Fraternal Sparring.
I have just returned from a little two-handed tournament with the gloves. I have filled my nose with cotton waste so that I shall not soak this sketch in gore as I write.
I needed a little healthful exercise and was looking for something that would be full of vigorous enthusiasm, and at the same time promote the healthful flow of blood to the muscles. This was rather difficult. I tried most everything, but failed. Being a sociable being (joke) I wanted other people to help me exercise, or go along with me when I exercised. Some men can go away to a desert island and have fun with dumb-bells and a horizontal bar, but to me it would seem dull and commonplace after a while, and I would yearn for more humanity.
Two of us finally concluded to play billiards, but we were only amateurs and the owner intimated that he would want the table for Fourth of July, so we broke off in the middle of the first game and I paid for it.
Then a younger brother said he had a set of boxing gloves in his room, and although I was the taller and had longer arms he would hold up as long as he could and I might hammer him until I gained strength and finally got well.
I accepted this offer because I had often regretted that I had not made myself familiar with this art and also because I knew it would create a thrill of interest and fire me with ambition and that what a hollow-eyed invalid needs to put him on the road to recovery.
The boxing glove is a large fat mitten with an abnormal thumb and a string at the wrist by which you tie it on, so that when you feed it to your adversary he cannot swallow it and choke himself. I had never seen any boxing-gloves before, but my brother said they were soft and wouldn't hurt anybody. So we took some of our raiment and put them on. Then we shook hands. I can remember distinctly yet that we shook hands. That was to show that we were friendly and would not slay each other.
My brother is a great deal younger than I am and so I warned him not to get excited and come for me with anything that would look like wild and ungovernable fury because I might in the heat of debate pile his jaw upon his forehead and fill his ear full of sore thumb. He said that was all right and he would try to be cool and collected.
Then we put out our right toes close together and I told him to be on his guard. At that moment I dealt him a terrific blow aimed at his nose, but through a clerical error of mine it went over his shoulder and spent itself in the wall of the room shattering a small, holly wood bracket for which I paid him $3.75 afterward. I did not wish to buy the bracket because I had two at home, but he was arbitrary about it and I bought it.

We then took another athletic posture, and in two seconds the air was full of puffed thumb and buckskin mitten. I soon detected a chance to put one in where my brother could smell of it, but I never knew just where it struck, for at that moment I ran up against something with the pit of my stomach that made me throw up the sponge along with some other groceries, the names of which I cannot now recall.
My brother then proposed that we take off the gloves, but I thought that I had not sufficiently punished him, and that another round would complete the conquest, which was then almost within my grasp. I took a bismuth powder and squared myself, but in warding off a left-hander, I forgot about my adversary's right and ran my nose into the middle of his boxing glove. Fearing that I had injured him, I retreated rapidly on my elbows and shoulder-blades to the corner of the room, thus giving him ample time to recover. By this means my younger brother's features were saved and are to-day as symmetrical as my own.
I can still cough up pieces of boxing gloves, and when I close my eyes I can see calcium lights and blue phosphorescent gleams across the horizon, but I am thoroughly convinced that there is no physical exercise which yields the same amount of health and elastic vigor to the puncher that the manly art does. To the puncher, also, it affords a large wad of glad surprises and nose bleed, which cannot be hurtful to those who hanker for the pleasing nervous shock, the spinal jar and the protechnic concussion.
That is why I shall continue the exercises after I have practiced with a mule or a cow-catcher two or three weeks, and feel a little more confidence in myself.—Bill Nye.

In the region, he sold out the seven-thousand acres of land he still held, and all his other property at and about Limestone, which place he selected as his residence early in the history of the field; and, as stated, will take up his residence in New York. The great oil-field to the development of which his efforts directly led has been rapidly declining for a year and more past. There is no more new territory to drill, and the old wells are not averaging more than four barrels a day, and most of them are pumped at that. Many of them have failed entirely, and the production of the whole district can not be more than 35,000 barrels a day. But there are stored in the tanks of the oil regions over 34,000,000 barrels of petroleum, surplus production, of which probably eight-tenths came from the west of the northern field. Bradford, however, will continue to be a prosperous city even after the oil supply is entirely exhausted, for industries and business enterprises have been founded there which do not depend on oil traffic and operations for their existence, and there are vast coal and lumber districts yet to be developed. The perseverance of Job Moses anticipated the growth and prosperity of the entire northwestern boundary of Pennsylvania at least twenty years.—Correspondence N. Y. Times.

In modern Egypt a young man is not permitted to see his wife's face before marriage. This is rather rough on the young man, but it prevents the newspapers of Egypt from making jokes about the girl enticing him into an ice-cream saloon and kidnapping him in the first round.—Sorsstoen Herald.
