of 418 Riverside Drive. The Ada area is represented by Rev. A. C. Brewer Congregational minister, 7175 Bronson Street, and by Mrs. Jay Liefbroer of Route 1, Ada.
