A LEGAL DITTY.

Whereas on sundry boughs and sprays Now divers birds are heard to sing. And sundry flowers their heads upraise, Hail to the return of spring.

The songs of those said birds arouse
The memory of our youthful hours;
As green as those said sprays and boughs
As fresh and sweet as those said flowers. The birds aforesaid, happy pairs,
Love mid the aforesaid boughs enshrin
In freehold nest—themselves, their heirs,
Administrators, and assigns.

And then Moses called to mind how adroitly the deacon had evaded and played around that one point. It had been a heartless swindle. He went away by himself and sat down and re-was it that Moses Midwell called that seed that he let me have?"

"He called it, Crimson Oxalis."

However, Midwell knew something of horses, and was not afraid of being badly chested.

"But," said he to himself, "if he does cheat me intentionally, I shall try to get even with him."

So Mr. Moses Midwell called upon the deacon and made known his want.

"Ah! Midwell! son of my old friend!

I declare, it does me good to see you. And you have come to live with us! Good! Your father and I were like brothers."

And so the old man ratitled on as they walked towards the stable.

When about half the distance had been traversed they stopped at a small place to change horses. While they were changing the pas-sengers improved the opportunity to sengers improved the opportunity to take a lunch. They stepped up to the counter of the little restaurant and each took a piece of pie and a cup of coffee. When they had finished the lunch they asked the price. The man in attendance said: "One piece of pie 50 cents; one cup of coffee 25 cents— 75 cents each." One of the party gramphied a little about the price.

But Midwell wanted the sorrel horse and when he left the deacon's premises he had paid over to that good old man a hundred and tifty dollars, and he took the horse with him.

On his way home Moses was puzzled by several peculiar movements of the sorrel horse; and, arrived at his own quarters, the animal, in entering the stable, followed his new comer at the end of a goodly length of halter-strap,

The Modern Mazeppa.

The Rev. Mr. Macpherson had been for nearly a year the Rector of the church in Ishkatawhunky, Iowa, and together with his young and attractive wife had won the warm admiration of all but the unmarried ladies of his parish, when he became interested in bicycles. Being young and athletic, he soon became an excellent rider, and every afternoon after 4 o'clock he was accustomed to mount his bicycle in the back yard, to ride swiftly down the carriage path to the street, and thence through the village. As his house was an isolated one, and no curious neighbors were near, Mrs. Macpherson undertook to learn to ride, and in a short time was able to mount with ease and wife had won the warm admiration of "Cradis is sorrel, certainly; and, of course, you know what crimson is."

Two days later the deacon met Moses Midwell, and called him aside, "Now, Moses—look here; we aint going to have any words unless I can prove that you've lied to me, which I think I can do. Didn't you swear to me that you hadn't got a bit of other seed in your granary but pure clover, besides your common grain?"

"I didn't swear, Deacon; but I told you so."

"Then where did you get that seed that you let me have?"

Gen. Garfield's Relations to "the Salary Grab." What is commonly known as "the salary grab" was a section of the executive, legislative, and judicial apprepriation bill passed by the Forty-second congress in its last session, and approved on March 3, 1873. Its full text can be found in chapter cexxvi. of the acts of that congress or a page. the acts of that congress, or on page 25 of the New York Tribune almanac of 1874, or in any of the political text books for 1874. It was not an independent act, but a provision of a voluminous bill making appropriations for all branches of the government service.

This section doubled the salary of the President, raised slightly the salaries of the vice-president, the cabinet and the justices of the supreme cours and increased the annual pay of con gressmen from $5,000 and mileage to $9,500 and actual traveling expenses its especially obnoxious feature was the fact that this increase in congres men's pay was made retroactive, so that it covered the two years' service of the congress which passed the measure on the last day of its existts of the men who made it a law Against that phase of the matter the increase of salaries. Gen. Garfield then opposed it and said:

"I do not believe we ought to say there should be an increase; but I think there ought to be a general salary bill covering the whole of our civil service, our naval and military service; and on such general bill, including members of Congress, I would cheerfully vote. I do not desire to get any large or small credit for special virtue in regard to my own salary or that of my fellow associates. I do not know that any one else does; but when we act on this subject we ought to ac omprehensively, with the whole field

Gen. Garfield voted against it. Gen. Butler, on March 1, moved to reconsider the motion by which the increase was defeated. A motion was made to lay this on the table, and on this Gen. Garfield voted "aye" with all the opponents of the increase. Mr. Sargent. on the same day, moved to make the salary of congressmen $6,500, and on this Gen. Garfield voted "no." Finally the amendment for the increase was in the held. The senate conferces insisted that the $6.500 clause, cutting off the mileage actually reduced the pay of some 15 members of the senate. They refused therefore to submit to an amendment which cut down the salary of so many senators. The senate conferces were unanimous in favor of fixing the salary at $7.500 and cutting off all allowances except actual individual travelling ex-

It was under these circumstance It was under these circumstanes that the bill was reported to the house and passed. After the adjournment of congress Gen. Garfield wrote a letter on the subject to his constituents in which he said

"I know of no method by which the defeat of the salary clause could have een achieved under the circumstance seen achieved under the circumstances as they then existed except by a fil-ibustering against the whole bill, and thus preventing a vote on it. That, perhaps, might have been done, but no member, so far as I know, was willing to take so grave a responsibility. Certainly the chairman of the committee n appropriations (Garfield) was not."

On the 9th of December following Mr. Wilson of Indiana in a speech in the house on the repeal of the salary bill said:

The proceedings attending the passage and the repeal of this measure car be found scattered through the pages of the Congressional Record for the last session of the Forty-second and the first session of the Forty-third congresses. They show these facts:

On the 24th of February, 1878, the house considered in "committee of the whole" this legislative, etc., appropriation bill and Gen. The Democratic party has run away from legislative duty. The people trusted it to make laws, but it has schemed and wrangled, dawdled and doubled, through a session of unusual schemed and wrangled, dawdled and doubled, through a session of unusual length, without doing the most important part of the work instrusted to it. Some things it was too spiteful and malicious to do; some it was incompetent to do; some it failed to do through disloyalty and others through cowardice. It runs away leaving officials unpaid, and needful provision for many branches of the public service not made. It runs away leaving the Treasury compelled to coin useless silver at the rate of $2,000,000 per month, to the great peril of the public welfare and of business prosperity, because its demagogues did not dare to confess that they had passed or insisted upon a foolish measure. It runs away leaving the Government without provision to meet the bonds which mature or become redeemable next year, and thus places the Treasury at the mercy of merulators.

bill said:

My distinguished friend from Ohio (Mr. Garfield), struggled against it until in a conference report which he had resisted to the last it was brought before the house attached to one of the most important appropriation bills, and then, as all of us who are familiar with the facts most confidently believe (and it is but justice to him to say so here), only voted for it in the conscientious discharge of his duty to his country.

Shortly after the passage of the bill the New York Times, which denounced it and all concerned in its passage, reviewed the conduct of each member and their votes upon the bill, and then can be come redeemable next year, and thus places the Treasury at the mercy of speculators.

In many minor things, the superlative cowardice of the party in charge of legislation has been shown. It runs away not daring to vote upon the evidence in several cases of contested seats, because it wants to turn out men who were really elected, but has not the pluck to send votes of that sort to the people this Fall, with the evidence already taken. It runs away not daring to vote yea or nay on tariff bills or carriered bills or Southern claims by currency bills, or Southern claims by the hundred which members mean to grant if they have a President in the White House to sign them. Perhaps these claims would not have failed even now, had there been a chance that the President would approve them; for Congress, however afraid to do any good thing, has not been effect. ceive one dollar of it, as the records of the treasuary department show.

Immediately after the assembling of the new congress December 11, 1873.

Gen. Garfield urged upon congress the necessity for its repeal and it was reof courage which ought to be scarce in legislative halls. But it may be that timidity was the ruling motive even here, and that members did not dare to go home without voting fat jobs for greedy and knavish constituents, be-cause they knew that they had little claim to the support of voters of the etter sort.

The Democratic party does not know derstan!, we must believe, upon the election laws, and its refusal to vote money for their execution.

The steady accumulation of silver which Congress makes inevitable by refusing to suspend or modify the Coin-ge Act, may possibly compel Secreta y Sherman to adopt strong measurer this Summer. Months ago he stated publicly that he did not feel authorized to disburse silver in payment of ordin-ary expenses of the Government until he had enough on hand to meet all ex-penses of certain classes in the same way. He is bound to maintain recomprehensively, with the whole field before us, so we can say to the country for Congress from the Ashtabula Disvice of the whole civil service of the country."

When the committee of the whole reported to the House and a vote was taken on this proposition to increase the salaries of members of Congress, Garfield voted against it. Gen.

Gen. Garfield voted against it. Gen. man, having asked Congress in vain to suspend silver coinage, should call public attention to ite refusal, and proceed to pay out silver to worktreatment, but the advice of men having an acquaintance with military affairs will be needed; and for that and several other reasons which I named, he would I believe do coupling a good. wise to force silver dollars into use. It is possible that Mr. Sher-man may find no other way of preventing a dangerous depletion of his gold reserves; if so, the responsibility for any inconvenience to the people will rest with the Democratic majority in Congress.

No one can forsee what may be the No one can lorsee what may be the condition of the money market next Fail. It may become impossible for the Treasury to make any adequate provision for further reduction of the interest on the public debt by refund-ing. The responsibility for a great yearly expense which might have been and a doubt as to the consequence of Democratic success upon the public credit begins to be felt, Government supp so that its refusal to make due provision for the public credit would not then be appreciated.—N. Democratic National Convenvention.

The delegates to the National convention began to arrive on Saturday and by Monday most of the delegations had organized. A letter was received by the New York delegation from Mr. Tilden declining to let his name come before the convention as a delegate.

The headquarters of the Michigan delegation were at the Grand Hotel and on Monday the delegation organized by electing Don. M. Dickenson of Detroit chairman, he receiving 12 votes to 9 cast for Byron G. Stout. The tother appointments were made as follows: Secretary of the delegation. A. B. Morse; vice-president of the convention Chas. H. Richmond; secretary of the convention. A. J. Shakespeare; committeeman on credentials, l. E. Messmitteeman on credentials, l. E. Messmitteman on credentials, l. E. Messmitteman on credential of Ohio were the official reading clerks during the convention.

At 12:40 o'clock Senator Barnum called the convention to order, and without any preliminary remarks announced that prayer would be offered by the Rev. C. W. Wendte of the Unitarian church.

Senator Barnum then announced that he had been unanimously requested by the national committee to nominate the Hon. George Hoadley of Ohio for temporary chairman. This being approved by the convention, the chair appointed Wm. L. Scott and J. D. McEnory as a committee to conduct Mr. Hoadley to the stand. As Mr. Hoadley ascended the platform he was greeted with hearty applause.

CHEERS FOR TILDEN.

As Judge Hoadley alluded to the nomination of Tilden and Hendricks at St. Louis four years ago, and declared that they were then elected, there was general cheering and applause, in which the delegates and occupants of the galleries joined, rising and waving handkerchiefs as they did so. This demonstration was redoubled when he declared that no dishonest arbitration should again rob the Democracy of its second victory at the polls. Applause was generously distributed throughout the address, as its points appealed to sympathy and favor.

In the Massachusetts case it was unanimously recommended to admit both contestants, and that the two delegations united cast the vote of the State. The sitting members from Pennsylvania were reported as entitled to their seats. There was great cheering when the clause was read declaring that the committee had with singular unamity decided in favor of the sitting members and against the admission of Tammany.

Mr. Carroll, of Kansas, asked to present the minority report, and was allowed to do so.

After discussion in which the claims of Tammany were set forth by Gov. Il ubbard of Texas and those of the regular New York delegation by John R. Fellows of New York, the majority report was adopted by a nearly unanimous vote. Mr. Wilson, from West Virginia, offered a resolution that the contesting delegates be admitted to seats on the floor.
