THE STORM-KING.

He Leaves Death and Destruction in His Path.

A Cyclone in South Dakota Causes the Loss of a Number of Lives and Ruin to Property.

IN DAKOTA.

RUMON, S. D., June 20.—Private telegrams from the scene of the cyclone and cloud-burst near Appomattox, Potter County, give additional particulars and add three to the death list making the total dead eleven. Two others were fatally and three severely injured. The loss to stock and crops is heavy. The storm burst suddenly in the night, when people were asleep and it is remarkable that so few persons considering the severity of the storm. An hour after the cloud-burst the Little Cheyenne river, usually very shallow, raised twenty-five feet and the waters rushing down the valley carried every thing in their path. Nearly every house in the valley was swept away. The McElroy family escaped some distance from their houses after the building collapsed. Mrs. McElroy and two daughters were drowned. Five of the Weger family also perished and others are reported missing.

IN KANSAS.

ATKINSON, Kan., June 21.—The flood which visited Atkinson Thursday night was the heaviest and most destructive in the history of the city. Five of the largest railroad bridges in the city, six large wagon bridges, eight trestle bridges, besides innumerable other things, were carried down White Clay creek and hurled against the Sixth street viaduct. Mayor Wagner has 200 men at work removing the debris. The damage to the city is a great deal heavier than was first thought, as every business firm suffered more or less. The water mains burst during the storm and the city is now without water. A protecting fence from fire. All the railroad tracks in the vicinity are badly washed and trains are abandoned. Crops are badly washed throughout the country districts. The damage in the city and country is estimated at $150,000. As yet no lives have been reported as lost. The storm was confined to a small streak along the Missouri river.

IN MISSOURI.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 20.—The heaviest storm of the season visited this section of the country Thursday afternoon between 5 and 6 o'clock. The rain poured down in torrents and many business houses were flooded. In the north end of the city several sewers burst, causing thousands of dollars' worth of damage. Joseph C. Combs, a colored man, was washed into a sewer and drowned.

IN ILLINOIS.

PAW PAW, Ill., June 21.—The first accounts of the destruction caused by the cyclone which swept through the outskirts of this town were somewhat exaggerated owing to the great excitement and confusion which prevailed. So far as may be known, at least ten deaths were made a total of fourteen, seven of them inmates of the school-house caught in the whirlwind. Those in the school, none of whom escaped, were Maggie McElroy, the teacher; Edna Hunt, 9 years old; Jennie Bradley, 7 years; Ida Rudolph, 9 years; Minnie Barry, 11 years; Lena Prentiss, 13 years, and Carey White, Jr., 13 years.

The others found dead were: Peter Dean, an old farmer; Robert Oakley, 11 years old; an unknown child, killed in Brooklyn township; Mrs. Bittner, of Gablets; Mrs. Bolache and two children of Compton.

Nearly all the people whose houses were wrecked needed help, in some cases of a severe nature.

SUBLETTE, Ill., June 21.—Friday's storm started about four miles west and north of Sublette, first destroying the houses of William E. Long and Charles Beach, then sweeping down upon the north part of the little village of Sublette, dealing death and destruction. Mrs. Frederick Bittner, of Sublette, was killed. Among those who escaped were the wife and mother of Henry Wolf, Mrs. Joseph Clark, Mrs. Ben Foster, Langan, George Kayler, wife and four children; George Bachelor's wife, Mrs. Casper Eysenbocher and two children; Mrs. Reynolds and daughter, Corrie, Edith, Lucy and Mary; Mrs. George Kayler, William McAleer, wife and two children; Grace Barton, all of Sublette.

LA CROSSE, Wis., June 20.—There was a big food at Springville and several bridges were washed out. The streams were badly swollen and several bridges were carried away. The damage done to crops was great. It was the worst storm in years.

YACONIA, Ga., June 21.—The heaviest rain of the season fell here Wednesday evening, fully six inches of water falling within one hour. Nine-tenths of the small bridges in the county are washed away and much damage was done to crops.

A severe wind and hail storm struck the village of Highland Wednesday evening and blew down Cholvin's hardware store, upset several barns and so damaged a large brick building that the occupants had to abandon it. No one was hurt. The hail-stones were as large as hen's eggs and totally ruined the crops on the farms where they fell, breaking thousands of buds of lights of fruit.

RECLAND CENTER, Wis., June 21.—The heaviest rain of the season fell here this morning. The damage to crops, bridges, mills and saw-mills throughout the country is very great. In the Crook Creek valley every bridge was washed out and a number of dwelling houses and barns were lifted off their foundations.

IN IBERNIA.

CENSUS RETURNS.

Estimates of the Population of Several Cities.

The Work of the Enumerators is Nearly Completed. Large Gains Made in Some Towns in the Past Ten Years.

MAKING ESTIMATES.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Charles H. Murray, the supervisor of the census of this city, made up his estimate Saturday of the population of the city, which, according to his figures, is 1,048,227. There are twenty districts to be heard from, and also the special enumerators appointed from Washington to take the census of the county institutions. These he thinks will give 25,000 more names.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Supervisor of the Census Sedgwick, of the Long Island district, said Saturday that the population of Brooklyn would fall a little below 900,000. At the last census, in 1880, Brooklyn's population numbered 566,663.

PHILADELPHIA, June 21.—General B. B. Heath, supervisor of the census, gives as his unofficial estimate of Philadelphia's population, 1,000,449, a gain of only 103,379 in ten years.

NEW ORLEANS, June 21.—Saturday was the last day fixed to take the census in New Orleans, but the work is far from done. Supervisors daily reports that only half the enumerators have been handed in their lists to him. The State census, taken in March, is nearly complete. It shows a total of about 1,167,000 for Louisiana and 236,500 for New Orleans.

CINCINNATI, June 21.—The census returns for Cincinnati and Hamilton County are still far from complete, one ward only in Cincinnati being finished. The indications from these incomplete figures are that the population of Cincinnati is about 300,000, and that of Hamilton County about 400,000.

BOSTON, June 21.—Upon the basis of the census returns already completed the population of Boston is estimated at 357,790, a gain of nearly 7,000 since 1880.

CHICAGO, June 21.—Supervisor Gilbert will not make an estimate of the census of this city, but says that from his review of his enumerators' reports it will reach considerably over 1,000,000. The estimate made on the basis of the school census places the population of Chicago at 1,250,000. The estimate furnished for Philadelphia is 1,048,000, which would give Chicago second place by a large majority.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 21.—Superintendent Conner says that Indianapolis will probably show a population of 133,000.

COLUMBIA, O., June 21.—The census just finished makes the population of Columbus 113,793, a gain of 61,415 in ten years.

CLEVELAND, O., June 21.—The census here is completed, and from the returns from some of the population is estimated at 248,000.

DETROIT, Mich., June 21.—It is claimed that 34,000 people were omitted from the census enumeration in Detroit. The population is estimated at 197,000.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 21.—The city's population, estimated from incomplete census returns, is 235,000.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 21.—Superintendent Spencer estimates the population of Louisville as 152,000.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 21.—Unofficial reports give Des Moines a population of 53,000; Dubuque, 40,000; Sioux City, 35,000; Cedar Rapids, 28,000; Davenport and Burlington, 20,000 each; and Marshalltown, 15,000.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 21.—The population of this city is made by the census over 500,000.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., June 21.—The census gives Pittsburgh's population approximately at 230,000.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The population is estimated at 230,000 by the new census.
