SAD SCENES IN DUBLIN.

DUBLIN, Oct. 12.—The day looked forward to with so much anxiety has passed, and the country is congratulating itself upon the fact that no such scenes of disorder as had been predicted to mark the funeral of the national hero, Parnell, were witnessed.

During a drenching rain the remains of Charles Stewart Parnell were laid to rest Sunday. The funeral was one of the most imposing ever held in Ireland. Special trains from all parts of the country brought tens of thousands of sad-hearted Irishmen to Dublin.

The scene at Holyhead when the cortege arrived at 1:35 o'clock Sunday morning was mournful in the extreme. Dozens of Parnell's close friends had come across from Kingstown to meet the body and burst into tears as they beheld the coffin. The remains were quickly placed aboard the steamer Ireland, which had been specially detailed for this service. The passengers followed and crowded the boat to its utmost capacity.

The chief mourners who sat around the coffin in the cabin were Mr. Henry Parnell, who bears a striking resemblance to his late brother; Mrs. Dickenson, a sister, and Miss Dickenson, a niece of the deceased; with these was Miss Maude Genne, who became famous for her stubborn resistance to the evictions in Donegal. She had traveled from Tonlon to attend the funeral of the man who was an idol with her.

The steamer arrived at Kingstown about 9 o'clock in the morning. Despite the fierce downpour of rain and the raw wind that made it almost impossible to stand on the pier thousands of people were waiting and reverently bared their heads as the coffin was brought ashore and the body of Parnell rested upon the soil of the country for which he struggled and died.

A singular scene was now witnessed. As the coffin was removed from the box which had encased it the crowd rushed forward and seized the box, tearing it quickly to pieces for the purpose of obtaining fragments of the wood as relics. In a few moments more Dublin was reached, and a great throng greeted, with every mark of sorrow and love, the coming of the body of their leader. The coffin was borne on the shoulders of six stalwart Irishmen to St. Michael's church, near the law courts, where the rector, Rev. Thomas Long, assisted by Rev. G. A. Frye, rector of All Souls' church, Manchester, read the service of the church of Ireland. The immediate friends and the relatives of the deceased completely filled the church, the throng of general mourners remaining meanwhile outside in the pouring rain. The brief service being over, the procession was formed and the coffin, escorted by numerous Irish societies and by many thousands of citizens, was conveyed to the city hall and placed upon a magnificent catafalque in the central hall, at the foot of the statue of the great O'Connell.

At the head of the coffin stood the cousin of the Wicklow volunteers, organized by Mr. Parnell's father in 1779. At the top of the coffin was an immense cross of flowers, inscribed with the names of the thirty-one faithful parliamentary colleagues of Parnell. The incense around the coffin was a mass of floral offerings of every shape and design, and coming from Parnell's admirers in all parts of Ireland and England.

At 10 o'clock the arrangements were completed so that the crowd could be permitted to file past the coffin. A procession six deep moved past, and the stream flowed uninterrupted for three hours. It is estimated that 125,000 people passed the body. The crowd was kept moving as speedily as possible by a large detail of police, and there was no lurch in the programme. The Parnellite members of parliament stood inside the barrier as a sort of bodyguard.

At 1 o'clock the procession was stopped, though there seemed no end to the line of people who wished to pass the coffin. It was necessary, however, to begin the march to the cemetery, which would otherwise not be reached until late in the evening. Rev. Dr. Frye and Chaplain M. C. Vincent, of the Rotunda hospital, gave the word for the removal of the body, and at 2:30 o'clock the procession to the tomb began. The coffin rested on an open bier, the floral design accompanying it being the one sent by the widow bearing the words: "To My Own True Love, My Husband,

My King.

The other floral tributes were conveyed to the grave by the pall-bearers and the colleagues of the deceased. Among those conspicuous in the procession was Mr. Alexander J. Reid, the United States consul in Dublin. Not a single anti-Parnellite, known as such, was visible. The order of march was: Pall-bearers, chief mourners, officiating clergymen, Gaiels, with ex-Head-Center James Stephens and the equally noted John O'Leary; other societies, the general public.

Perfect order was observed. The sight from the city hall, while the vast cortege was in motion, was unequalled even by the great outpouring at the time of the O'Connell centenary. The streets along the route of the procession and the intersecting streets for blocks in both directions were masses of human beings, while the windows and housetops were also black with spectators. Most of the houses were draped in mourning, and festoons of orange were swung across the streets at frequent intervals. Hundreds of Irish flags, draped in black, were displayed. Twenty bands scattered through the line of marchers furnished music, the strains of the "Dead March in Saul," the "Adeste Fiedelis" hymns, and Irish marches adding to the solemnity of the occasion.

When the head of the procession arrived opposite St. Catherine's church, the scene of Thomas Addis Emmet's execution, a halt was made for a few moments, all hats being removed. A second halt was made in front of the Bank of Ireland, the old Irish parliament building, where a similar quiet salute was rendered, and a third stop was made at the National club, of which Mr. Parnell was the leading member. All in the procession wore badges of orange and green ribbon. The line, six deep, occupied an hour in passing.

Among the banners displayed along the route many bore words said to have been Parnell's last message of love to his countrymen. The utmost grief was everywhere manifest, expressions being heard on every side indicating that many could hardly believe their great and beloved leader could have so suddenly departed. Nothing could convincingly exhibit the immense popularity of Parnell as this spontaneous demonstration.

Glasnevin, the last resting place of the dead statesman, was reached at 6 o'clock. It was then dark. The Gaiels surrounded the grave, which was lined with green turf, and into which the people, pressing forward as near as permitted, threw evergreen boughs. Inside the line formed by the Gaiels were the mayor, sheriff and corporation of Dublin, with other leading citizens and the chief mourners.

Rev. Vincent and Frye read the burial service by the light of lanterns. The thousands within hearing listened reverently to what was the most of them an alien service, and all joined tearfully in the recitation of the Lord's Prayer. The scene was to most impressive. The Gaiels near the grave sobbed aloud, and their grief was echoed from all around. As soon as the grave was filled up the crowd began to slowly and quietly disperse. There was no speaking and no services except the reading of the burial rite. The Gaiels were left to guard the grave and were soon alone with the dead. Immediately after the funeral the visitors began leaving Dublin, all trains being filled, yet the city is still abnormally crowded.

William O'Brien, John Dillon and Sexton watched the scene from the window of a friend's home on the route of the procession. The curtain was kept closed, so that the three members of parliament only had furtive glimpses at the great demonstration, while they themselves remained entirely hidden from view. The anti-Parnellites even refrained from sending flowers to deck their late leader's coffin.

Tim Healy spent the day at Howth, 7 miles from Dublin. William Murphy and P. Darcy visited the suburbs of Dublin till evening. Special police officers watched the houses of T. D. Sullivan, Tim Healy and John Dillon, but not at their request.

In nearly all the churches of Ireland some allusion was made to the death of Parnell. In some instances the mention was charitable, in other cases it was a reflection of the language of Archbishop Walsh in the Dublin Catholic. Friends of Parnell claim that the bishop had given secret instructions that his memory should be attacked by the clergy with the view of injuring the Parnellite cause as much as possible. In several instances admirers of Parnell left their seats in the churches when they heard anything said of an offensive character. Sunday's funeral and services from all parts of Ireland show that the Parnell cause has been strengthened by his death, and that he has left a party that will go on under another leader.

Advices from Brighton state that Mrs. Parnell's condition is pitiable and grows worse instead of improving. Immediately after Parnell's death she was in better condition than now, for although she fainted she recovered sufficiently to have some communication with friends and through their medium with the outside world. She has been growing worse every day, until now she only moans in reply to questions and is unable to speak. The doctors, who are in constant attendance, greatly fear that her condition may grow more critical, and are doing everything possible to restore her, but apparently without effect. The only intelligible sounds that she has uttered in hours have been plaintive cries for her husband.

URGED TO FIGHT ON. LONDON, Oct. 12.—The National League in Great Britain has issued a manifesto which after a brief review of the great good done for Ireland by the late Mr. Parnell, says: "He is gone. Ireland mourns over his grave to-day. What is the duty of those he left behind? What is the duty of the men who followed him to the last in his struggle for Irish freedom? It has been said that we fought for a man not for a principle. It is not true. We fought for the principle which the man embodied. The man himself was indeed a principle, the principle of self reliance and independence which nothing could sap. To that principle we are staunch. It is now necessary for the members of this organization to select a new president and a new executive committee, and we invite the branches of the National League in Great Britain to take immediate steps to this end. We urge our fellow-countrymen not to despair if victory seems distant. We ask them to take as their motto the last words addressed by Mr. Parnell to the executive committee: 'Hold on, fight on.'"

DUBLIN, Oct. 12.—It is reported here that an informal meeting of the Parnellite members of the house of commons has been held, and that it was decided not to accept any overtures for a coalition with the McCartyites, but to continue the struggle for the leadership of the Irish parliamentary party on the lines laid down by Mr. Parnell in his efforts to regain the position from which he had been deposed by a majority of his former followers.

A stranger passing the depot, who was probably mistaken for an officer, was shot by the burglars and is in a critical condition.

THE BEAUTY STANDARD.

The standard of female loveliness varies greatly in different countries and with individual tastes. Some prefer the plump and buxom type; some admire the slender and sylph like, and some the tall and queenly maiden. But among all people of the Caucasian race, one point of beauty is always admired—a pure, clear and spotless complexion—whether the female be of the blond, brunette, or hazel-eyed type. This first great requisite of loveliness can be secured only by a pure state of the blood active liver, good appetite and digestion all of which are secured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is guaranteed to accomplish all that is claimed for it, or money refunded. If you would have a clear, lovely complexion, free from eruptions, moth patches, spots and blemishes, use the "Golden Medical Discovery."

HOW TO SUCCEED. This is the great problem of life which few satisfactorily solve. Some, fail because of poor health, others want of luck, but the majority from deficient grit—want of nerve. They are nervous irritable, changeable, easily get the blues and "take the spirits down to keep the spirits up," thus wasting money, time, opportunity and nerve force. There is nothing like the Restorative Nervine discovered by the great specialist, Dr. Miles, to cure all nervous diseases, as headache, the blues, nervous prostration, sleeplessness, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, fits, and hysteria. Trial bottles and fine book of testimonials free at Yetter & Look's.

The bridges to the Island Park were removed yesterday for the winter. By the way, wasn't there a committee to solicit funds for improving the island, or something of that sort?

Chicago News: A weird and curious episode in spelling reform residing in Minnesota has led to a scheme of orthographic gibberish which would garble, grizzle, grizzle, grizzle. Hven, O., when will reformers turn that when they put arddi for in English spelling will reform its own akord? Hven, O., when, Josef?

The history of the French cod fisheries on the Newfoundland Banks, with an account of their present condition and importance, will be the subject of a leading article in the next number of Harper's Weekly. The paper is written by Marcel Edant, and will be accompanied by six illustrations, including a double-page picture. The production of the Velled Prophets in St. Louis will also be appropriately illustrated. The action of the number will include the continuation of "The Jonah of Lucky Valley" and a new story by Bayard Rustin, entitled "Brogglins!" On sale at Rickert's.

Manager J. C. Comfort covered himself with glory when he secured the appearance of the Chicago Ideal concert company in the opera house last night. The concert was probably the finest and most refined musical entertainment ever offered to an Alpen audience.

The pianist, Naomi Stevens Slocum, is an artist of rare ability and of extremely delicate touch. Her playing was superb and worth the price of admission alone.

The violin playing of G. H. Slocum brought down the house, and was a revelation of the possibilities of that standard instrument in the hands of a master.

Concertist J. C. Salmon responded to several encores and his rendition of "Killdeer" was magnificent.—Evening Herald.

BELKNAP

THE GALLANT CAPTAIN SECURES THE NOMINATION.

A CLOSE FIGHT AND SHORT FIGHT.

Wm. Alden Smith Withdraws His Name From Consideration.

The Republican Congressional Convention was held in Grand Rapids Monday and Tuesday.

Mr. Alden Smith withdrew his name from consideration. It took but three ballots to settle the matter and Belknap received on the decisive ballot, 47 votes to Diekmann's 44. That the Republican party feels sure of success is manifest by the sharp fight made for the nomination. It not going by default to who ever would make the fight like the democratic nomination last week.

During the caucus of the Keot Co. delegates, both Mr. Belknap and Wm. Alden Smith were before them and an effort was made to send a split vote in favor of some Keot Co. man, but it was impossible. During the conference the following letter from Wm. Alden Smith was read:

HOW MICE ENGAGE IN CATTLE.

They Resemble Human Progress in Their Little Experiences.

Before we had much observed mice, the use of their long tails was a question that puzzled us, says a writer in the Northwest. We do not know of what service they are to the females, but to the bucks they are, we see, of use in their combats for when they fight, they very often face one another standing on their hind legs, the tails then making, as with kangaroos, the third feature of a tripod.

Their appearance, when they thus stand facing each other with their heads thrown back and their paws in front of their faces is, on account perhaps of the resemblance it bears to prize fighters, extremely comic. Small mice, also, when attacked by their big congeners, raise their paws before their faces, the attitude in that case strongly suggesting one of depression.

What occurs when hell-greased buckets actually engage only instantaneous photography could record, so rapid are their movements. Presumably, they try to bite, but mice consider defense the better part of valor, for they never appear to get hurt much, and between the rounds will nibble away at the crust which drops them into the rindage, only showing their excitement by rattling their tails against the ground.

Occasionally a tail seized by the teeth leads to a struggle in which the enemy over the floor till the latter lets go.

Our Fair Was a Hummer.

DISPLAYS IN EVERY DEPARTMENT WERE FINE.

The Races Were a Disappointment.

Our Fair last week was as successful as it had given promise to be, in fact many were surprised and astonished at the fine display made in all the departments.

The classes for stock were all filled and by first class stock. There was much rivalry and premiums were earned on their merits. While not so large as some fairs the stock that captured the prizes here would have stood well up at either the West Mich., Kent Co., or State Fairs.

But when you come to the Fruit, Grain and Vegetable departments you found there a display that opened your eyes. The space allotted to these several exhibits was all occupied and by entries worthy of the name. Our fruit show, for quality, surpassed any exhibited in this section of the state, as is assured by all who have attended our neighboring fairs and what has been said of Fruit and Stock can be said of Grains and Vegetables. The Poultry show was first class, as it is well known that Lowell has a number of first class Poultry cranks, one of whom, at least, has a national reputation.

In the Art Hall the merchantile displays were fine and artistically arranged and attracted a great deal of attention. In the regular entered articles, here displayed, there was a large variety and they were arranged in the most favorable manner for showing their quality. In fact the Fair was a great success all through.

Thursday was the big day, as it always is, there being on the ground over 7000 people, as reported from the Secretary's office. The Balloon ascensions, on Thursday and Friday, were witnessed by eager crowds. The aeronaut, J. B. Hunter, of Jackson, making two as pretty ascensions and jumps as were ever seen. A Balloon ascension is a great card, the river bank across from the grounds and the hills above being covered both days by millions of people.

CHEATING IN HORSE BLANKETS
Nearly every pattern of $\frac{3}{4}$ Horse Blanket is imitated in color and style. In most cases the imitation looks just as good as the genuine, but it hasn't the warp threads, and so lacks strength, and while it sells for only a little less than the genuine it isn't worth one-half as much. The fact that $\frac{3}{4}$ Horse Blankets are copied is strong evidence that they are THE STANDARD, and every buyer should see that the $\frac{3}{4}$ trade mark is sewed on the inside of the Blanket.

Five Mile Boss Electric Extra Test Baker HORSE BLANKETS ARE THE STRONGEST. 100 5/8 STYLES.
