BOSTON CORBETT.

His account of the death of the Assassin Booth and its effect on the Avenger.

Manchester Cor. Cincinnati Express.

After they had tracked Booth over the river and through woods and fields for days, at length he was discovered in a barn. Corbett saw him there through the cracks in the barn, on a pile of hay, leaning on his crutch, pale with loss of blood and from excess of hatred and revenge, for John Wilkes Booth never knew what fear was. Corbett said he watched Booth like a hawk. He was standing there on his crutch, with a carbine in his hand, and had his back toward Boston Corbett. He was the impersonation of the assassin, and even there, when he determined to die, did not for a moment forget his part in the great tragedy he was acting.

The fire was mounting up all around him, and the pallor on Booth's face in the wild light of the blazing barn grew ghastly pale, and he stood there leaning on his crutch, with carbine in hand. The demand for his surrender was repeated, and answered with the sameullen silence of contempt, scorn, and defiance. Just then the soldiers were standing a few paces from each other all around the barn, every man with his pistol in his hand. Suddenly Corbett saw Booth raise his carbine, as if he were going to shoot someone outside, when, quick as lightning, Corbett raised his pistol, fired at the President, and the next moment he was lying on the hay from a wound in exactly the same spot where he hit Lincoln. In the next second Booth was dragged out, stretched on the ground away from the burning barn—the next he was dead. Corbett told me that Booth never spoke after he shot him; and that all this nonsense of his dying words was mere clap trap of sensational writers. The moment the officers saw that Booth was dead they inquired for the man fellow who had disobeyed orders; for it was their purpose to take him alive and have a grand state trial, and all that, after the manner of the great historic English regicide trials in the time of James II. Boston Corbett had spoiled that sport. All eyes turned to Corbett, for the soldiers on his side of the barn pointed him out as the guilty one, and he was placed under arrest. From that hour he never knew a moment's peace. The pistol with which he killed Booth was stolen from him that night, but the holster was left, and he had it at my house. His share of the prize was likewise stolen from him the day he got it—every cent of it.

From the moment Corbett killed Booth he was a doomed man. One disaster followed another. He was treated with scorn by his officers and neglect by the government, and his share of the reward he lost. It never did him any good. He was stopped on the road by masked men, a pistol put to his breast, and he was required to dismount and surrender his hard-earned money the very day he received it. He was stripped of his clothing and every dollar he had. This was on his way to Washington. The officers there, with wild rage at him for depriving them of the pomp and circumstance of leading Booth in captive alive, and parading him through a long public trial, of which they should be public figures, felt like persecuting him further; but better counsels prevailed and he was permitted to retire from the service branded and disgraced. From that hour to this army officers speak of Corbett with contempt. He has been driven from post to pillar. He preaches with a pistol in his pocket. After he says his prayers he lies down at night with a loaded revolver under his pillow. He means pitifully all hours of the night. It almost seemed to me my house was haunted while he was there. Although he was a good man, and pure and devout Christian of spotless life, I declare I was glad when he was gone, he was so unhappy, so uneasy, so strange. He is no human. He is no fool. He is a good man every way. But wherever he goes he says Nemesis pursues him, and the troubled spirit of revenge will not let him rest.

He is in constant fear of assassins. Threatening letters follow him everywhere. I saw one dated "Hell" and signed "Booth," and saying, "You will soon be here." Such letters reach him every day. He got several while he was here. He is never in so obscure a town where they do not find him, containing all manner of threats. He complained bitterly and justly of this neglect with which the government treated him. It gave him no pension. It gave him no office. He is a poor man, a hatter by trade. He never married. The last I heard of him he was in Philadelphia, when with characteristic daring he rescued a young girl out of the hands of villains in a lonesome alley. It was like him. He was so poor he had to raise money here to pay his way back to Philadelphia. Let no man suppose it was remorse that made him unhappy. Not a bit of it. He is proud that he killed Booth. No let any one suppose it is regret; for he told me the Lord told him to do it and the Lord directed the shot. He believed that if Ingersoll cannot, Gen. Hammond asked him how in the world he happened to send the bullet to a chair where the fatal bullet found the life of Lincoln. "The Lord directed it," was his only answer, and he believed it. Take it all in all, it is the most wonderful story I ever heard from human lips.

Bob Ingersoll on Stingy Men.

I despise a stingy man. I do not see how it is possible for a man to die worth $5,000,000 or $10,000,000 in a city full of warts, when he meets almost every day the withered hand of beggary and the white lips of famine. How a man can withstand all that and hold in the clutch of his hand $20,000,000 or $30,000,000 is past my comprehension. I do not see how he can do it. I should not think he could do it any more than he could keep a pile of lumber when hundreds of thousands were drowning in the sea. Do you know I have known men who would trust their wives with their hearts and homes, but not with their pocketbooks—not with a dollar. When I see a man of that kind I always think he knows which is the most valuable. Think of making your wife a beggar! Think of her asking you every day for a dollar or two, or to humbly beg for fifty cents. "What did you do with that dollar I gave you?" Think of having a wife that is afraid of you. What kind of children do you expect to have with a beggar and a coward for a mother? Oh, I tell you, if you have but a dollar in the world, and you have got to spend it, spend it like a king; spend it as though it were a dry leaf, and you the owner of an unbounded forest. That's the way to spend it. I had rather be a beggar and spend my last dollar like a king, than be a king and spend my money like a beggar. If it's got to go, let it go. Get the best you can for your family—and look as well as you can for yourself. When you used to go courting how nice you looked. Ah, your eye was bright, your step was light, and you just put on the very best you could. Do you know that it is insufferable egotism in you to suppose that a woman is going to love you always, looking as bad as you can? Think of it! Any woman on earth will be true to you forever when you do your level best.

At the almshouse near Allentown, Penn., John Gyumary, a Hungarian, has slept for 37 days, it not being possible to wake him by an electric shock or the firing of a revolver, and he having to be fed with a spoon. He has just recovered his full respiration and opened his eyes.

Speaking of the recent cold weather in that city, a Washington letter writer says: "The $10,000 premium beauty was also a sufferer, as she had to sit on her elephant wrapped in her fur-lined cloak, with her lovely figure veiled, dodging the telegraph wires and the over-hanging boughs of the trees."

The leading spelling reformers of Germany are thinking of holding an international congress in Berlin at the same time as the congress of the Orientalists, in September. The subjects suggested for consideration are the formation of a common alphabet for Europe, of a common alphabet for the east, and finally, of a universal alphabet.

Fairfield, Iowa, seems to be a cheerful region for suicides. A man broke into a school house there recently and hung himself to a joint, using his own drawers for a hanging rope, and the same day a man got off a train there, walked into the postoffice, and taking a seat, calmly proceeded to cut his throat with his jack-knife.

One of the Montreal census enumerators could not get it into his head that a lady whom he questioned could have been born in Constantinople. He had never heard of Constantinople and compromised the matter by giving Europe as the lady's birthplace, she having told him that Constantinople is in Turkey, and that Turkey is in Europe.

The Western Watchman says: "The new Protestants Bible has the 'Our Father' as Catholics have it; the ending, 'for Thine is the kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever, amen,' is expunged. According to the scholars, Protestants have been saying the Lord's Prayer wrong for 300 years." Remonstrances are heard from people of all persuasions in every direction against altering the words of the Lord's Prayer, which by long usage have become hallowed to all who pray.

Agricultural.

English farming lands have depreciated within a few years in rental value at least $5 per acre per annum.

England raises about 150,000,000 pounds of wool per year, and imports upwards of 450,000,000 pounds per annum.

The necessity of the times is to convert unskilled and unprofitable farming into a skilled and profitable industry.

All cereals want ammonia, it is the leading element of fertilization: root crops demand potash and phosphoric acid.

Spring wheat, spring rye and oats may be sown as soon as the ground can be plowed; a little freezing never injures the young plants.

Pennsylvania farmers claim that bran when mixed with corn meal of the same weight will produce more weight in an animal than feeding pure corn meal.

At the present time one of the most popular breeds of cattle in the West is the Polled Angus. Importations are continually being made of this breed.

During the month of January last, 41,582 head of cattle were shipped from this continent to Europe; of this number, 1078 were lost, or about one in every forty.

They are beginning to use Indian corn in England, instead of barley, to make malt. If the experiment proves to be practical it will cause an increased demand for American corn, and farmers will always have a place to put their surplus grain.

Only a few years ago sheep were being sent in large quantities to California; now the trade is reversed, and California has sent sheep to Colorado, New Mexico, Montana, Idaho and Utah, and it is expected that this year they will be sent even further east.

It is anticipated after the past long and severe winter that bee-keepers will meet with heavy and severe losses in the stock this spring. During this and the coming months bees should be well protected so as to keep the bees warm, and secure as even a temperature as possible.

The dairy industry enriches the soil while the growth of corn and wheat depletes it. The corn crop is estimated in value at about $600,000,000, while the value of the phosphoric acid and potash taken from the soil to produce such a crop is in round figures $115,000,000.

The United States supplies England with nearly twice as much wheat and flour as all the rest of the world combined, with nearly ten times as much as Canada or Australia, thirteen times as much as India, fifteen times as much as Russia or Germany, and nearly thirty times as much as Egypt.

Farmers' Accounts.

There are probably no class of men, says the New York Observer, who live more strictly according to their means, and who more uniformly make both ends meet at the close of the year, than farmers. But there are comparatively few who are as strict in keeping their accounts as those who are engaged in mercantile or mechanical business.

One of the chief hindrances to success in any branch of business is a want of system, and keeping an accurate account of expenditures and receipts would at once be followed by systematic results. The winter season is a good time for each one to lay his plans in this respect, to prepare his books, and so be prepared for a more systematic prosecution of the work of the year.

People are inquiring what is the meaning of the word "suzerainty," and what position Queen Victoria is to occupy as "Suzerain" of the Transvaal. In Latham's edition of Johnson's Dictionary "suzerain" is given as meaning "supreme or highest Lord, Sovereign."

Does Wealth Bring Happiness. On one of the last days of his earthly existence Mr. John Hopkins called his devoted gardener to him and said: "I am beginning to hate this place, because it does not bring in money. I hate everything that does not bring in money. Did you ever feed hogs? Have you not observed that the strong animals bear away the ears of corn and the weaker ones pursue them squealing, in hopes that all or a part of the treasure will be lost or dropped?"

A shoemaker in Broadway, N. Y., has adopted a novel mode of advertising. A large dog stands in front of his store, holding a basket filled with business cards in his mouth. He can be seen at his post through the whole day except when he is called into the shop to get his dinner.

Robust Imaginations.

When the lawyers in Justice Carey's Court were waiting for the verdict in a petty larceny case, Attorney Soderberg related an incident of his early childhood in Minnesota, illustrative of the peculiar custom in vogue in that State: "I knew an old farmer who owned ten acres of timber land, where millions of pigeons came each year to roost. They devastated the wheat fields, and the old man used to catch the birds in nets and thrash them out on the barn floor. Each bird had three ounces of wheat in his crop, and it was a bad year for 'Old Thompson' when he couldn't ship 1,000 bushels of wheat to market at $2 60 a bushel, and it ranked A No. 1 when it reached the Chicago elevator. If there had been a few millions more of pigeons he would have come pretty near getting a corner on the Minnesota wheat crop."

"I know a planter down in Alabama," said Kittrel, "who was fully as sharp as that. He trained an alligator to work up and down the river and catch the little peccaninnes that played along the bank. The alligator would take the little kids in his jaws and swim back to the plantation. It was a dull day that he couldn't corral three or four. The planter raised 'em carefully, and when they got big sold 'em in New Orleans at prices ranging from $3,000 to 10,000 a piece. He was rolling in wealth when Lincoln's emancipation proclamation was issued, and after that the alligator never did any more work. The man is now barely keeping body and soul together in Washington, clerking in one of the government bureaus at $8,000 a year."

Judge Carey evinced the greatest interest in these weird tales, and edged up to the group.

"These are curious yarns, gentlemen, but I believe them all. I had a dog once, back in Nebraska, that I kept to herd lumber."

"Beg pardon, Judge; did you say the dog herded lumber?"

"Yes, sir, cottonwood boards. We always kept a dog there to bring the lumber in at night."

Everybody now paid the closest attention, as they knew the boss was at work."

"It was in this way: Cottonwood boards warp like thunder in the sun. A board would begin to hump its back up about 9 o'clock in the morning, and in half an hour it would warp the other way with the heat, and make another loop. Each time it moved it turned a couple of feet, always following the sun towards the west. The first summer I lived in Brownville over 10,000 feet of lumber skipped out to the hills the day before I had advertised a house raisin'."

"The Lansing Sentinel had a remark, before election, that Weaver's speech in Owosso 'added hundreds to our ranks.' The election showed just 33 Greenback votes in Owosso. Does this prove that the Sentinel lied? Certainly not. If Weaver hadn't spoken, the Greenback vote might have been 300 or 300 less than nothing."
