When he is sufficiently near, the hunter takes aim, and making a slight noise with his foot on the ground, which causes the deer to turn toward nim, has a good chance to hit it in the middle of the forehead. But if he nisses the mark, or his gun misses fire, then the fun begins in earnest, and one of the finest races in the world can be witnessed—a naked Indian and a frightened deer at full speed. If the deer should happen to be not more than a year old it is of no use following it, as it will then outrun any Indian and run longer without giving out; but if two or three years old, or older, a good runner will bring it down in a few hours, or certainly within fifty or sixty miles. (The narrator, Jose Mendivil, here insists that a good runner among the Apaches can run of the finest races in the world can be runner among the Apaches can run 125 miles in twenty-four hours easily.) The deer starts at full speed, making long leaps of from ten to thirty feet.

At first he gains rapidly on the Indian, but the Indian follows, every now and then uttering frightful yells, but never for a moment leaving or losing the trail. The deer, when out of sight, halts and looks back, but soon his pursuer comes in sight, when he bounds on with longer steps than at first; finally he makes for the water—spring or stream—and when he gets there halts and drinks all he wants. Now there is no hope for him, for after he drinks he cannot run so far or leap so far. Pretty soon the Indian comes in sight again, while the tired deer rests a monent; but the tired hunter never halts o drink, not if his mouth is as dry as ashes, for by so doing he not only loses time, but he cannot run so fast afterward. On he goes, never resting, either or the hill or on the mountain. If the deer takes to the top of the highest mountain, thither on his track the Apache follows. By and by the Indian sees a blood stain on a rock, where the the deer has stumbled and skinned his knee or struck his nose. He knows now the race will soon be ended, and runs faster than at first, while the deer loses ground every minute. When the deer sees the Apache close upon him he stops suddenly by a rock or bush INTLES - 19: 00 per stand.

Clumps.—The players divide in two equal parts, or clumps, with a captain to each clump, who decides disputes and chooses those who go out. Captain of clump A appoints Mary of his set to go out. Captain of B appoints John. Mary and John outside select some object, simple or difficult according to ability of players. Simple subject—a well known historical event or local object. Example: Washington's right hand"—simple. "The bell-punch on the last car that ran in New York last night" is difficult. They return, on the last car that ran in New York last night" is difficult. They return, John going to Mary's clump and Mary to John's. Each clump enestions as fast as possible anything that can be answered by yes and no, or I don't know. The side guessing first wins both Mary and John to their side; the object of the game is to win all the players over to one clump.

The Moon is Round.—The company should be seated in a circle, and the player who introduces the game passes his left hand before his face, repeating.

nose, a mouth," indicating by "dabs"
the position of eyes, nose and mouth.
His right hand neighbor is then requested to repeat this exactly as he did. The catch consists in outlining the moon with the left hand. Involmatrix every person not, in the seuntarily every person not in the se-cret uses the right hand, and is puz-zled to know where his failure was. The Court of Contradictions.—Seats and hats for those playing are the only requisites. One player acts as judge; others come into court to present a case (which should be made as humorous as possible), and as defendant, witnesses, jury, etc. When the judge rises, all others must sit, and vice ver-sa; when his hat is on, all others nust be off, and vice versa again. The first who makes a mistake pays a for-feit or takes the judge's seat. This simple game is a Spanish version of

Passed the Point. .

I must tell you, said the skipper, as he took a fresh cigar, about Stiles, a shipmate of mine on one of my early yoyages. Stiles was a simple-hearted, transparent young fellow, and when we sailed had been paying attention to a young-dady, whom he had reason to think did not fully reciprocate his ardent feelings. At all events the part-ing on her side was not so affectionate as he could wish, and he was impressed with the belief that she only kept him as a standby in default of a better offer.

"I don't believe," Stiles would say, with a desponding shake of the head. "I don't believe Ann Jones Il have me anyhow. When we had been out a few months and had met with fair success, Stiles tone was modified. The burden of his monologue changed to-"Well, I dun'no but what Ann Jones 'll have me after all."

"Chance is pretty good for Ann Jones," he would say. "Pretty good, At fifteen hundred barrels, he had

"Oh, you don't," raved Mr, Spoopen-dyke, "You don't see any use of putting things where they belong, cither, do you? How do you suppose I'm going to know when it's my turn to show what Christianity has done for me unless you can find that dod gasted book between now and the res-urrection?" and Mr. Spoopendyke spun around on his heel like a top and knocked over a Parian jar.

How a Dog Earned a Pension.

A dog in New Mexico has earned a pension in this way: "Returning of an evening with his sheep to the fold, he discovered that his master was not stirring about, but remained inside the shanty and kept quiet. The next evening it was the same. The dog, when he penned up the sheep, repaired to the shanty, smelled through the crack in the door his master's presence, but the man did not move. The dog scratched, barked, and even howled, but no rebarked, and even howled, but no re-sponse came from within. The dog, true to his appointed duty, went out with the sheep on the third day and cared for them while they cropped the herbage on the hillsides. But he was getting hungry, and that night when he drove the flock into their pen the last one to attempt to get in hecame last one to attempt to get in became the victim to his appetite. This method of providing for his own wants became a part of the faithful dog's daily duty. Every evening the last sheep to try to enter the fold was seized by him and served for supper and breakfast and for dinner the following day. The ranch to which the dog belonged was in a solitary part of the Territory and out of the track of travel or visita tion. For two years from the time of the master's death—as acsertained by data left by the latter—the faithful dog tended the flock committed to his charge, and had fresh mutton for his supper every night. The flock was not decimated by this steady drain upon its resources. On the contrary, it increased in numbers, and when, at the end of two years from the time of the end of two years from the time of the death of the proprietor the ranch was visited, and the remains of the owner were found, the dog was still at his port of duty, jealously guarding his flock, and driving them to the best pastures every day, and to the fold at pastures every day, and to the fold at night, before which he slept, to keep the wild sheep-eaters of the plains at a civil distance. Such fidelity excited admiration wherever the story was told, and the Legislators of the Territold, and the Legislators of the Terri-tory, in a fit of generosity and enthu-siasm, at their session two years ago granted a pension for life to that dog to be paid from the State Treasury, as a reward for his fidelity, and no doubt as an encouragement to all other shepherd dogs in that Territory to be good dogs and faithful.

THE FATAL WITNESS.—A verdict of manslaughter has been returned by ar English coroner's jury on a curious bit of circumstantial evidence, Hannah Catlin, wife of Mr. M. R. Catlin, of Holly Lodge, Bedfont, London, was found barnt to death on the 13th of July. Appearances showed that she had been dead some days, and as Mr. Catlin had been at home it was asked why he had not sent for assistance. He said his wife had probably burnt herself on the 8th ult. by upsetting a benzoline lamp but that he knew nothing about the matter, as he had been ill, and had stupefied himself with been ill, and has stupened himself with laudanum to keep down pain. Unfor-tunately for him, however, somebody with eyes noticed that a twenty-four hour clock in the kitchen was going, and quite right. Mr. Catlin, being alone in the house, where the couple had for some time lived without a servant, must therefore have descende to the kitchen and have wound up the clock. He was therefore in possession of his faculties and power of locomo

PLENTY OF MONEY

PLENTY OF MONEY.

(Columbus Erening Dispatch.)

Pleuty of money secures leisure and buys pleasure; but will not always restore health when lost. Mr. H. Lulay, Suffield, O., writes My wife was affected with Liver Complaint for fifteen years, and could not find any relief, with the aid of all the physicians we consulted. I concluded to try the Hamburg Drops. My wife was cured, and since that day we have not seen a physician in our house.

Many remedies, by the use of which I endeavored to obtain relief, proved ineffectual. At last some friends recommended the flamburg Drops to me; and since I used them, I feel better than ever and no sign of the old headache has appeared sgain.

Saved by a Jaguar.

The London Telegraph recalls the fol-lowing singular story of a man who was "treed" by wild hogs and released was treed by wiid nogs and released by an American tiger. Treed by pigs is not exactly the positision in which we should expect to find a Colonial Sec-retary—at least, not often. But when Mr. Fowler, Colonial Secretary of the Mr. Fowler, Colonial Secretary of the Honduras, was recently exploring the interior of the colony, he was overtaken by a drove of peccaries, and had only time to take a snap shot at the first of them and scramble up a tree, dropping his rifle in the performance, before the whole pack were around his perch, gnashing their teeth at him, grun ing and shoresuing their tucks around the gnashing their teeth at him, grun ing and sharpening their tusks against the tree. Now the peccary is not only feroctious but patient, and rather than let an object of its anger escape will wait about for days, so that the secretary had before him only two courses—either to remain where he was until he dropped down among the swine from sheer exhaustion and hunger, or else to commit suicide at once by coming down to be eaten there and then.

Fortunately Mr. Fowler is a cool-headed man, and so decided to wait a

Fortunately Mr. Fowler is a cool-headed man, and so decided to wait a little and consider the situation. While he was in this dilemma, however, what should come along—and looking out for supper, too—but a jaguar. Never was beast of prey so opportune, for the jaguar has a particular fondness for wild pork and the peccaries knew it; for no sooner did they see the great ruddy head thrust through the bushes than they bolted helter-skelter, forget-ting, in their desire to save their own bacon, the meal they were themselves Hearthurn, Depression of Spirits, Sores,
