EDITORIAL TALK.

Next Saturday, Oct. 15, at 1 p. m. trains chartered to convey Michiganders to Yorktown, will leave Jackson, arriving at Washington at 3 p. m. Sunday; leaving Washington Monday evening and arriving at Yorktown Tuesday morning. The round trip fare is twelve dollars and a limited number of tickets will be sold, good to return from Washington on any regular train up to Nov. 1. We should dearly love to go and weep over the spot where Cornwallis dropped his chin. Not that we have tears to shed more than we know what to do with at home, but because there won't be anybody else there to weep for him. On the 19th day of Oct., 1781, Lord Cornwallis surrendered at Yorktown his whole command, consisting of 7,247 regular troops, 840 sailors, with 235 guns. It wasn't much of a surrender, to be sure, but it was enough to bring the long Revolutionary war to a close. And now the descendants of our forefathers are going to Yorktown to celebrate. It will be just 100 years next Wednesday since the surrender of the British—since our own good Washington and the noble La Fayette coopered the proud Cornwallis. Yorktown, celebrated as it is, is to-day only a small place of about 1,000 population. It is the capital of York County, Va., and is situated on York river. It is a place easily overlooked in the census report but in history it hath greatness.

How beautifully sublime the picture! Guitau's brother-in-law and counsel, Scoville, announces that his defense will be insanity. He expects to prove that Guitau was insane when he shot President Garfield and also on other occasions. Guitau, himself, makes a full statement to district Attorney Corhill in which he declares that his mind was perfectly clear when he shot the President and that all talk about his being insane then or at any other time is all bosh. "You pays your money and you takes your choice," Guitau says he is not insane and his counsel says he is. Perhaps Guitau has been instructed to talk the way he does in order to make it appear that he is really "out of his head." Of course it is Scoville's duty to defend the assassin to the best of his ability, being retained as his counsel. His first move would naturally be to tell Guitau how to act and what to say and perhaps a better course could not be pursued than that of setting himself up against his own counsel. People might say, you know, "well, Guitau must be insane, after all, to say and insist that he isn't, when his only way of escape is to prove that he is." That would be a good scheme—let them work it. But if Scoville fails to prove that Guitau has lost his head, there is this sweet consolation to offer—it won't be long before he will lose it.

With no Vice President, and with a Democratic president pro tem of the Senate there is only one life in the Senate of a Democratic administration. Should the Democratic party contain within its ranks a Guitau who should feel called upon to transfer the reins of Government to the hands of Democracy, one fatal shot would do the deed. Who knows but some villain has it in his heart to do that very thing and is only waiting for a favorable opportunity to carry out his hellish design? Another assassination would shake the Republic from center to circumference even though, as in Guitau's case, the deed be done by a dastardly, irresponsible idiot. And, to touch, the calamity, the greater the temptation to bring it upon the country. No greater calamity could befall this nation than to have one political party assassinated out of, and another assassinated into, power. And yet there may be some depraved fool, thirsting for notoriety, to whom the temptation to do this is greater than he will resist.

President Arthur very sensibly declines to receive applications for public office. He has other and more important business to attend to. He has started out well and evidently with a determination to fence out the horde of hungry office seekers that stand ready to rush in and wear him out with petitions and appeals. Chronic office seekers should be made to understand that the White House is not a great government trough, put up expressly for their use, and that the one that gets his nose and feet in it first is the lucky hog. There is a chance for a "reform" there that President Arthur seems disposed to improve, and all good citizens, regardless of party, will say amen to any move he may make to abate the nuisance.

The people prayed for the recovery of Garfield. They prayed earnestly, fervently, faithfully. Garfield died. The prayers of the people were not answered. Has the faith of the praying world in the efficacy of prayer been diminished? Sincerely, not at all. Those who believed before believe now. Those who prayed before pray now. We have heard of no conversions to infidelity because of God's failure to grant the petition of the people. "Thy will, not mine, be done," is the one condition of every prayer, as taught by Him who told men how to pray.

Senator Thos. F. Bayard was elected president pro tem of the Senate Monday, the vote standing 34 to 32. Thus the democrats, by insisting upon organizing before swearing in the new senators elect, elected their man. Mahone voted with the Republicans, and so did David Davis, who insisted that the Republicans were entitled to the presidency of the Senate. Had the new Senators been sworn in before the election, Senator Anthony (Rep.) would have been made president pro tem. The Democrats, however, put up their best man; there is something quite gratifying as well as quite astonishing in that fact.

Electricity is now employed in the rectification of inferior spirits, says an exchange, whereas the Grand Rapids Times thinks it will be joyful tidings to the clergy as they can put electric machines in their pulpits and take long vacations. The Times editor is cruelly sarcastic when he thus implies that church goers are "inferior spirits." That's so, Deacon Church—cruelly sarcastic. We attend church, ourselves.

The formal indictment of Charles J. Guitau for the murder of President Garfield was given to the Grand Jury last Saturday morning. It is a lengthy document consisting of eleven counts. The jury considered the matter a few hours and then returned a true bill. The prisoner heard with composure that he would be arraigned this week. We trust he will be informed when and where the hanging is to take place. He is a great hand for news and shouldn't be deprived of it.

The great pulpit prancer, Talmage, says the prayers for the recovery of Garfield were not answered because had Garfield lived he would have been unfit for president, owing to the general feeling of sympathy for him, etc. This is in substance what Talmage says and God undoubtedly feels under great obligations to Talmage for exculpating him from all blame in the matter. At least Talmage talks as though he was looking at it in that light.

Governor Jerome has appointed a new central relief committee for the fire sufferers, with Ex-Gov. Baldwin of Detroit as chairman, to whom all contributions should be sent. The differences between Port Huron and Detroit have been settled and all is peace again. Send in your contributions.

"Chaff," Lloyd Brezee's society paper, has been running long enough now to make it safe to say that it is a success. It is unlike any other publication in the State and its introduction has been quite general and very satisfactory. It would not grieve our spirit to see Brezee make a snug fortune out of "Chaff."

Texas is all right, and if you are prejudiced against that state it is time you were enlightened. Read this and be convinced. The Brady (Tex.) Sentinel says: "Fort Worth has had a crank who expressed his joy at Garfield's death and was promptly knocked by Jim Courtwright, a saloon keeper." Jim Courtwright served the crank just right.

It is far safer to be a president's coachman than a president. The White House carriage has been driven by the same coachman for five presidential terms. If Mr. Tilden desires to "live long and prosper," let him secure the position, don the livery, brace up, crack the whip and "g'lang there."

The New York Republicans behaved splendidly at their state convention. Wisdom and the anti-Conkling men controlled the action of that body, and harmony, sweet harmony, prevailed. Conkling very wisely remained at home to think. He will never regret it.

A Boston editor says that every other man one meets in Detroit is either a humorist or an amateur actor. He must have met Luther Beecher pretty often while in Detroit.

The handsome and spicy Jackson Star know how to make us blush: Hear it: "The Lowell JOURNAL is positively increasing in its keen originality and genuine humor. The only fault we can find with it is, that when we once begin clipping from it we never know when to stop."

A son of Brigham Young died on the ocean last week and was buried beneath the waves. None of his mothers were present.

Chicago is waiting for snow to come before sending her contribution to the Michigan fire sufferers. She has a hand-sled.

And let it be remembered that the name of James G. Blaine will look about as well in history as any other.

The Detroit News says the Chicago Times has abolished "cats" of all kinds. Joe Medill doesn't think so.

The solitary $75,000 diamond is not the style now, they say. O well, we can take ours off, we suppose. Elections were held in Ohio and Iowa yesterday 11th. Both states went Republican as usual; by what majority it is yet too early to say. Democrats concede Foster's majority over all in Ohio to be eight to ten thousand. Mr. Bookwalter, the Democratic candidate for Governor, has done a good deal of hard work for the privilege of being badly beaten.

JOURNAL JOTTINGS.

Remember, Friday eve, October 14, At Train's Hall, Promenade Concert. Commences at 8 o'clock. Admission to concert, FREE. Dancing begins at 9 o'clock. Dancing tickets only 50 cents. Music by Balcom's Full Orchestra. An open winter predicted.

Hazel sings the news this week. See Adv.

You are cordially invited to attend, and bring your friends.

Five deaths from diphtheria at Lyons, and the public schools closed.

Mother Shipton has less than three months in which to fulfill her prophecy.

Look for new adv. of J. M. Weather-wax next week. Down go the prices.

Will Clark has returned to his post in West's drug store, improved in health.

E. L. Taylor has returned from Deer Lake. Too many stumps up there for a short-legged man.

At Muskegon 2,000 mill men, thirty saw mills, two shingle mills and a box factory are idle. Strike.

Let us all be thankful that Michigan has no State election this fall. "Let us have peace"—and lots of it.

Congregational social at the residence of J. S. Douglal to-night. Every body and friends invited to be there.

Mrs. L. P. Barkley of Greenville was in town yesterday. She expects to come here to live next spring.

"Drought and Deluge" would be a good text to take. If we haven't had both this year we have almost.

West Campbell has done well in raising funds and supplies for the fire sufferers, having sent in about $350.

The "secret" state news editor in Michigan is he who jabs the Faber for that department for the Detroit News.

Lowell has sent over $2,000 in cash and goods to the fire sufferers. Chicago, next to Lowell in size and wealth, has not sent in her report.

Rev. J. M. VanWagner expects to commence preaching at the congregational church here next Sunday, Oct. 16. Admission free.

Turnkey Lamoreaux was seriously injured at the county jail by a fall. It is feared that both of his legs will be stiff for life.

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Patrick of LeRoy, Osceola Co. were in town the first of the week. Mrs. Patrick was formerly Miss Mary Barkley.

The M. E. Social will be held at the residence of Mrs. C. T. Moore on Friday evening, Oct. 14th. Literary exercises will be given. All are cordially invited to be present.

The saw mill had another break-down last week and was laid up several days for further repairs. It is a serious setback to K. Q. & K. who have a big pile of logs to saw.

The second promenade concert and ball by Balcom's Orchestra will be given at Train's Hall on Friday evening of this week. The concert will be free and dancing tickets 50 cents. All are cordially invited.

The Common Council has purchased of W. B. Rickert Islands Nos. 6 and 7—running to the section line south. Rickert recently bought them of W. W. Hatch.

A man in town Saturday asked in all earnestness if we thought they would hang the assignee of President Garfield. He said he thought it would be a good plan to serve Guitau the same as they did Lincoln's assignee.

R. G. Bostwick has purchased the late M. B. Hine's interest in the boot and shoemaker of Howk & Hine. We have known Rob. from early boyhood and are ready to make affidavit that he is a royal good fellow as well as straight-haired and level-headed. The new firm will be a popular one.

Married—At the residence of the bride's father in this village, Monday evening, Oct. 10, by Rev. D. L. Eaton, Mr. MARKS RUBEN to Miss JENNIE LARBERIE, both of Lowell. A gorgeous feast followed the ceremony and a very happy time it proved to be to all present. Mr. and Mrs. Ruben have the best wishes of many friends.

An item in a recent number of the JOURNAL stated that the Fallsburg school district was without a director. This it seems was a mistake. Max Denney was made director, to fill vacancy, previous to operation of the new law.

Bradley and Sunderland are doing a "smashing" business this fall. They have already put up 25,000 lbs. of evaporated apples and expect to reach 40,000 lbs. before the season closes. They employ in all about 30 hands. In addition to the above work they have shipped 1,500 barrels of apples.

After a careful examination of the "Life and Public Services of Jas. A. Garfield," a work now in the hands of our townsman, J. Q. Van Valkenburgh, we are pleased to recommend it to our readers as the best and most complete work we have seen. Mr. Van Valkenburgh will present it for your consideration soon.

With the compliments of I. E. Strong Jewler, the JOURNAL receives a handsomely illustrated copy of "The Yorktown Centennial."

The Ionia Sentinel comes out in a handsome new dress of type, with a new and very pretty head, and sundry other marked improvements. The Sentinel is a first-class paper and deserves the hearty support it receives.

At the request of many readers we this week publish the major portion of J. W. Hine's address, "We," read before the Northwestern Michigan Press Association at Cadillac. It was a very hastily prepared paper and was therefore not entered for the prize at the fair.

The Gratiot County Journal says that Mrs. R. A. Peet, of Lafayette, died of consumption, Sept. 24. Her age was 48 years. She was believed a resident of Alaska (or near there), this county, some years ago.

A. Calhoun has vacated the Clifton House in this village and a Mr. Black from Eaton Rapids takes possession. Mr. Calhoun opens a livery stable down by Train's race course.

"Herbert & Meyer" reads a new and handsome sign, just put up at the door of their place of business on West Water street. Herbert & Meyer are merchant tailors and they are having a fine run of custom work. They do good work and all orders left with them will be promptly and satisfactorily attended to.

The editor of the JOURNAL, nothing preventing, will accompany the Michigan delegation to Yorktown. He expects to be absent about ten days and will take with him a memorandum book. On his return, if he feels competent for the task, he will "write up" the trip in a series of articles for the JOURNAL. Friends, adieu. We go to meet our forefathers and while we shall rejoice over their victories we shall also join in singing—"God save the Queen."

Waldo Francis of Vergennes, Kent county, shot an owl that measured five feet from tip to tip of its wings a few days ago. The owl was flying about with a steel trap on one of its legs; and the LOWELL JOURNAL is interviewing all the naturalists in the vicinity to find out whether the owl caught the trap or the trap caught the owl.—Detroit Post.

All wrong, brother, we have merely sent for Prof. Bell to bring along his electric machine and find out, if he can, which leg the trap is on. We propose to let science have a chance to prove its claims if it busts its corset.

The Kent county superiors assembled on Monday and commenced their October session's work. It promises to be an interesting session, there being several important questions before the board, such as equalization, the court house square &c. Needn't be surprised if considerable vocal music is heard—solos, duets, trios, quartets, with hammer and tongs accompaniment.

Notes of the Ionia Fair.

The weather opened fair and those interested were very busy on Tuesday and Wednesday getting the different departments arranged, and on Thursday a large crowd of people were present to see the sights and witness the racing, which was very interesting in the racing race. At dark Thursday night Silas P. had taken two heats, a horse from G. Rapids two, and another from G. R. one. On Friday they paced again and it was declared a dead heat between the two Grand Rapids horses, and the race would have been completed on Saturday if it had not rained Friday night. The different classes of horses were quite well filled.

The Short Horns, Herefords, Galloways and Red Polled Norfolk breeds were represented in the cattle dept. The sheep pens were more than filled. The swine and poultry depts were fairly filled, and vegetable hall more than filled the expectations of all. The machine for manufacturing syrup from cane attracted a share of attention. A boy about twelve (12) years of age took the $25.00 premium for raising the best acre of corn; amt. 134 bushels. Financially a fair wms a success.

The Bonanza Farmer of the "Jlm."

From a recent number of the Groton Mirror, published at Groton, D. T. we clip the following item concerning the doings of our worthy fellow townsman F. D. Adams. The Mirror says: A few days ago we made a hurried trip through some of the towns north of Groton, and were surprised at the large number of people, most of whom have come to stay, and are entering into the work with earnestness, determined to establish for themselves good substantial homes, surrounded with all of the productions of wealth and labor. Here and there we find men with large means who prefer farming on a general scale rather than following any of the numerous callings which the cities present to men of capital and business education. Prominent among the latter is Mr. F. D. Adams, who has at present several hundred acres to which he will doubtless make extensive additions in the course of a few years. Although he came late during the present season he has broken one hundred and sixty acres, upon which he has at present three of the Chicago screw barrows or pulverizers—at work, each drawn by four horses. This machine cuts up the soil so completely that a good crop can be raised upon breaking done out of season. Mr. Adams has erected a spacious barn which is filled with four horses. This machine employs all the time, imports grain and other necessities for present use by the car load, and doubtless he will soon become the "Big Bonanza" farmer of the James River Valley. He intends spending the winter at his old home in Michigan, and will return with his family in the spring.
