Republican Nominations.

For President,
JAMES G. BLAINE, of Maine.

For Vice-President,
JOHN A. LOGAN, of Illinois.

BLAINE AND LOGAN.

The National Republican Convention at Chicago assembled on Tuesday June 3 and closed its work Friday evening June 6. For President the convention nominated James G. Blaine, of Maine; for Vice President John A. Logan, of Illinois.

As a witness to the proceedings of the convention the editor of the JOURNAL was one of many thousands present. At the very outset it was easy to discover that James G. Blaine was the first choice of the multitude gathered from all quarters of the country. He led all other candidates on the first ballot and on the fourth ballot was nominated. From first to last the enthusiasm was for Blaine. It was that kind of enthusiasm that meant victory there, that means victory in November.

The nomination of Gen. Logan for Vice President was undoubtedly the strongest that could have been made. Lincoln had long been talked of for that place and the people were rather looking for his nomination but it was better wisdom to nominate Logan. No man has a stronger hold on the soldier vote than Gen. Logan. He has been the soldiers' faithful friend and chief champion. The "Old Vets" will follow "Black Jack Logan" with an unflinching step.

BLAINE AND LOGAN! The brilliant, brave, great, grand statesman of Maine, and the gallant, daring hero of Illinois. A stronger combination could not be made. The opposing forces in the Republican party four years ago are now united and marching in solid front together against the demoralized forces of democracy. In vain will the opposition hurl their javelins of slander and hate. Blaine and Logan will lead on to victory in spite of all opposing powers.

—Some so-called "independent" papers tell the people that the great independent press will not support Blaine, but this great independent press referred to is nothing but a free trade press and would oppose any Republican on a decent platform. As a general rule the spoken opinions of this great independent press are merchantable products.

—President Arthur's early telegram to Mr. Blaine, offering congratulations and cordial support, was received and read at the Chicago Convention only a few minutes after Blaine's nomination. After the shouting and hurrahing of 10,000 voices the roof of the convention building was still there. Three more cheers for President Arthur!

—From the thousands of congratulatory telegrams received by Mr. Blaine the following is selected by us as the one to be most highly prized:

CLYDE, June 8.
 To Hon. James G. Blaine, August, Me.
 Our household joins in one great thanksgiving. From the quiet of our home we send a most earnest wish that through the turbulent months to follow and in the day of victory you may be guarded and kept.

LUCRETTIA R. GARFIELD.

—The Republican platform, unanimously adopted by the Chicago convention, is a campaign document that ought to be placed in every voter's hands and by every voter thoroughly studied. Every plank is sound.

—The Republican party cordially invites the Democratic party to attend the tariff picnic this fall. The program is announced in the Republican platform. Admission free.

—The Republicans can elect Blaine and Logan without New York, but the Republicans of New York will not go fishing until after November.

—The California delegation to the Chicago convention went to Maine after Blaine was nominated and put their little hands in his.

—The national Democratic convention will be held in the same building the Republican convention occupied when it nominated the next president.

—I have heard of Blaine before. I have seldom risen at early dawn with out finding the gentlemen up.—B. F. Butler.

—The slander and smut mills of the opposition will grind in vain. Blaine and Logan are going straight through to Washington. Can't stop them.

If you want to hear an old soldier yell loud enough to be heard three miles away just ask him how "Black Jack Logan" stands in with the vets.

—Over 1,000 congratulatory telegrams were received by Mr. Blaine within three hours after his nomination. How many did B. Butler get?

—"It will be easy enough to organize Blaine and Logan clubs. The torch makers will have business enough this fall.

—Let Butler be nominated by every party opposed to Blaine and Logan and he'll strike quick sand in November.

—Ah, Blaine and Logan, eh? I think I'll have the doctor try the galvanic battery on me some more.—S. J. Tilden.

—Butler will please take his hand card off the track. The Blaine train is coming in and it's the lightning express.

—"Blaine and Logan" means a torch-light procession from Maine to California.

—Blaine and Logan will "get there" in Michigan "by a large majority," and "don't you forget it."

—Ohio nominated Blaine. The state of Garfield remembers Garfield's best friend.

—The democratic papers are blazing away at Blaine. Fliz-whish! Burnt powder doesn't count.

—No more earnest supporters of Blaine and Logan will be found than the defeated candidates.

—The ticket will increase in strength from now on to election day. Mark the prediction.

—Every "doubtful state" on the Pacific coast is going for Blaine and Logan.

—If any man has a claim on Roscoe Conkling his name is John A. Logan.

—Tilden may not feel well enough to accept. He may Horatio Seymourize.

—I believe I'll go and write a book.—A. G. Thurman.

—Roscoe Conkling never had a grand opportunity.

BLAINE!

Some Press Opinions.

Dana's New York Sun (Dem.) says: A great many Republicans are opposed to Blaine. * * * but those who imagine that because of such disaffection the country is now to witness a spiritless canvas and an easy triumph for the opposition are, in our judgment, very much in error. Mr. Blaine is a fertile and sensational politician, and he will force the fighting from the start. Moreover, a party in power is always hard to beat, and the Republican party can outdo in this respect all others that ever existed outside of Mexico. So far as the Republicans are concerned, the issue of the election is fixed, and it remains to be proved whether the Democrats have the wisdom to meet it successfully. But we warn them that it will be no holiday task, that every point will be hotly contested, and that every advantage they may gain will have to be fought for in tremendous earnest.

The N. Y. Tribune says: Mr. Blaine is the strongest candidate the Republican party could have nominated, because he best represents its convictions. The name of Mr. Blaine had been so long identified with the economic policy which the Republican party holds most dear that the popular preference for him at a time when that policy was threatened by a Democratic majority in congress, was exceedingly natural. The nomination of Gen. Logan for Vice-President was also especially fortunate. He has great strength in the west, and with the soldiers everywhere, and his name will kindle the enthusiasm of Republicans at the south. The ticket cannot be beaten.

The Philadelphia Press says: The convention could not have made a nomination which would have been as acceptable to the Republican masses or which would have made its success in November nearly as certain or as easy as it will now be. The nomination of John A. Logan for Vice President rounds out to grand proportions the ticket so grandly led by Blaine.

The Philadelphia Inquirer says: Can

Mr. Blaine be elected? Yes, if any Republican can. The popular enthusiasm which his name evokes proves that he can carry New York and Ohio, the crucial states, and he is probably the on Republican leader who, being nominated, could be elected without the vote of New York. There were enough doubtful states before the convention without New York. They are so few now as to make the vote of New York no longer necessary. The status of the states of the Pacific slope and of the southwest, which were all doubtful, are now all certain for Blaine and victory. He is a name to win with. The campaign will be a crusade; the election a triumphal march of the first choice of the people to the Presidency of the great republic.

The Washington Post (Dem.) says: The Republican national convention has nominated for President of the United States the man whom all men the great majority of Republican voters in the country demanded for that high office—James G. Blaine, of Maine. Taking it for all in all, this result is the most extraordinary tribute ever paid to the personal popularity of an American citizen. Mr. Blaine is a thorough representative of his party. He is its candidate, and he is its platform. As a candidate his strength must not be underestimated. As a platform he makes the great issue of the day for protection so that all may see. The Democracy accept the situation as it stands. They oppose protection with revenue reform. They believe the Republican party should be driven from power forthwith, and as the Republicans have elected to follow their greatest leader, so they on the other side will choose their purest and best.

The Cleveland Herald says: The voice of the Republican people has been heard and heeded. That voice has been ringing out Blaine of Maine. The convention's roar was but a faint echo of the people's voice. Not the convention but the people made Blaine the nominee. For the convention to have rejected him would have been a defiance of the clearly expressed wish of the Republican voters. It would have been at once a blunder and a crime. Wild as was the enthusiasm which swept that great assembly off its feet at the announcement of the people's favorite, it was but a public indication of the tremendous wave of enthusiastic energy whose resistless tide will carry all before it this fall and bear Blaine in triumph into the White House next March.

The Cleveland Leader says: Blaine and Logan make a winning ticket. The two great men represent the best elements of the American statesman and the American soldier.

The above are a few of the many hundreds of press comments commending the nomination of James G. Blaine and John A. Logan.
