

LOWELL JOURNAL

J. A. W. HINE, Editor and Publisher.

LOWELL,

MICHIGAN.

NEWS PARAGRAPHS

During a recent absence of Governor Chamberlain, of South Carolina, from the state, the governor of Georgia, Gwinnett, announced the sentence of a convicted murderer to that of twenty years imprisonment. The Governor had held his act of clemency, through counsel, have presented various charges to Mayor Wickham, containing a demand that he be removed from office. Wickham, however, has refused to resign, and has appealed to the Judge of the State for his protection.

The City of Lowell, records the discovery of a piece of Roman pavement which had been dug up recently in Pitt Street. While working on the sewer works, which were digging the foundation of new buildings. The pavement is tessellated in black and white, and is in excellent condition. The piece was found at about twelve feet below the surface.

We are complaining of very cold weather during our summer, the English journals are reporting that the temperature has been so low that it may cause a very little rain to fall, and that the wheat already in the ground will be damaged by frost, so that its quality will be much inferior to that of last year. The wheat is now at about twelve feet below the surface.

Wants us to complain of very cold weather during our summer, the English journals are reporting that the temperature has been so low that it may cause a very little rain to fall, and that the wheat already in the ground will be damaged by frost, so that its quality will be much inferior to that of last year. The wheat is now at about twelve feet below the surface.

WILLIAM BRAUN, a boy eight years old, was born in a new church in New Haven, Sunday evening. What shall be done with this class of young criminals? Whether they are possessed with malice, or are merely impulsive, it is difficult to say. They seem to commit state-prison offenses, whatever the motive power, it is equally dangerous in an eight or fourteen-year-old boy, as in a man who has reached manhood. What can be done with them? They are increasing in numbers far too fast.

PATRON Brown has been lately reminded of some cheerful remarks Andrew Johnson made to him four years ago. When Mr. Johnson was last seen, he laid his finger upon you! And yet you sit a poor, gaunt, emaciated corpse, and laugh in the face of the king of England, and the world! You stand upon the coffin of the ex-president, and Brownval sits smiling before an angry fire, rubbing his hands and saying, "Andy and I are both here, but he was the better man."

For the past five years the estimated wealth of the United States were:

Years      Value      Years      Value
1860      $1,000,000,000      1861      $1,200,000,000
1862      1,300,000,000      1863      1,500,000,000
1864      1,700,000,000      1865      1,900,000,000
1866      2,100,000,000      1867      2,300,000,000

No reliable data have been given for an estimate of the crop of 1875, and none can be obtained till the exact damage of the floods in Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, and Missouri, the first legislative assembly of which reported from the flooded regions indicate that the loss has been exaggerated. Taking into account the amount of grain lost in the great prairie states, and taking an average crop for the past five years would be too high to place the crop for this year at 200,000,000 bushels.

NORTHERN INDIANA is afflicted with a severe winter, and the roads have been closed with snow and ice. About seven weeks ago, this same section passed itself and the neighboring states of the most thoroughly organized and best equipped for winter. The name of Regulators, and by authority of a special enactment of their Legislature, the citizens organize, select, and elect their own officers, and the whole of the gang, and before an improved road leads to the town of Ligonier, Niles, Indiana, a great many of them have fled to the south. The men in the gang have been forced to death by others.

A woman in Georgia gives some interesting facts about the three railway lines of U.S.A. He notices that whereas formerly the railroads were built to suit the people who made them, so as to be as possible from the outside world, it is now a progressive railroad man, and his son, John W. Young, is mostly engaged in the construction of the railroads.

The railroads have been more than twice as large as the railroads in the United States, and the number of passengers carried has increased.

Young, in his report, says that the railroads in Georgia have made considerable progress in roasting a man in a nail, and the railroad companies have succeeded in acquiring considerable property from his brother, who had never been to Georgia, and before the end of the year, he will be a man of considerable wealth.

He also says that the railroads in Georgia have made considerable progress in roasting a man in a nail, and the railroad companies have succeeded in acquiring considerable property from his brother, who had never been to Georgia, and before the end of the year, he will be a man of considerable wealth.

Young, in his report, says that the railroads in Georgia have made considerable progress in roasting a man in a nail, and the railroad companies have succeeded in acquiring considerable property from his brother, who had never been to Georgia, and before the end of the year, he will be a man of considerable wealth.

Young, in his report, says that the railroads in Georgia have made considerable progress in roasting a man in a nail, and the railroad companies have succeeded in acquiring considerable property from his brother, who had never been to Georgia, and before the end of the year, he will be a man of considerable wealth.

Young, in his report, says that the railroads in Georgia have made considerable progress in roasting a man in a nail, and the railroad companies have succeeded in acquiring considerable property from his brother, who had never been to Georgia, and before the end of the year, he will be a man of considerable wealth.

Young, in his report, says that the railroads in Georgia have made considerable progress in roasting a man in a nail, and the railroad companies have succeeded in acquiring considerable property from his brother, who had never been to Georgia, and before the end of the year, he will be a man of considerable wealth.

Young, in his report, says that the railroads in Georgia have made considerable progress in roasting a man in a nail, and the railroad companies have succeeded in acquiring considerable property from his brother, who had never been to Georgia, and before the end of the year, he will be a man of considerable wealth.

Young, in his report, says that the railroads in Georgia have made considerable progress in roasting a man in a nail, and the railroad companies have succeeded in acquiring considerable property from his brother, who had never been to Georgia, and before the end of the year, he will be a man of considerable wealth.

Young, in his report, says that the railroads in Georgia have made considerable progress in roasting a man in a nail, and the railroad companies have succeeded in acquiring considerable property from his brother, who had never been to Georgia, and before the end of the year, he will be a man of considerable wealth.

Young, in his report, says that the railroads in Georgia have made considerable progress in roasting a man in a nail, and the railroad companies have succeeded in acquiring considerable property from his brother, who had never been to Georgia, and before the end of the year, he will be a man of considerable wealth.

Young, in his report, says that the railroads in Georgia have made considerable progress in roasting a man in a nail, and the railroad companies have succeeded in acquiring considerable property from his brother, who had never been to Georgia, and before the end of the year, he will be a man of considerable wealth.

Young, in his report, says that the railroads in Georgia have made considerable progress in roasting a man in a nail, and the railroad companies have succeeded in acquiring considerable property from his brother, who had never been to Georgia, and before the end of the year, he will be a man of considerable wealth.

Young, in his report, says that the railroads in Georgia have made considerable progress in roasting a man in a nail, and the railroad companies have succeeded in acquiring considerable property from his brother, who had never been to Georgia, and before the end of the year, he will be a man of considerable wealth.

NEWS BREVITIES

The Emancipation.

The Slave.

