A Cincinnati driver caught speeding was fined $11.00. He swore off speeding. When the police cruiser followed him recently, he decided to play it safe and slowed down to 11 miles per hour. You guessed it. He got another ticket. This time for driving too slowly.

Airport Boosters Stage Air Show

Lowell flying enthusiasts announced this week the formation of the Lowell Airport Association which is composed of local businessmen, aircraft owners of this general area, pilots, and people who neither have a pilots license nor own aircraft. All are interested in the progress of aviation as it relates to this city and air progress in general.

The purpose is to promote the use of aircraft for both business and pleasure, and to help develop facilities at the Lowell airport along with improvements to runways, with the sincere belief that such action will attract more users to this area, and will be a definite attraction to any new industry which may now be contemplating this city as a location for a new plant.

To kick off their program, arrangements have been made to stage an Air show on Sunday, August 27, at 2 p. m. Details on this show will be announced at a later date.

A cordial invitation is extended to all who would be interested in joining this association to attend the next meeting which will be held at the Lowell City Hall, on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, August 10. The only requirement for membership is a sincere belief in the future of aviation and what it can do for this City.

Flat River Junior Rodeo Only Such Event in Area

Curly Howard's, Lowell Flat River Junior Rodeo, is the only Junior Rodeo in the entire mid-west. Young people bring their horses from all parts of the state to participate in the many events that take place within the Flat River Arena.

The best riders in the state are challenged at each event as newcomers come to the rodeos from as far away as Lansing, Hesperia, Homer, Ravenna, Holland, Saginaw, Zeeland, Grand Ledge, Adrian, the Pincomming areas and other parts of the state.

The rules for the Junior Rodeo are somewhat modified from the regular rodeos. These Junior Rodeos are largely family affairs, where the parents cheer from the grandstands, while their youngsters compete for the ribbons and monetary prizes.

Curly Howard is the sponsor of the Flat River Junior Rodeos and is heavily supported by the merchants of Lowell.

Keith Avery, a teacher at Lowell High School, and a veteran calf-roper, has spent a lot of time with the youngsters and their animals, and has taught them a good deal about the rodeo life. Mr. Avery also judges at the events.

There will be a Season's Championship trophy presented to the horses and the riders in each event for the year. Also a high-point trophy will be presented to the "all-around cowboy." The high-point trophies will be presented August 11, the last Friday night show of the season.

The Championship Rodeo will be September 9, at the Flat River Arena in Lowell.

PARIS GRANGE MEETING

The Paris Grange will meet on Friday evening, August 11, for a meeting at the Hall at 8 p. m.

New Grocery Warehouse Near Cascade

Douglas A. Grimes, president of Super Food Services, announced this week that plans have been completed to build a 250,000 square foot warehouse 3 miles southwest of Cascade on Patterson Road about a mile south of 28th Street.

The warehouse will have about 100 employees and will be a real boost to the Forest Hills area.

H. F. Campbell Construction Co., will be the general contractor. The new warehouse will handle both dry groceries and perishables.

"We are growing and we find our present facilities inadequate for our expansion program in Michigan," Grimes said. "We selected Grand Rapids for our new warehouse because of its proximity to the center of our present service area."

He said that Super Food's warehouse, Standard Grocery Company in Holland, Michigan, now services 137 retailers, of which 113 are Independent Grocers' Alliance stores and 24 are contract retailers.

Super Food Services, Inc., a large publicly owned company in the grocery distribution field, was formed only four years ago and now services more than 800 IGA and other independent grocery stores in Ohio, New York, Florida, and Michigan.

Blueberrie Season To Peak in August

Michigan blueberries wee late getting to market this year. . . . but those who enjoy the purple-ripe berries, will find peak quantities in August, says Virginia Helt, Michigan State University Food Agent for Grand Rapids area. Fifty per cent of the Michigan crop is marketed fresh. The other half goes to processors. Sixty to seventy-five per cent of the berries that processors buy go into 30-lb. tins to restaurants and institutions for the increasingly favorite blueberry pies, waffles and muffins. Only five per cent of the processed packages and containers for retail sales.

Michigan Blueberry Growers Association sells about 95 per cent of the Michigan crop. On the fresh market, blueberries are sold in two classes. Top classification called "Great Lakes" berries are uually larger berries as compared to the "Lake States" graded berries.

Blueberries can go to the freezer either with a 40 per cent sirup, or 1 cup of sugar with 5 cups of fruit, or packed dry without sugar. Homemakers who complain about tough blueberries after freezing will be interested in the Washington State Experiment Station findings which shows that berries frozen in sirup had a finer flavor and more tender texture than those frozen with dry sugar or without sweetening. Those frozen in sirup or dry sugar were more attractive in appearance and superior in texture to the unsweetened pack.

Educators Point Out Ways To Help Children in School

"Should I teach my child the alphabet before he starts to school?" "When my child doesn't know a word in his reading book, should I tell him what it is?" "I tell my child to 'sound out' words he does not know. Is that right?"
These are just a few of the questions parents ask teachers about their children's reading.

The first "R" is a subject about which parents are deeply concerned. They know that reading is a basic tool their child will need for success through out his entire school and college careers. They know that a youngster with reading disabilities is seriously handicapped in keeping up with class work, textwork, and supplementary reading.

One of the questions most frequently asked by parents is "Should I help my child to read—and if so, how can I go about it?"

According to the Michigan and National Education Associations, parents can do many practical things to help their children develop reading skills:

Help Pre-Schoolers

If your child is curious and is making comments about letters, there is not reason why he should not become familiar with the alphabet before he starts school. Playing with alphabet blocks is a good way for him to become acquainted with letters. You need not drill him or otherwise "force" learning.

Make books an important part of his life. Read to him daily; let him talk about the stories and ask him questions about the pictures. Ask him to point out pictured objects that are alike and different in shape and color. This activity helps him to observe small differences in the shapes of letters and words when learning to read.

Avoid baby talk. Speak to your child in "adult" language now, so he will recognize words he sees and hears in the classroom.

Give him a variety of experiences. Take him to the zoo, the park, or the airport. Tell him the names of the animals and flowers. From time to time, give your child simple, consecutive instructions. For example: "Pick up the ball, then bounce it, then put on the tabel." Make a game out of it. Such activities will help your child develop memory skills and follow directions accurately.

Help in Grades 1, 2, and 3

Have your child's sight and hearing checked prior to entrance into the first grade and periodically after that.

If he wants to read aloud to you from his school book, listen attentively.

When he reads aloud to you, don't try to use teaching techniques, such as having him "sound out" words. Instead, enjoy the story together, discuss the plot, praise him for reading well.

Give him extra opportunities to read. Let him read the directions for a new game or for assembling model airplanes.

Introduce him to the public library. Get a library card for him. Let him choose the books he wants, rather than the books you feel he should read. Buy books for him too. Let your child see you reading frequently.

If you child has been in school two years and has difficulty reading his school books, or has a strong dislike for reading, ask his teacher whether he needs remedial reading help.

Help in Grades 4, 5, and 6

Provide your child with a reliable home dictionary and encyclopedia. Encourage him to look up subjects that interest or puzzle him.

Encourage him to read more by subscribing to a children's magazine.

If he's not enthusiastic about reading, tempt him with books on subjects sure to interest him—books on his favorite sport or hobby.

If he's a television fan, see which programs he prefers and give him books on the same subject.

If he's an avid comic-book reader, don't make a big issue of it. Also provide him with other, more worthwhile, books that offer him lively adventure in an easy-to-read format.

If Your Child Has Trouble

Don't become irritated and disgusted with him. Your anxiety will make him so resentful and discouraged that his reading difficulties will increase.

Don't compare his reading with other, more successful, young readers in his family. Such comparisons make a youngster feel inept and inferior and may keep him from reading.

Don't air his reading difficulties in front of the family or visitors.

Don't try to solve his reading problems yourself. Have a conference with his teacher. If she thinks he needs remedial reading help or consultation with the school psychologist, take her expert advice.

Give him opportunities to do things at which he excels. Praise him for his skills at baseball or drawing pictures. When he knows he is good at something, he will not feel inferior because he can't read as well as others of his age.

The driver who laughs at the law often receives recognition post-humorously.

Signs of The Times for State Forests

Hundreds of new, rustic signs like those above have been added in Michigan's state forests this year to give visitors a better, broader idea of multiple use management at work on these public lands. Through its expanding efforts to help state forest users enjoy and appreciate what they see, the Conservation Department has posted signs marking Kirtland's warbler, prairie chicken, and blueberry management areas, various types of timber cuttings, wildlife floodings, campgrounds, hunting and fishing access sites, and a host of other projects and wild land points of interest. Small panels are included under signs for projects such as forest plantations and managed openings to tell what type of work has been done and when. Some of the signs are along campground foot trails which are also fairly new and designed to increase the visitor's enjoyment of his state forest lands.--Mich. Dept. of Conservation

Insect Stings Are Dangerous

"Probably the first allergic disease described is that of insect allergy," says Dr. Peter P. Barlow of the University of Michigan Medical Center.

"In 2641 B. C. King Menes of Egypt met his death following a wasp or hornet sting," Dr. Barlow recalls. "Over the years, there have been occasional isolated reports of death due to insect stings. Some sudden deaths reported as due to heart failure or heat prostration may really be cases of allergic reactions to stings, Dr. Barlow says, adding that everyone reacts to the stings of bees and wasps—there is pain, redness, probably swelling, and it may last one or two days.

This is a normal reaction to the insect's venom, he explains, while an allergic reaction to an insect "is either a very severe reaction at the site of the sting (such as swelling), or other reaction such as asthma, hay fever, hives, or allergic shock."

Dr. Barlow explains that according to the principles of immunology, we build up an immunity to certain diseases either by vaccination or by actually having the disease. Our bodies form protective antibodies in the blood when we are first exposed to a harmful agent. Occasionally when the antibody combines with the offending agent, allergic shock, called "anaphylaxis," may occur due to the liberation of certain chemicals.

This severe reaction is generally associated with a sudden massive exposure to the offending agent such as could be caused by injection through a bee's "hypodermic needle." Allergic reaction is rare the first time one is stung.

To keep from being stung avoid looking like a bear, Dr. Barlow recommends. Scientists believe that any appearance or activity of a human which imitates a bear may cause him to be stung since the bear is the natural enemy of the bee. Physicians can prescribe drugs to carry for persons allergic to insect stings.

Dr. Barlow discussed the subject on a program of the U-M Broadcasting Service (WOOM).

The nirvana of the average American is plenty of money and no work to do it but it, too, remains a dream.

Although probably not recommended by safety experts, an Illinois company is now offering a device about the size of a cigarette pack that warns motorists when they are in a radar-controlled speed zone. The company claims the transistorized detector will automatically pick up any radar transmission . . . Three feet long fibrous glass shoes that enable the wearer to walk on water will be among U. Spectacular Climax For Ionia Fair

Two particularly outstanding, special programs have been booked to provide a climax for the 1961 Ionia Free Fair, which will end its six-day run on Saturday night, August 12.

The special Friday afternoon feature before the grandstand will be the Buss Carson Hollywood Golden Horses Western Thrill Show. Coming to Ionia from the motion picture capital of the world, the show features many exciting acts and stars of the western field.

Golden dancing palaminoes perform in an array of color and excitement. A feature of the show is the precision drill work of the five horse liberty drill unit. Trick riding and trick roping, both exciting enough, are just two of the western type stunts which will be performed. The Dalmatian Dog Act, acclaimed the world's greatest, is sure to delight young and old alike.

Headliners of the Friday afternoon entertainment will be Doug and Buss Carson, stars of the western field, who will feature guitar playing and singing. Doug has been under contract with Paramount Pictures and in TV, and has entertained at Hollywood's most famous night spot, the Moulin Rouge. The troupe has played shows all over the United States and Canada, including the famed Calgary Stampede and the Edmonton Round-up.

A complete change of pace is promised for Saturday afternoon, August 12, when the Indianapolis-type auto races take to the track for the full afternoon racing program. Ionia Free Fair officials are predicting record crowds for this afternoon event, which through the past years has proven to be one of the greatest crowd pleasers during the fair.

As a sanctioned program in the MVCCA line-up of great racing events, drivers will have an opportunity to win points toward the MVCCA championship.

Friday and Saturday evening, August 11-12, will give fair visitors their last chance to see the evening grandstand show, the "Parade of Stars." Shows both nights will begin at 8:30 p. m., and each evening will be concluded with a magnificent fireworks display, featuring a Grand Circus theme.

Prepared Cake Mixes Versus Home-made Cakes

Commercially prepared mixes are not necessarily more expensive than the same product made "from scratch" in the home. Research reports show that when leading brands of cake mixes are compared in cost to the same product homemade, there is little difference in price.

Many times the mix will cost less to serve than the homemade product. This is especially true of mixes like the angel food cake. When an angel cake is homemade the cost of the eggs plus the cost of other ingredients is more than the selling price of the mix. If made at home, the yolks will have to be used for some other purpose to come fairly close to breaking even in costs.

In general, the cost differences are generally small between the mix and the homemade product, but there is a difference in the keeping quality of the two products. A package cake or bread will tend to dry out faster than a cake made from the scratch, says Virginia Helt, Consumer Marketing Agent in the Grand Rapids area. Once a package mix has been prepared, it should be used quickly.

If you think you're one of the best drivers in the world remember some of the best are also in the cemetery.

THE Picnic Basket

By Barbara Ballast

Do you want something new, quick and easy for a treat on that picnic coming up? Or did someone drop in suddenly and you thought to yourself, "and I have absolutely nothing in the house to serve." Well, I came across some clever ideas that taste real good this week, so I thought I would pass them along to you. All you have to do is stock your cupboard with lots and lots of ready-to-bake refrigerator biscuits.

Sugar'n Spice Coffee Cake

2 packages of refrigerator biscuits
1/4 cup melted butter (1/2 stick)
2 tablespoons sugar
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
Dash of ground cloves, ginger, and nutmeg.

Melt butter in 8 to 9 inch round cake pan. Overlap biscuit in pan in a circle making sure each is coated with melted butter.

Sprinkle combined sugar and spices over biscuits and bake at 425 degrees for 10-12 minutes.

Garlic Sticks

These are good with soup, or just for snacks. Cut biscuit in half and shape halves into sticks 5 or 6 inches in length. Dip in milk, roll in crushed corn flakes and sprinkle with garlic salt. Place sticks on buttered baking sheet about 1 inch apart. Bake at 450 degrees for 7 to 10 minutes. Makes 20 sticks.

Confetti Doughnuts

Cut centers from ready to bake refrigerator biscuits. Use doughnut cutter or thimble. Preheat 1 quart salad oil to 400 degrees in electric skillet or other type pan. Fry doughnuts in hot oil for 3 to 4 minutes or until brown on both sides. Drain on an absorbent paper. Shake in powdered sugar or cinnamon and sugar, or glaze warm doughnuts with the following:

Confetti Toppings

Combine 1 cup sifted powdered sugar with 1 teaspoon of your favorite flavor of soft drink powder, a dash of salt, and 2 tablespoons of boiling water. Blend until smooth. Dip warm doughnuts into glaze. If desired, sprinkle with nuts, coconut, or decorating candies.

Individual Pizza

Spread biscuits into round thin pizza crusts and oil them. Top with your favorite pizza sauce and trimmings. Bake at 450 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes or until crust is baked and lightly browned.

Wednesday Safest Day On Michigan Highways

If you live your life with an eye on the averages and have an earnest desire to stay alive, you will do most of your driving on Wednesday.

According to James M. Hare, Chairman of the Michigan State Safety Commission, Wednesday is the "safest" day of the week on American highways. A recent evaluation of 1960 fatalities showed that 10.5 percent of the year's traffic deaths occurred on Wednesday.

"The deadliest day of the week continues to be Saturday," Hare said. "The 1960 figures show that 21.5 percent of the highway fatalities occurred on Saturday, up by two tenths percent above the 1959 averages."

Less deadly is Sunday, with 17.7 Tuesday with 11.6, Monday with 11.5, and Thursday with 11.2 percent.
