Area men plan cruise to High Island

Three adventurous area men will set out September 13 in a 22-foot cabin cruiser to journey to Beaver Island, just off Charlevoix, and then on to High Island, seven miles out from Beaver Island.

High Island was formerly known as Hog Island, as the early settlers of Beaver Island gave King Strang the right to let his hogs graze on this is-

The cruiser will be ladened with supplies, hunting gear, and hunting dogs, as the men will be hunting for partridge in a special season, that is open only on High Island.

The island is totally uninhabited and consequently has no modern conveniences.

Todd Merrill and Fred Shorey, both of Greenwood Drive, and Don Rink of Kettle Lake Drive, will be really roughing it as did the old time hunters.

All three men are avid hunters and hunt for anything that is in open season.

LONGEST CENTER AISLE

Luci Johnson's trip to join Pat Nugent at the altar has set a record. The National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception has the longest center aisle of any American Catholic Church. The Shrine, dedicated in 1959 but not yet completed, is the largest Catholic Church in the U. S. and the seventh largest

Marja Jukola arrives from Nokia, Finland

Marja Jukola from Nokia, Finland, arrived in Grand Rap-ids on August 27. She came on a boat from Bremen Haven to Montreal with about 400 Youth for Understanding students from different European Countries; 100 of them were from Finland.

Among them there were also returning American summer exchange students.

Marja's father, Aro Jukola, is a car salesman in Tampere, and her mother is a maternity nurse. She has one sister, 19, who is on the last grade in a Finnish high school. Marja is 16-years-old.

She enjoys reading and tennis, and also sewing her own clothes. She will have two years at school, when she gets back ly?" Now there is an opening gambit that has long been almost a joke and yet recently I heard just such a question. It brought on a discussion that can be called beneficial to those who participated because it allowed the others to learn about books that they might care to read themselves.

THE CASCADE VILLAGER

Now that summer is over and students are returning to their classes, I wondered just what some of our people had been reading throughout the season. Were there any armchair dividends? One fact that I discovered was that no one with whom I talked had ready anything to be had ready anything too heavy and also no one had read anything on the current best seller lists. Perhaps I didn't call the right people, but summer does seem to be a time when readers are picking up books simply for entertainment. A number of persons said that they had only had time for magazines while one man told me that he had read only maps all summer. Well, it's nice to be able to travel, but those that stayed in one spot and did read made some interesting comments.

Sharon Roe, for instance, declared that her favorite book of the summer was "Flight of the Falcon" by Daphne duMaurier. She commented, "It was an exciting story set in Italy about students at a university (Sharon is a third year student at Michigan State) and some unusual adults who influence their lives. There is mystery and atmosphere that build to a tremendous climax."

Sharon's mother, Mrs. R. J. (Mary Ann) Roe, said that she had read a number of books throughout the summer, but two remained most vividly with her were "The Judas Tree" by A. J. Cronin and "The Fountain-head" by Ayn Rand. Neither is a new book, but Mrs. Roe said that she was glad that she had picked them up. "The first one, by Cronin, was so skillfully plotted and the characters so well defined," she said, "that I felt I was watching a stage olay. The second book, the one Ayn Rand, was something missed long ago, and it delivered such a whallop that I am sorry I had never discovered it before. It was definitely not a waste of time."

John Allen reported that every summer he rereads an old favorite. Sometimes a book like 'Huck Finn' of "Lost Hori-This summer he tried 'Kenilworth" by Scott. "I remembered it from years ago as an intriguing story of adventure which lead me on from chapter to chapter until I reached the final climax. It was as good this time as before and as an adult I found the court politics even more enlighten-

Thomas Conner said, "My wife finally got me to read the Jeane Dixon story by Ruth Montgomery. The book that tells about her predictions. I wasn't nearly as interested in the predictions she made for public figures or world events; she does live in Washington where scrapes of information could reach her about them, but the insight she had about her friends and impossible to tell circumstances that woud befall them were the fascinating parts to me. Of course, the author doesn't tell you about many failures . . . maybe there aren't many, but the whole situation leaves you wondering what else is in heaven and earth that we don't understand.

Out of the many books that Mrs. Mike (Dottie) Vekasi read, she said that probably the one inac Island" by Alexander Henry. It is the true story written by the first trader there in the language of 1763. It has been reedited and reissued just recently after having once been published in the early 1800's. He tells about living with an Indian who called him brother for a year of fear while other whites were being slaughtered. Mrs. Vekasi felt that since it was all true and part of our history, it was a book she would long remember. With all of the flotsam and jetsam washed on the shore of books, there is a beachhead of fine books available; sturdy classics that hold the land thru the ages. And the many books of sheer entertainment that make up the clear sands of the beach can be read for entertainment and escapsism. But isn't it a shame that it takes as long to read a bad book as it does a good one?

"Books," wrote Thoreau in his own classic, "Walden," must be read as deliberately and reservedly as they were written." To which, for the armchair record, let's add: "And they should be chosen as deliberately and reservedly as they are read." they are read.'

Sense of time slow or fast

How can you tell whether your sense of time is running fast or slow?

Take this brief test, which is based on the Knapp Time Metaphor Scale. To take the test. simply check which metaphors most aptly describe your feel-

I think of time as: a vast expanse of sky; a road leading over a hill; a speeding train; a massive glacier; a galloping horseman; a fleeing thief; a quiet, motionless ocean; a fast moving shuttle.

Western Reserve University studies show that persons whose mental closks run slower than mechanical clocks tend to pick the swift images just listed as most fitting to describe the passage of time.

Trouble spots? Not with electricity; solution found for electric heat

ble spots" in a house can readily be solved with electric heating because of the many specialized types of equipment

Each room in an electrically heated house can have the kind of equipment best suited to that room's particular requirements as determined by the use for which the room is intended or by its construction. Obviously, recreation room should be heated differently than a bathroom. A room with floor-to-ceiling glass walls presents a problem not found in a room with just a few, small windows.

A house in Sidney, Ohio, illustrates the versatility of electric heating. The home of Herb Schlater, an experienced electric heating contractor, has seven different types of heating equipment.

A member of the Board of Governors and the National Marketing Committee of the National Electrical Contractors Association, Mr. Schlater is one of hundreds of NECA contractors who are graduates of the Association's Electric Comfort Course and are certified to sell, design, and install electric comfort systems. Mr. Schlater's house is built on a lot that slopes down from front to rear. The back of the completely finished basement is at ground level, opening onto a backyard patio.

The seven types of electric heating equipment installed by Mr. Schlater in his own home are ceiling cable, floor cable, baseboard, a sunlamp, wallmounted units, a portable heater, and a quartz, infra-red heater. The quartz, infra-red unit is not used for comfort heating but to keep casseroles and other food hot and to defrost food quickly.

The infra-red heater is mounted on the underside of a kitchen wall cabinet directly above a section of counter. Because of the nature of his work, Mr. Schlater often is forced to be late for meals, and Mrs. Schlater simply slides the cooked food under the heater to keep it warm without over-cooking it.

The basement level of the Schlater home contains bedrooms for the two Schlater boys, a bathroom, a hallway, a recreation room, and a storage

A novel system of heating the two bedrooms uses two types of equipment. Heating cable in the concrete floor keeps it pleasantly warm and dry all the time, while the main source of heat consists of baseboard units. Baseboard units also heat the

The bathroom is heated by floor cable plus a sunlamp recessed in the ceiling, which provides the instant high heat that a person welcomes when he steps dripping wet from the bathtub.

by 2- by 4-foot heating panels in the ceiling. One of the "trouble spots" in the Schlater house just inside the 6-foot-wide double sliding glass doors that lead from the recreation room to the patio, Mr. Schlater solved the problem by installing a ceiling panel directly above the doors. This effectively counteracts the loss of room heat to the cold glass surface.

A portable heater is kept in the storage room for use as needed. It can easily be moved to the adjoining garage when heat is wanted there.

The first floor of the house contains the living room, kitchen, laundry, family room, Mr. Schlater's home office, two bedrooms, and two-and-a-half baths. Ceiling cable, completely hidden from sight, is used for the entire space. In addition, the bathrooms have wall units with dual controls, thermostats to maintain the heat at a steady level and manual switches that allow the wall panels to be turned on at any time.

Dance studio scheduled to hold open house

Another new business to the area is the Academy of Dance Arts on Cascade Road, It is located where the Cascade Lumber Yard was previously located.

All traces of the lumber yard have been removed and it is taking on a very interesting appearance. It is a beautiful bright red with large white lettering on the exterior.

As one enters the building, into a large lovely reception room. The chairs have been salvaged from an old theater and will make a nice waiting spot for parents.

The studio area is large and well equipped. The one wall is lined with mirrors and the opposite wall with ballet bars. A lovely dressing room has been Ballet master, Edward Rif-fel (Mr. E) and Jazz and tap specialist, Rich Rahn (Mr. Rich) have done most of the remodeling themselves with the help of a few freinds and relatives. They are not only excellent dance teachers, but could easily hire out as carpenters and painters.

The studio is a much needed addition to the community. Mr. Rahn and Mr. Riffel, hope to really promote the "Thornapple Valley Children's Ballet." They hope to really make this a big attraction for the community.

They invite interested mothers to help in this new program, by acting as costume designers, in organization and i-deas. They plans to use the story book theme with this group in acting out in dance and pantomime the stories of Cinderella, Snow White, etc. The group would then be available to organizations, PTA's, and fund raising groups. Exercise classes are being formed for the ladies of the community. Physical fitness classes designed for that tired, a bit over-weight businessman, and the 10 to 13 year old boys to help them in their coordination for later sports activities are being formed. The exercise classes for both

Both instructors have a commendable background in the field of dance. In Chicago, they did a great deal with Church groups in planning programs to help raise funds for their various churches, and in producing the various skits that church organizations put on at the various religious seasons.

Mr. Riffel began his dance and drama training at an early age which prepared him well the future. He has toured the United States and Canada, has worked as an actor and dancer for television, films and clubs. He has studied with the finest of teachers, the last of which was the Ellis-DuBoulay School of Ballet in Chicago.

He studied 21/2 hours everyday, for eight years, to become a teacher. During this time, he performed as soloist with the Illinois Ballet Company and the Ballet Guild of Chicago.

Mr. Riffel has appeared with the Royal Ballet and London Festival Ballet during their Chicago engagements. With his knowledge of Cecchetti, Russian, English, French & Danish methods of training comes the ability to prepare students for whatever their future may hold. ever their future may hold.

Rich Rahn also is well qualified in his field of jazz and tap specialist. He has a fresh style and approach to modern jazz and tap which has brought him much success. His teaching soon gave him choregraphic recognition.

In March of 1964, he was asked to choreograph the Chicago Equity Touring Company of "The Music Man" as well as dance the male lead. Just recently choreographed the Port Huron Summer Theater Festials, two professional productions of "Bye-Bye Birdie" and "Guys and Dolls."

He has studied with some of the country's greatest exponents of dance and appeared with top show business personalities, and has been on the legitimate stage, numerous night club dates, television, professional tours traveling throughout the country and Canada. Has taught on the facilities of National Dance Master Conventions in Chicago, Wisconsin and Io-

Margie Duiven (Miss D) will be the instructor in the preschool introduction to dance.

Margie will be teaching the "introduction to dance" a rhythm and movement class designed especially for the preschoolers. Her 15 years of dance training in the area have added much to her creative talents . . further study in New York, Chicago, and her experiences in the dramatic field, make her original children's work one of high standards.

Her performances with the Grand Rapids Civic Light Opera Chivic Theater Circle Th ter. MSU's Children's Theater and television series, have given her the opportunity to use her talents to the fullest.

The many dramatic leads, dance roles, choreographic assignments and the experience of dancing with the professional company of "Music Carnival" in Cleveland, Ohio, provide her with a background of really artistic merit.

Miss Thornapple Valley will be present for the grand opening festivites on Friday and Saturday. Plan now to attend.

Get car off road after auto accident

Many of us view automobile accidents as something that happens to the other fellow. If this holds true during your driving career, consider yourself very fortunate. However, if you do become involved in an accident here are some important reminders:

After the accident, get your car off the road. Many persons think they should leave the car in the same position after the mishap. This idea is false and could lead to other accidents. Assist the injured, if any, and set up a warning signal or flag to guard the scene. Then contact the police.

If possible, get the names of several persons who saw the accident. It is wise not to depend on just one witness. After you have lined up your witnesses, do not talk about the accident with them. Leave the interviewing to your lawver. or the insurance company's lawyer. This is particularly important if you go to court afterwards.

Then follow the usual procedure of obtaining names and addresses of the other driver and passengers. Note the seat locations of each persons, check the time and place of the accident, the direction of the vehicles, movement, and the weather & road condition.

Next, call your insurance company. Phone the closest claim office and if you can't make contact there, call your agent at home. If the accident is serious the company may send a man to assist you. He can help you to get local auto repairs and post a bond, if necessary,

Regularity

By the time this article appears in print the summer va-cation months will have ended. Our children and young people have returned to their respective schools. In our churches we will again have a full schedule of activities. For this we are indeed thankful. It is wonderful to enjoy the weeks of summer when we may be free from the regular schedules of our well-charted lives. But it is good to return to the regularity of a full schedule of activities in our homes, schools and churches.

The beginning of this month is a good time for all of us to make a fresh start in respect to regularity in our spiritual life. It is so easy to neglect the reading of the Bible and prayer in our busy days. But the busier we are the more we need to take time to be holy. The best way to do that is to set aside a certain time for listening to God in Bible reading, and for responding in prayer. Church and Sunday School attendance now and then, whenever we feel like it, is a hit and miss affair which will only lead to less and less and not to more and more. We urge you to attend your church services and Sunday School each time they are held. We also confront you with the challenge of regular attendance at all of the activities of your church. Be a member in good and regular motion in your church!

"It will earn 4% at Union Bank!"

Naturally! At Union Bank, your savings earn a full 4% per annum, compounded and paid quarterly. You can save by mail - and we'll pay the postage. Or enjoy the ease and convenience of one of Union's 19 neighborhood offices and 7 drive-in facilities. Either way, you'll appreciate the care-full, thought-full service that has made Union one of America's fine banks. It takes only a moment to open your account.

BONUS INTEREST! Savings accounts opened at any Union Bank office by the 10th of the month earn interest from the 1st!

One of Imerica's fine banks - where some is one pleasant experience after mother
