TO ESMERALDA.

And this is the season when the sweet girl graduate is about as happy as she ever will be in this world. She has finished her education and her future is as full of rainbows as her present is full of other beaux. Happy girl. If you could always remain just as you are, Esmeralda, with no cares to worry your mind, no shadows to creep down over your bright anticipations, no dishes to wash, no stockings to darn, you would be envied by even the writer of this, who never was a girl, Esmeralda. But you cannot stop where you are, fair one. You are now 18 and from there on the years tick away pretty fast, Esmeralda. If you live it won't be so very long before you are twice 18. We'll not prophesy, Esmeralda. Should it be yours to bury many fond hopes, to row at times against the current of your fondest desires, don't get discouraged. Remember that if this is to be your experience it has been the experience of thousands and thousands and thousands of others, once just as bright, just as happy and just as care free as you are to-day. It is all a lifetime, Esmeralda. To-day you are purely ornamental. By making yourself useful you will shine even brighter than now, but to make yourself useful means more than dreaming in a seductive hammock over the happy past, or building air castles from the material found in your own brilliant but not yet mature mind. Esmeralda, you are a diamond—we all admit that—but time is the lapidary that must prove your real worth. You are showing your diploma, now, and the JOURNAL doesn't call you the least bit conceited for doing that. But, Esmeralda, that diploma doesn't say you have finished your work. It says you are now just ready to begin it. Cut this out, Esmeralda, and show it to us ten years from now. Yes, you may bring your husband with you. We shall want to look him over and if he has more hair under his nose than knows under his hair—if we find that he is a new kind of pull-back you've been getting, we'll say nothing for your sake. We'll wait until after you are gone and then simply say, "Such is life." (Esmeralda, don't be in a hurry about getting married. Wait until he gets ripe before you pick him, anyway. Mind your Uncle, Esmeralda.)

—Ex-Governor St. John, in his Grand Rapids speech last Thursday, said: "One half of Mississippi is under the control of the prohibitionists. The south is much farther advanced in this line than the north. In Alabama, Georgia and other southern states they are making rapid progress in the Temperance work."

Gov. St. John's statement may be true; if so, it proves much more than he admitted. It proves that those states which gave Mr. St. John the smallest number of votes are "much farther advanced in this line" than are those states that gave him the greatest number of votes. Gov. St. John's vote in the South was merely a scattering vote. Not a southern state took any stock in Gov. St. John or the "third party" movement. And Gov. St. John condemns himself out of his own mouth when he openly admits that prohibition is making more rapid progress in those states that repudiated him and his party, than in those states where he and his party were strongest. Through local option laws, adopted by the people irrespective of party politics, the South has accomplished what it has for the cause of temperance. Gov. St. John applauds the results, but asks him to adopt the same method to secure those results and you ask him to abandon the third party and to take down his sign. His admission is a confession that the third party movement is a mistake. It is all right for an orator to ride high on his rhetoric, provided he doesn't break his neck with his logic.

—Ex-Gov. Begole has been writing conciliatory letters for the greenback papers. He regrets that the administration has so often ignored the claims of the greenbackers, and fears that President's course will, if persisted in, ruin the fusion party in Michigan. Mr. Begole, however, is a fusionist and intimates that the greenbackers would be satisfied with a little windfall plum. That is about what they will get, Mr. Begole.

—Congressman Eldredge of this state says he is done with the President, so far as appointments are concerned. Eldredge wants to make good his promises in his district and his inability to do so leads him to remark that his district will surely go Republican next time. The podier of political patronage finds himself out of goods, quite frequently, of late.

—The greenback organ of Western Michigan says "the present stagnation of business is a marvel to everybody and the end cannot be foreseen." Then have you fusionists been deceiving the people. You told us "a change" would make times better.

—They begin to spell civil service reform without Capitals now. A few months ago it was not thus. Big poster type was too small then.

—Bartholdi's great statue of Liberty was formally received at New York last week. It beats the Cardiff giant out of sight.

JOURNAL JOTTINGS.

Grand Rapids races this week. A slight frost Monday morning. F. C. Miller of Keene has gone to Iowa. Attend Commencement Friday evening. Saranac and Freeport will celebrate the 4th. Base ball: Clarksville 23, Freeport 6, June 13. Fursman's circus was well patronized in Lowell. Geo. Schanfele of Ionia dropped dead Wednesday. Apoplexy. Mrs. Mary Snook will spend the summer in Dakota and Minnesota. A. C. Adair has returned from Greenland where he has been teaching. Ex-editor Phister of Hubbardston has sued the Lyons Herald editor for libel. Petoskey, the celebrated Indian chief who died on the 13th inst. was 106 years old. A strawberry from C. M. Devendorf's garden measured 5 1/2 inches in circumference.

Mr. Lewis Bolter has sold his farm to Joseph Gilbert and will hereafter reside in this village.

Some farmers begin haying this week, although the grass is still rapidly growing in most fields.

Mr. C. T. Scofield, who recently purchased the Olm farm, is preparing to build a new house.

Mrs. E. P. Gifford of Saranac was attacked and seriously injured by a mad cow last Wednesday.

"That's a yarn made out of whole cloth."—Ex. Who can name the author of this common phrase?

Mr. Geo. D. Wilson and sister Nettie have gone to Ann Arbor to attend the University commencement.

The largest and best lettuce we have seen came from Will Booth's garden. It is the Early Durham variety.

Rev. J. T. Husted's sermon to the school Sunday evening was an able, instructive and interesting one.

The Salvation Army corps of Lowell, contemplate building barracks on Water street, north of the Lyon block.

The report that Don Henderson of Allegan had joined the democratic party was a gigantic, mastodontic 1-1-1-he!

The Lowell base ball boys have accepted an invitation to meet a picked nine from Grand Rapids in that city July 3.

Dr. S. S. Fallas has purchased the Brown property at Fallasburg and is making noticeable improvements thereon.

Dr. A. B. Grant has finally decided to remain at Ionia permanently. His many friends here regret his departure from Lowell.

Owen Fawcett had a good house here Wednesday night, but Miss Fry's concert beats Jeremiah Dodge. She is no small fry.

Rev. L. F. Waldo, formerly of Lowell, has received a call to Pentwater. He has been holding a pastorate at Shelby for several years.

Joseph K. Fairchild has resumed control of the Alcona County Review. Joe is a Lowell boy and his friends here hope he will become a millionaire.

Recent visitors at Mrs. I. E. Strong's: Mrs. Bristol, Mrs. Smith, Miss Jennie Smith of St. Johns, and two cousins, the Misses Covert of Oakland county.

Mr. Wm. McKee, of Cascade, who was thrown from his wagon and seriously injured while returning home from Lowell on the 13th inst., died last Thursday night, of paralysis.

One of the most successful florists in Lowell is Mrs. Jas. Loop, from whose garden has come scores of beautiful bouquets this season. She has plants and bulbs in great variety for sale.

The Charlotte Republican says: E. A. Chapman, of Battle Creek, the new proprietor of the Star photograph gallery, has moved his family to the city and is occupying a residence on east Lovett street.

Representative Sellers of Cedar Springs made an excellent record at Lansing. He was one of the most active and influential members of the House and as speaker pro tem, discharged his duties with such ability and fairness as to receive a vote of thanks from that body at the close of the session. Good for "Mac."

Speaking of the show here Friday, our esteemed contemporary, the Independent, says:

"Fursman and Co.'s show exhibited here yesterday, it is first class, and very creditable in all its performance, which we can highly praise as performing some very daring feats, which sights alone are well worth the admittance fee."

On the 14th inst. lightning struck a fish shanty a few miles from Mackinaw City in which were John Kellogg (son of Titus Kellogg of Vergennes,) and three others. Two of the men were instantly killed and another so seriously hurt it was thought he could not recover. Kellogg escaped without injury. He took the wounded man to the nearest point inhabited, four miles distant from the shanty. The dispatches last week gave Kellogg's name as "Kelley." John had a narrow escape.

Saranac Local: The residence of Penn Buxton, of this township, was destroyed by fire Monday afternoon. Mr. Buxton had gone to Lowell at the time, and the fire was discovered by Mrs. Buxton, who was cleaning house, too late to save any furniture excepting an organ, bureau and a few chairs. All the clothing but what the family had on their backs was destroyed. The house was insured for $100 and the contents were also insured but for what sum we have been unable to ascertain.

The class in Modern Literature meets this afternoon at 3 o'clock, sun time, with Miss May Stocking. A brief review will be given of last week's study with an informal talk by all upon Victor Hugo. Victor Hugo's reminiscences of his early years, Lillie O'Heron; his mother and the publication of his first volume of poems, Cora E. Chase; his courtship and marriage, Carrie Avery; Victor Hugo as an exile in the Isle of Jersey in 1832, Anna Daniels; Victor Hugo's description of himself in the character of Marius in "Les Miserables," Bird Coleman; his address to the Americans upon the hanging of John Brown, Annie Hunter; his love of children, Lizzie Robinson. Music in care of Annie Hunter.

The JOURNAL begins its 21st year this week. It was established in 1863 by Webster Morris. In December 1870 the present proprietor bought a half interest and in 1873 he bought the other half. That made the whole of it. And yet there is very little material in the office to-day that the office contained when we came in. The presses now in use are all new, as well as the news and job type, save a few fonts of the latter. The old hand press was dismissed and a new cylinder press with steam power put in. (It is the same old gun with a new lock, stock and barrel.) Next week, or week after, the JOURNAL will come out in a handsome new dress and other improvements will be added from time to time, as the business of the concern may warrant. Elegant new job type has also been purchased, as well as new wood type for bill and poster work. Few country offices are so well equipped as the JOURNAL office. It takes money to equip and conduct a newspaper. If any of our readers have any of our money—and we know they have—now is the time to make the transfer from their pockets to ours.

AN EDITORIAL PICNIC.

The meeting of the sixth district press association at Owosso last Wednesday was one of the most harmonious gatherings we have ever had the pleasure of attending. The pleasure was intensified by circumstances so unexpected that we feel constrained to repeat the above assertion forty or fifty times.

Arriving at the Owosso depot the visiting editors took the pedestrian hack line to the city and, kindly guided by unerring instinct, had no difficulty in finding a hotel. They found the city ablaze with inertia—the streets fairly thronged with a street sprinkler.

Unprovided with a search warrant the visiting editors started out to find the resident members of the fraternity, their object being to explain to the resident members the object of the visit. This duty done the visitors were fortunate enough to be discovered by Mr. Edward Dewey, of the Times, who will ever be kindly remembered for courtesies extended to the visiting brethren. Ed is a gentleman.

After dinner the delegation unanimously voted to patrol the streets unaccompanied by a brass band. They took the pedestrian hack line again and did the town. The aggregation consisted of Hon. Wm. Van Buren of the Lansing Republican, Fitzgerald of the Ovid Union, Slocum of the Holly Advertiser and truthful James, of this voluptuous publication.

Forming in line by twos on Main st., the right resting on a barber shop, the line of march was followed with unbroken step, the entire brigade marching with bayonets fixed. The imposing display brought to the windows, doors and front gates scores of children and dogs, the latter showing unbounded enthusiasm. Countermarching by file left, the mayor might have reviewed the procession from a dry goods box in front of the hotel, had he been present. The entire division broke ranks in front of a pile of brick and inquired the way to the depot. A small boy volunteered the desired information but was regarded by the inquirer as an impostor. "What town is this?" the boy was asked. He said "Owosso." Then we all thanked him and told him he had a better memory than most boys of his age.

Arriving at the depot at 1:30, slandering the visiting members were tendered a banquet of peanuts at five cents a pint. The darned cup didn't hold a pint—it was made in Owosso.

The reception committee was at the depot to see us off. He carried a little box containing a brush and some boot polish and offered to shine 'em up for a nickel.

The trains arrived—one train from the east and one from the west—and the visiting brethren parted to meet no more at Owosso.

The writer had never been there before. It seems that most of the editors of that district had, for they were not found there this time. Editors know when they've had enough.

Owosso Junction is quite a place. That's about a mile from Owosso.

To the Teachers of Kent County.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 12, '85.
A two weeks State Institute for Kent County will be held at Grand Rapids, commencing Monday July 13. The institute will be conducted on the plan of class instruction with stated recitations. The corps of instructors: Prof. E. A. Strong and H. B. Pattengill of Grand Rapids and Sup. Perry of Ann Arbor are among the ablest in the State. In urging you to attend this institute, we feel that we are asking of you only that which you owe to your patrons and yourselves. The work you are doing, or attempting to do, calls for thorough preparation on your part and we are sure you cannot afford to miss the present opportunity. Teachers who are known to do good work need have no fear of unskilled competition—situations for them are always assured. Institutes, associations and teachers' meetings are educators and you should avail yourselves of the opportunities they afford.

Good and pleasant boarding places will be found for those desiring it and at reasonable rates.—Bring your text books as lessons will be assigned and you will need them for study and reference.—Please report your intention of attending to the Local Committee, GEO. A. RAYBURN, Cannonsburg. Respectfully &c.
