PRAIRIE PINES IN MITTESTA

Destroyed in Jackson, Minn, Nov. 4—A terrible prairie fire has been raging through Sloux Valley township, Jackson County, for the last thirty-six hours. Five lives are already reported tost, while the destruction of property will reach many theosands of dollars. In the eastern part of the township Mrs. Mollie O'Connor and her babe were cremated in their burning dwelling and their charred remains were found in the embers of their burned home by the father and brother upon their return frem Jackson, where they had gone for the day. A mile away Heury Ray, a farm-hand 20 years of age, burned to death in a barn on the Edwards farm. Mr. Edwards house also burned and the occupants barely escaped with their lives. It is reported that a woman and her son from lows, visiting friends in the eastern portion of the township, were burned to death, but nothing definite has as yet been learned. The fire is still raging, and un less it can be cheeked desens of families will be driven from their homes. The sky is furif with the reflection of the fames, and the people living in the vicinity of the burning district are panie-stricken.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION. Thursday, November 29, the Day Selected

Thursday. November 29, the Day Selected by the President.

Washington, Nov. 3.—The Fresident has issued the following proclamation:

"Constant thanksgiving and gratitude are due from the American people to Amighty Ged for His goodness and mercy which have followed them since the day the made them a Nation and vouchsaled to them a free government. With loving kindness He has constantly led us in the way of prosperity and greatness. He has not visited with awiit punishment our short-comings, but with gracious care He has warned us of our dependence upon His forbacance, and has taught us that obedience to His holy law is the price of a continuance of His precious gifts.

"In acknowledgment of all that God has done for us as a Nation, and to the end that on an appointed day the utiled prayers and praise of a grateful country may reach the throne of grase, I, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, do hereby designate and set apart Thursday, the 19th day of November, instant, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, to be kept and observed throughout the land. "On that day let all our people suspend their ordinary work and occupations, and in their accustomed place of worship, with prayer and songs of praise, render thanks to God for all His mercies, for the abundant harvests which have rewarded the toil of the husbandman during the year that has passed, and for the rich rewards that have followed the labors of our people in the rabops and their marts of trade and traffic. Let us give thanks for peace and for social order and contentment within our borders, and for our advancement in all that adds to National greatness.

"And, minditule the afflictive dispensation with which a portion of our land has been visited, let us, while we humble ourselves before the power of God, acknowledge His mercy is setting bounds to the deathy march of peatilence, and let our heart is be chastened by sympathy with our fellow countrymen who have suffered and who mourn.

MEXICAN BULL FIGHT.

A Description from the Fen of Gen. Legar's Daughter.

On Sunday we witnessed a thoroughly Spanish amisement, a buil fight. After a long ride in the horse cars, which went at a galloping pace, an improvement on our last coachman, we reached at the grounds, which, from the outside, greatly resembled an American circus. The unial number of small bors, horsemen tearing about raising the dust, venders of dirty cakes and candies, "tamales" (or corn cakes), spars with ornaments of paper on them, which we afterward learned were to stick into the poor beasts, all tended to bewilder you, but after some discussion and much gesticulation, we purchased our tickets and were shown to what they called a private box, but to us seemed more like a stall in a barn. The entire circle of seats was packed with people, many women among the throng. The seats in the shade are higher priced than those in the sun, and we were glad to find ours were cut of its boiling raya. The band played "Olivette," the people cheered and hurried on the event of the afternoon.

Soon the gates to the right of the arena were thrown open and about twelve men dressed in gorgoously embroidered suits, two as clowns, four men on horses, which were covered with a leathern armor, and four large mules ornamented with ribbons of various colors entered. The latter were barnessed to an arrangement of straps and hooks which we found later were to draw off the siain. After marching around amid the wild cheers and waving of the sombreros of the people, they took their places about the ring, the mules withdrawing nutil required. In a moment the gates of the left were thrown open and the buil dashed in. The amusement, as they consider it, consists in waving bright colored (nearly all are scarlety cloaks or large pieces of cloth at the poor beast, who rushes about from one to the other, each instant more infuriated, but the first animal brought in on this day was too decile, and did not prove sufficiently entertaining, so the judge gave the signal (the furmynet sounds in t

Swallowing a Thermometer.

Dr. M. Singer, of Galveston, Tex., writes:
The patient, a German, who understood but little English, was admitted to the hospital for a fever not yet diagnosed. As soon as he was seated by his bedside I introduced the thermometer into his mouth, enjoining him at the same time not to bite or swallow it.
Standing in front of my patient, I saw the thermometer disappear in his mouth, while at the same time a motion, as of degluttion, was performed by the man. When I recovered from the shock such a sight gave me, I requested my patient to open his mouth.

ered from the shock such a sight gave me, I requested my patient to open his mouth. Sure enough the instrument was there no longer, and when I asked the man in German what he had done with the thermometer, he answered that he had understood me to say that he shoul! swallow it, and, of course, he had obeyed orders.

I snatched a blanket from the bed and spread it on the floor, then making the man lie flat on his stomach on the bed, with the head hanging down over the edge of it. I told him that unless he wished to die he should introduce his fingers as far down the throat as nim that unless he wished to die he should in-troduce his fingers as far down the throat as possible and make one supreme effort to vornit. This was quickly and efficiently done, for in less time than it takes me to re-late it, the thermometer was regurgitated, and fell safe and sound on the blanket. I took the precaution of tring a thread to me took the precaution of tying a thread to my instrument whenever after ward it became necessary to take the temperature of this or any other such bright min-led patient.—Med-ical Record.

Experience of a Life Saver.

Nearly every one who has visited Rockaway has noticed a muscular, sun browned man, clad in a blue jersey bathing suit. He is generally to be seen near the main bathing pavilion at the foot of Remsen avenue. He is "01" Rider, a professional swimmer, and his duty is to save from drowning the venturesome bathers. He is only 20 years of age, but during his life he has saved over fifty lives and has been awarded seven medals. The other day, when speaking to a reporter, he said:

"I can tell the moment I see a bather struggling just what chance I heve to get to him before he goes down. Few people know what a risk and task it is to save a drowning person. When I first became a life saver I had many narrow escapes, but experience has taught me to avoid them. The greatest danger is in being grabbed and pulled under by the one whom you are trying to save. Now, when I see there is danger of a drowning person catching hold of me I swim around them and knock them out with a clip under the ear. Then all I have to do is to swim in with them. It's as true as you live, but insteten out of every twenty you save, when they come to will in some way or another blame you. Lause they came near being drowned. They never think of thanking you. I have most trouble here with drunken bathers. If they are able to swim at all they go out further than they should, but I soon bring them in on my catamaran. I keep them out of the water altogether if I see them in time."—New York Evening Sun.

Why We Have Bright's Disease.
An Albany physician says Americans suffer more generally from Bright's disease and nervous complaints than any other people, because they sit down so persistently at their work. When Englishmen, Germans and Frenchmen walk and exercise, an American business man will go to his office, take his seat in his chair, and sit there all day without giving any relief to the tension of the muscles surrounding the kidneys become work and flabby. Yang iose their vitality. The kidneys themselves become weak and deblitated. If business men would walk more and a and instead of sitting at their desks their health would be much improved.—Chicago Heraid.

A HARD NUT TO CRACK-

SERVING THE SULTAN.

OVER SIX THO JSAND PERSONS FED THREE TIMES A DAY.

ing Department-The Harem.

Ing Department—The Harem.

There are over 6,000 persons fed three times a day at Dolma-Bagchee palace while the sultan is there, which makes housekeeping rather a serious affair, particularly when we know that these menls are served in nearly half as many places, there being no regular dining room nor place which could render the labor a little lighter. Though there are tables in some of the departments, the majority prefer to eat from their knees, and thus their meals are handed around, which makes an enormous amount of unnecessary work. To keep all this great machinery of supply in perfect order, so that no matter how many mouths there are to fill nor what sudden caprice may seize the sultan or any udden caprice may seize the sultan or any of his numerous women, it may be instantly of his nu sudden caprice may seize the sultan or any of his numerous women, it may be instantly satisfied, is a tax upon the best capacity, backed by unlimited money or credit. No matter how unreasonable or almost impossible the demand may be, there is no allow ance made for delay in the service.

That there is good executive ability in the management of this enormous household is clear, for there is scarcely ever a jar or a hitch, even under the impulse of the most untimely demands. Every different department is under the control of a person who is directly responsible for that, and he has a corps of servants and slaves under his order who obey him only, and he is subject to the treasurer of the household. Women have no voice whatever in the management of anything in any department, Their sole occupation is to wait upon their respective mistresses, or to serve the sultan in some speciresses, or to serve the sultan in some specifled capacity.

The sultan's Caprices.

The chamberiain is mostly occupied in ministering to the wants and caprices of the sultan, and is in almost constant attendance upon him, so the treasurer of the household has the burden of the housekeeping on his burly shoulders. He has an organized force of buyers, who are each charged with the purchase of certain supplies for their individual departments, each having his helpers, servants and slaves. One man is charged with the duty of supplying all the fish, and as to furnishing fish for certainly 6,000 persons is no light undertaking in a place where there are no great markets, as there are in all other large cities. He has to have about twenty man to scour the various small markets and buy of the fishermen, and each of these men has two others to carry the fish they buy. It requires about ten tons of fish a week.

There are nearly 18,000 pounds of bread eaters, and this is all back in the enormous ovens situated at some distance from the palace. The kitchens are detached from all the palaces and kiosks. It requires a large force of bakers to make the broad and another to bring it to the palace and another force of buyers who purchase the flour and fuel. The bringing of the most of the wood and charcoal is done by the unhappy camela, who carry it on their backs. There is a cook for each separate course, and he has his asistants and scullions, so that there are in all is and the control of the court of the wood and charcoal is done by the unhappy camela, who carry it on their backs.

The lord high chamberlain chooses his corps of buyers and the chiefs of different departments to suit himself, usually making such choice more from some occult reasoning than fitness for the position. He then trusts the departments to those persons and trans-mits his imperative orders through the second chamberlain. After him in importance is the treasurer of the household, who receives all the bills, looks them over and then for-wards them to the sublime porte, where they are paid—in time.

THE PURCHASING DEPARTMENT. THE PURCHASING DEPARTMENT.
The providing for the material wants of all these persons, then, really falls upon the chamberiain. He appoints a chibouk-kiassi who provides all the pipes used in and about the palace, both for the men and the women, including the narghiles. Then there is a tutunknissi, who sees that the whole palace is the chiberity annulus with telescent The tutunkniassi, who sees that the whole palace is liberally supplied with tobacco. The espap-kiassi furnishes the clothes for the sultan's wear—that is, he buys them. Another buys the sultan's shoes and slippers. Those who buy the personal effects of the sultan have by no means a sinccure, as he never wears the same garment or pair of shoes twice, nor does he ever sleep in the same sheets or bedding a second time. It is supposed that all clothing and bedding which have touched the sacred person of the sultan are destroyed immediately after he has dis-

The chamberlain has a chief of the buyers for the kitchen supplies and another for each of the household departments, and these have from ten to twenty aids, and these again have underlings, who all must be fed by the royal bounty, and they all receive their salaries, large or small. The chief of each department receives and weighs or ap-praises the value of all the articles of food purchased, and then, attesting to the correct-each department receives and weighs or appraises the value of all the articles of food purchased, and then, attesting to the correctness of the weight or value, hands his accounts to the treasurer of the household. In this way stealing is not so easy as foreigners imagine it.

The buyers of the furniture, of the carpets, the glassware, silver and gold plate, the jewels, the soap, perfumery and cosmetics, the candies and dried fruits, the kitchen utantils, and, in short, for every department are all subject to the same strict aystem. The buying for the haren is done by the same persons, with the exception of dresses and other feminine tollet articles, which the women now buy for themselves generally. They ride out and shop very much like other women, only they have no idea as to the value of money, and they order whatever strikes their fancy, no matter what it is, and the bills are sent to the chief cunuch, who hands them, after supervision, to the treasurer of the household, who has to get the high chamberlain's counter signatura. The sewing is done by women who have nothing size to do—that is, such of it as is done there. Whenever it is possible the parments are bought ready mads.—New York Herald.

Had a Trained Ear.

A native of New Jersey, who is visiting in Detroit, kept brushing around his face in a rather frantic manner one evening whenever the boat whistles blew.

At last some one asked him: "Do whistles disturb you?"

"Whistles?" he responded blankly, "I thought those were musquitoss burning around,"—Detroit Free Press.

Where They Should Be. "Phat's thinf' said Mucahey, pointing to the life preservers on deck. "Those are life preservers," said the officer. "On, life pre-sarvers, are they! Thin why don't yet send thim to their hospitals, where there's plinty dring an' dying all the toims, bedad!"— Costn.

In Case of a Fire.

Capt. Shaw, the well known chief of the London Fire brigade, in a magazine article on the protection of dwelling houses from fire, says: "There is a great deal of faulty construction in houses in consequence of architects being seldom employed. Cracked walls are almost sure to give way in case of fire.

Party walls should be carried at least three feet above the highest part of the roofs. All Party' walls should be carried at least three feet above the highest part of the roofs. All roofs should be provided with windows or openings by which the immates of a house could escape in the event of the stairs becoming impassable. The best material for stairs is wrought from and the worst stone, since the latter yields to an amount of heat which does not affect ordinary respiration. Whenever a house has both wooden and stone stairs the immates should, in case of fire, invariably make for the wooden stairs, as affording the only hope of escape."—Chicago Herald.
