"I am covident that such an approach to the subject will result in prudent and effective remedial! dislation. In the meantime, so far as the executive branch of the government can intervene, none of the powers with which it is investic will be withheld, when their exercise is defined necessary to maintain our national or it or avert financial disaster.

"Close: related to the exaggerated confidence if our country's greatness which tends to a discard of the rules of national safety, another langer confronts us not less serious. I refer to he prevalence of a popular disposition to expect from the operation of the government special and direct individual advantages. The vidict of our voters, which condemned the injustice of maintaining protection for protections a sake, enjons upon the people's servants the duty of exposing and destroying the broad of kindred evils which are the unwholesom progeny of paternalism.

"I is is the bane of republican institutions and as constant peril of our government by the people. It degrades to the purposes of willy craft he plan of rule our fathers established and equevithed to us as an object of our love and veneration. It perverts the particule senting the plan of rule our fathers established and equevithed to us as an object of our love and veneration. It perverts the particule senting the substitutes in its place dependence upon governmental favoritism. It stifles the spirit at very defined and server enno.

It undermines the self-reliance of our people and substitutes in its place dependence upon governmental favoritism. It stifles the spirit of true Americanism and stupelies every ennobiling trait of American citizenship.

"The lessons of paternalism ought to be unlearned and the better lesson taught that, while the people should patriotically and cheerfully support their government, its functions do not include the support of the people.

"The acceptance of this principle leads to a refus d of bounties and subsidies, which burden the later and their formal particular of the principle leads to a challenge of wild and reckless pension expenditure, which overleaps the bounds of grateful recognition of patriotic service, and prostitutes to victus uses the people's prompt and generous myulse to aid those disabled in their country's defense.

"Ev. y thoughtful American must realize the importance of checking at its beginning any tendent in public or private station to regard frugality and economy as virtues with the we may safely catgrow. The toleration of his idea results in the waste of the people's honey by their closen servants and encourages prodigatity and extravagance in the home life of our country sen. Under our scheme of covernment the was tof public money is a crime against the citizen; and the contempt of our people for econom and frugality in their personal affairs deplorally saps the strength and sturdness of our national character.

"It is hain dictate of honesty and good government that public expenditures should be imitted in public necessity, and that this should be measured by the rules of strict economy; and it is equally clear that frugality among the people is the best guaranty of a contented and strong support of free institutions.

"One mode of the misappropriation of public funds is a olded when appointments to office, instead of being the rewards of partisan activity, are awarded to those whose efficiency promises a fair return of work for the compensation paid to them. To secure the fluess and compentency of appointees to office, and to remove from political sentiment and the purification of kindred enterprises and combinations of business interests formed for the purpose of limiting production and fixing prices is inconsistent with the fair field which ought to be open to every independent activity. Legitimate strife in business should not be superseded by an enforced concession to the demands of combinations that have the power to destroy; nor should the people to be served lose the benefit of

on the 18th of March, 1867. His educational opportunities were at that time limited, and when fourteen years old he removed with his parents to Fayetteville, N. Y., where he began his career as a clerk in a store. Then came an opportunity for Grover to attend a local academy, and it was here he received training that later in life led him to adopt the legal profession. Drifting westward, he became a student in a law office at Buffalo, N. Y., and in May, 1859, he was admitted to the bar. His industry and evident ability led to his appointment as assistant district attorney when only twenty-five years of age. Then followed in sequence of the official terms of office his elec-

In 1859 he located in Metamora, Woodford county, Ill., and engaged in the practice of his profession, remaining there fourteen years. In 1861 he was named as the presidential elector for the district. In 1869 he returned to Bloomington, forming a law partnership with J. S. Ewery, which still exists. He was elected to congress by the democrats of the Bloomington district in 1874, although the district has always been strongly republican. In 1876 his party again nominated him for congress, but he was defeated. He was nominated a third time in 1878 and was elected. He was a delegate to the national convention of

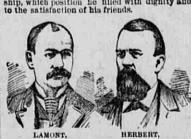

Vice President. 1884 and was appointed first assistant post-master general by President Cleveland. At the close of Cleveland's administration he returned to Bloomington. In 1877 President Hayes ap-pointed Mr. Stevenson a member of the board to inspect the militaryacademy at West Point. The Illinois state convention elected him one of the delegates at large to the national conven-tion. He was serving in that capacity when nominated for the vice presidency. At twenty-one he was admitted to the bar, and when he was twenty-four years old he was elected a member of the lower house of the Kentucky lexislature. He served there four terms. In 1894 he declined to be a presidential elector on the democratic ticket and in 1895 was elected state senator. Carlisle rose rapidly. He was reelected to the senate. He was a degreate at large to the national democratic convention which met in New York in 1898 and nominated Seymour for president. He was lieutenant governor of Kentucky from 1871 to 1875 and was one of the alternate Tilden electors at large from Kentucky in 1876. In the Forty-eighth congress he was elected to the speaker-ship, which position he filled with dignity and to the satisfaction of his friends.

Secretary of War. Secretary of the Navy. Col. Lamont was born in the little town of Crtiandville, Cortland county, N. Y. His father kepta country store and he began life as a clerk in that establishment. He attended the village school and graduated from Union college in 1872. When twenty-one years old he ran for the clerkship of Cortland county, and came within a few votes of being elected. He ran for the assembly the next year and again was only beaten a few votes. Mr. Tilden had him appointed to his blace of deputy clerk and later he became chief clerk of the state department unner John Bigelow. From 1875, when he was chairman of the state committee, until Mr. Cleveland went to Washington as president, Col. Lamont was an active figure in state politics. Cleveland, when he was elected governor, sent for Lamont and spent some time with him in consultation about his inaugural address. He made the young politician his military secretary, and from that time he became "Col." Lamont. Col. Lamont was born in the little town of

HIS FUTURE.

President Harrison Will Resume His Law

Harrison has answered the question what an ex-president will do. He is going back to the practice of his profession, and incidental notified Senator Stanford of his acceptance of the offer, which was made to him several weeks ago. Gen. Har. A. J. BOWNE, rison's first lecture will be delivered some time next month. The full course course has not been mapped out, but in time it will undoubtedly be broadened so as to cover the field of international law. Gen. Harrison recently told a friend that he would be glad when the time came to review the course of his administration, in foreign affairs generally, as he had become specially interested in international law as well as constitutional law. Accounts differ as to the compensation Gen. Harrison will receive. It was stated that the amount would not be much under $15,000 per year.

STYLE IN READING.

Style means several things and they all apply to reading. Style means fashion: there are fashions in reading. Style means man ers; there are manners in reading. Good manners and bad manners i print may be as impudent as anywhere. Intelligent people prefer readin that approaches them like a gentleman-sensible, earnest, and to the point. A bargain is a magnet; uncover it and needles will head your way. We offer that bargain when we say to our patrons, send us $3 40 and it will pay for a year's subscription to both this paper and the Cosmopolitan Magazine. The offer is a genuine bargain and those of our friend who are not now taking a first-class Magazine into their homes should see tofit that they do not mis this opportunity.

ALL THE YEAR ROUND

The greatest success hitherto attained in the Magazine field must corded to 7the Cosmopolitan, jumping as it has from 16,000 copies it 889 to an edition of 150,000 copies for January, 1893 That there is caus or this success goes without saving. No other publication, of any de ription, before the public makes the effort to give its readers the best of verything, and succeeds in doing it as does this monthly. Its illustra ions lead the world; its literary merit is certainly of the highest order hat money can buy or brains produce. Each month, from year's end t ear's end, can be found inside its covers something to instruct and please very member of the household. In fact a year's careful reading of the osmopolitan means a progressive step in the education of any man of oman in the land.

A WONDERFUL NEW INVENTION.

The Phonophore Will Carry Messages Many Different Ways. To be told that a telegraph wire which is busily transmitting a long message can at the same time be made to convey half a dozen other messages in opposite directions sounds like a fairy tale, but that the thing has been done and is daily being done is attested upon the most respectable scientific authority. The discovery which renders these astonishing results possible is due to C. Langdon-Davies, who has for some years been engaged in rendering it practically workable and in adapting it alike to telephonic and telegraphic use. It is difficult to convey to the lay mind, says the Chicago Dispatch, an accurate comprehension of a process so exceedingly technical, but it may be briefly said that Mr. Langdon-Davies in the "phonophore" utilizes, not the electric current, but the noise caused by the induction. The signals are transmitted by a series of inducted electric impulses, and the success of the system is found in the ability of the inductive force to pass through insulations which electric currents cannot penetrate. A wire may be blown down and in contact with the earth, yet so long as it is not broken it will carry a phonophoric message. By means of the phonophore messages can be transmitted with extraordinary rapidity, and there is practically no limit to the number of messages that can be sent simultaneously upon the same wire. And, as we have hinted, Mr. Langdon-Davies' system is as useful telephonically as it is telegraphically. A wire which is conveying electric signals can at the same time be used for telephonic conversation without either the message or the conversation suffering in the least. For some considerable time past experiments in both directions have been proceeding with most gratifying results, which are vouched for by such high authorities as Prof. Sylvanus Thompson, Conrad Cooke and Latimer Clark. Three of the principal railway companies have already adopted the phonophore; and it must be obvious, even to the unscientific mind, that phonophoric telegaaphy and telephony, which is so vastly increasing the elec-trician's power over the wires, has before it a very great feature. The phonophore, indeed, increases almost to infinity the number of words that can be transmitted in a given time. It is obvious, therefore, that it opens great possibilities in the way of cheapening the cost of telegrams. So long as the number of words that could be carried by a wire in an hour was rigidly limited it was hopeless to look for any substantial reduction in the cost of telegraphing, but the phonophore at once increases the capacity and speed of every wire to which it may be fitted.

HE WAS WELL RECEIVED. Therefore Gen. Butler Did Not Deliver the Speech He Had Prepared.

A good many people, says the Boston

Ames and Gen. Butler when they had their famous ride to Cambridge after the refusal of the university overseers to grant the governor an LL. D. But for any case of deafness (caused by here is a new story in connection with tarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's the dinner-ex-Gov. Ames' own explanation of what was rather mystifying to a good many people at the time: The real explanation of Gen. Butler's moderation in his speech at Harvnever been told in print, I think. I rode over to Cambridge with the governor in a landau, and on the way over I hinted that discretion would be called for. Butler was rather reticent and moody, but he replied: 'I am well prepared.' I rather expected an outbreak. But when we arrived and the governor was received with even more expres sions of regard than usual by graduates and undergraduates alike, he be gan to be more genial and approachable, as he was in his role of a private and dought r, Mrs Dr. Spencer and sons, sitizen. At length the dinner was served, and George Choate, the presiding officer of the day, paid a most generous and eloquent tribute to the governor in his introductory speech. "Butler turned to me and said quickly, just before he arose to speak: 'I have thrown my speech to the winds.' "Then followed his model oration without a fling, without a hit-a scholarly, eloquent address. It was not till at Williamstown the next week that I learned what he meant when he said:

'I have thrown my speech to the winds.' "He meant that he had prepared an address which he believed he would be justified in delivering, an address that its scope took in all the sins of that institution and its management, from the time of the defalcation of one of its treasurers down through succeeding generations. But the hospitable treatment he received disarmed him. He had expected hisses, he received cheers; he had been prepared for a snub, and he was complimented. "With his quick perception he understood his position exactly and kept back the proposed speech, substituting for it the impromptu, and one of the most brilliant im promptus ever delivered."

The Woman Speculator A man standing in front of the news stand of an uptown elevated railroad station in New York the other day found himself rudely pushed aside without apology, and, looking around with a scowl, found himself suddenly disarmed, for the offender was a woman. She was a small blonde person, clad in fashionably cut plain skirt, neat sealskin coat and jaunty hat, ornamented with a sage-green ostrich plume. She was daintily gloved, and she carried a natty silk umbrella. Her rudeness was explained by her haste to get at the news stand. She already carried under her arm several of the morning papers. She bought the daily Wall street publications, coolly pushed her way through the crowded aisle of the car to rode down town with a host of fellowspeculators, her eyes fixed upon the market column. Fine salted fish at McMillan's.

Vergennes Prohibition Caucus. The Prohibitionists of the township of Vergennes will meet in caucus at the Waters school house, Saturday, March 18th, at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of placing in nomination a township ticket and to transact such other bustness as may properly come before them.

The Vergennes Reading Circle. It should be distinctly understood that the party or parties making an apology and extending an invitation, in behalf of the Vergennes Reading circle, had no authority, as no committee was appointed, or any action whatever, taken upon the question and, also, that wherever the circle is held members should use discretion in their invitations and when a member has been told by the host or lostess not to bring a load, as there could be no accommodations for such, it should be our duty to respect the rights and priveleges allowed DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they caunot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Desiness is caused by the inflamed coudition of the mucous haing of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets infirmed you have a rumbing sound or imperfect hearing, when it closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its bormal tion, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by ca-torth, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
