A Finnish Joke.
"I think," said a well known orchestral leader, "the best joke ever played in this town was on an ambitious amateur pianist when Gottschalk was here. The amateur's father was the owner of a large hall, and he offered the use of it to Gottschalk for his benefit. There was to be a piece for eight pianos, and the amateur was to play one of the instruments. I was leader. I thought Gottschalk would have a fit when I told him that the amateur couldn't play three straight notes of the piece."
"He is sure to throw us all out," said I, "and ruin the performance."
"Gottschalk swore like a major, but 'twas no good. The halls were out, and he couldn't go back of his programme, even if the gift of the hall for the night was no consideration to him. At last I hit upon an idea that fixed the whole business. The amateur came down to rehearsal and we praised him up until he thought he was to be the star of the night. As soon as he left we took the hammers out of his piano and made it as dumb as an oyster. I guessed he would never know the difference, with seven pianos going at once."
The tune of the convention laughed.
"And just as I thought," said the leader, hammering on the table with his glass, "that amateur or his friends never discovered the trick."
"No."
"No, sir; he just sailed in and pounded on that piano as if it was the worst enemy he ever had. He was bound to show off among so many good pianists, and hammered on his key-board until the perspiration nearly blinded him.
Now and then I looked at him approvingly to give him fresh courage, and every time that I did he gave the piano a lick that nearly made match-wood of it. His friends all around threw bouquets at him till he looked like a wedding arch, and when it was all over his fond parent fell on his neck in the green-room and slipped a check for $20 into his hand. The old man didn't know whether he was standing on his head or his heels he was so tickled, and the way he set up the wine to the crowd was a caution."
"Didn't he do fine," said he to me, "among so many first-class professionals, too?"
"I never heard an amateur do so well in public," said I, and what's more I meant it, eh?"

A Prolonged Trance.
The medical faculty of Germany have been much interested lately in a case of long-standing trance on the part of a girl of 13 years of age. The facts are, for once, undisputed; and no possible suspicion of trick or collusion can arise. The patient lay for twenty-eight weeks in a state of profound sleep at the hospital of St. John's at Kedesweisel, near Butzbach. During that time she never once woke or received nourishment of any kind. She was visited by upward of 600 medical men from different parts of Germany during the duration of her trance, and some French and English physicians are also said to have seen her. Great interest was taken by the faculty in the question whether the girl would have sufficient strength to recover on awakening from her long sleep, or whether she would rapidly sink. The problem is now set at rest. The girl awoke some three weeks since, and has now quite recovered, although still remaining in the hospital under medical supervision. The case still continues to attract attention and gives rise to discussions in medical circles in Germany. However small the waste of substance during so profound and tranquil a sleep the work of the lungs and heart must have demanded it would be thought they needed some sort of support. The fire of a furnace can be banked up for some time, but sooner or later, unless fuel is supplied, it will burn itself out. How a Human being even in the most torpid state, can exist for twenty-eight weeks without any nourishment whatever is a question which may well puzzle even the most scientific minds.

Grant on Annexation.
At a dinner given to Gen. Grant in the city of Mexico last week he referred to the subject of annexation. After giving his experience with the proposed annexation of San Domingo, which he declared was favored by 99 out of every 100 people in that island, he said:
"I am sure that even if it could be shown that all the people of Mexico were in favor of the annexation of a portion of their territory to the United States it would still be rejected. We want no more land. We do want to improve what we have, and want to see our neighbors improve and grow so strong that the design of any other country could not endanger them. Mexico has the elements of development and wealth such as no other country possesses, at all events to so high a degree.
Gen. Grant is right. More soil is not needed. Especially when that soil is occupied by a people speaking a different tongue and clinging tenaciously to traditional habits. And this frank statement ought to set at rest the silly stories that the railroad projects with which Gen. Grant and his friends are connected are simply an introductory grab at Mexico. It would not be taken as a gift. Post and Tribune.
