

THEIR TALK ENDED.

The Horr-Harvey Currency Debate Comes to a Close.

It Presents an Array of 145,000 Words—Each Disputant Has Yet 2,500 Words at His Disposal—These Will Be Printed in Their Book.

[Copyright, 1895, by Axel F. Hatch.]

CHICAGO, July 29.—The seventh session of the Horr-Harvey debate opened yesterday. The production of the precious metals was the foremost subject. The ratio of production for the last century was shown by years. When the disputants came to paste years cause and results were discussed. Branching off from the money question, the money champions discussed at length the production of wheat, corn and other farm products and talked about the laws of prices.

Once early in the debate Mr. Horr demanded proof that money was coined outside of Washington previous to 1874. When Mr. Harvey furnished the proof in the United States treasury reports Mr. Horr maintained his point in the face of the reports.

Side questions were frequently raised, and witty replies were in the air oftener than in the previous debates, and applause was frequent and prolonged.

Both the debaters, and the audience as well, were pleased when Judge Vincent announced at adjournment that the debate would be resumed on Saturday at 1 o'clock.

Debate Proper Closed.

CHICAGO, July 29.—There was an attendance of between seventy-five and 100 listeners Saturday when Mr. Horr inaugurated the next to the last session of the great silver debate. Mr. Horr opened by quoting a report of the finance committee of the United States senate for the purpose of showing that gold had not appreciated since 1873 and challenged his opponent's sincerity in basing his arguments in this matter upon Sauerbeck's tables, which are compiled by an Englishman and based upon English values. In his reply to these charges Mr. Harvey scored one of the hardest hits that has yet been placed to his credit. He produced an article written by Mr. Horr in answer to a correspondent which had appeared in the weekly and monthly editions of the New York Tribune in which Mr. Horr scoffed at the idea which he has advanced in the present debate that human labor forced a trustworthiness standard of value. Mr. Horr's reply to the correspondent, as quoted by Mr. Harvey, concluded with the words: "Your system seems so absurd that I can hardly treat it soberly."

In reply to the charge that he had unfairly based his arguments upon a foreign table, Mr. Harvey produced a comparative statement that his argument would have been even more forcibly emphasized by the Aldrich report to the United States senate, and further stated that his selection of Sauerbeck's figures was based upon his belief and the generally accepted opinion that they were more authoritative.

Mr. Horr accused his opponent of being tricky in quoting one sentence from the article which he had written for the New York Tribune, and assumed that it showed the gist of the whole article. What he said in reference to the man's theories being ridiculous did not relate to his measure of value at all. It was his attempt to substitute a paper dollar based on nothing with which to do the business of the country.

Saturday's Arguments.

Saturday's debate was full of blythe, and there was a little wit and sharp retort that kept the audience in excellent humor. In a nutshell the arguments of Saturday were along these lines:

Claimed by Mr. Harvey—That panics are due to our system of bank credits; that supply and demand, not cost of production, fix prices; that the relative value of the dollar now is greater than in 1865; that there is a constant increase in debtors, in tenants, in homicides, insanity, suicide and crime; that, in short, the logical outcome of the tendency of present events must be the substitution of a monarchy for the present republic.

Claimed by Mr. Horr—That the volume of currency in circulation is not closely related to the volume of business; that there is no such thing as an unlimited demand for anything in the world, not even of money; that there are other uses for money than as a medium of paying debts; that the panic of 1893 was caused by a fear that this country might return to a silver basis; that the business of the country does not depend upon the per capita of the circulating medium; that the debt of the country is decreasing; that eleven items in Mr. Harvey's table of debts are millions of dollars wrong in the aggregate and wholly misleading.

Closed the Debate.

CHICAGO, July 30.—The Horr-Harvey silver debate came to an end Monday. Every seat in the art gallery of the Illinois club was occupied when time was called for the closing session of the great war of words, and the walls were lined with listeners eager to catch the closing remarks of the contestants.

Twenty-four hours in all have been consumed in the debate which ran through eight days, and 145,000 words in all were spoken, according to the original agreement. The two disputants still have 2,500 words each in which to close. This is to be submitted, however, in manuscript any time within seven days to be inserted in the book which is to be published.

Resolutions were passed thanking the Illinois club for the use of their house and expressing appreciation of all that had been done by various ladies and gentlemen to assist in the carrying on of the debate. A resolution was also passed thanking Messrs. Horr and Harvey for the mass of information with which they have presented the public since the debate began. Then the closing arguments were commenced.

Questions Harvey's Figures.

Mr. Horr led with the sweeping assertion that in the few cases in which the figures cited by Mr. Harvey were correct they had tended to weaken his own argument. He then referred to Mr. Harvey's statement, which the latter had said was based upon the authority of Carroll D. Wright, United States commissioner of labor, to the effect that there were between 2,000,000 and 4,000,000 unemployed men in the country. In refutation of these figures, he produced a telegram from Mr. Wright expressly disclaiming them.

The effect of this was spoiled, however, by Mr. Harvey's explanation that these were the only figures that he had used in his book that had not been verified, and that immediately after the appearance of the first edition he had written to Mr. Wright and upon receipt of his reply had erased the incorrect data from the stereotype plates of the book. After this temporary digression, the silver champion expressed his obligations to every one who had assisted him in the debate, from the judge and referee to his fair stenographer, and then resumed the thread of his argument by producing a printed table showing the amount of silver coined annually from 1792 to 1874, for the purpose of demonstrating the fallacy of the statement made by the monetarists that for the first fifty years of the present century the United States was on a silver basis, and on a gold basis from 1874 to 1878.

The statement, he said, that gold did not seek the mints for the first fifty years, and that silver did not seek the mints for the last thirty years prior to 1873, is not true. He quoted from the United States coinage laws, appendix of 1894. The stock of gold is there given as $3,901,000,000; the stock of silver, $2,981,000,000. On account of the great use of gold in the arts he maintained that there was not enough of the yellow metal to answer the needs of money.

Nations Can't Fix Values.

Mr. Horr maintained his previous statements that no nation alone can establish the old ratio of 16 to 1, and he did not believe that Mr. Harvey thinks any one nation can do it. Nations by their laws do not fix the value of things. They cannot do it if they try. The actual value of the two metals at the present time is wide apart. The ratio of 16 to 1 is today a thing of the past. Mr. Horr closed the debate with an eloquent peroration on the revival of business; of the appeal of Cuba against oppression; of the distressing situation of the South American republics, and said: "We are fighting the battle of liberty for the world. The result of your verdict upon this momentous question will be world wide. It will convey words of cheer and stimulate the nerves of free men in every land."

Settlers at Jackson's Hole Not Molested by Indians.

Much Alarm Exists, However, in the Settlements Throughout That Section—Progress of Troops En Route for Their Protection.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Further denial of the reports of a massacre at Jackson's Hole, Idaho, reached the interior department Monday in a dispatch from Indian Agent Teter. The dispatch was dated Rexburg, Idaho, near Market Lake, July 28, and says: "On the 27th last I met Sheriff Hawley near Rexburg, returning from Jackson's Hole, where he had been sent to ascertain if the settlers had been killed by the Indians. Hawley states that the settlers have not been molested by the Indians, who are supposed to be encamped about 40 miles from the settlement in a practically impregnable position. There is no doubt of the fact that a large body of Lemhi Indians have recently joined the other Indians in Hobbs's canyon."

Not Signal Fires.

MARKET LAKE, Idaho (by courier from Sargeant's Lodge), July 30.—We have discovered that the fires thought to be signal fires are in reality only forest fires, which the rains have now extinguished. The settlers are very greatly excited and many have deserted their homes, fearing an outbreak.

All Is Quiet.

The first man actually known to have come through Jackson's Hole is J. S. Barry. He said that the Indians were not visible, and that nobody has been harmed since the first shooting on the day of the Indian break for liberty, and that only Indians, of course, were hurt then. The settlers are, however, still intrenched, and the Indians in the hills and canyons are behaving in such a way as to imply that they are ready to respond to every act. They did not shoot at him, and he saw none on his way through this most dangerous part of the journey. He said, however, that the man who wanted an Indian fight could get it.

Movements of Troops.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, July 30.—It is reported that a few Indians are returning to the Bannock reservation from Jackson's Hole, but much greater numbers are pouring in than those leaving. Tourist parties have stopped at Teton Basin, because it is unsafe to enter the Jackson's Hole country. At 2 o'clock Monday afternoon the special train bringing transportation facilities for the infantry on their march across the country arrived at Market Lake. Two hundred and fifty men of the Seventeenth infantry left Market Lake for Jackson's Hole Monday night, but owing to the roughness of the road it will take them longer than was expected to complete the march of over a hundred miles.

Settlers Alarmed.

The Indians are watching all passes going in from the St. Anthony side. At least 200 Indians claiming to be Lemhis have crossed the river 7 miles above St. Anthony within the last week. No squaws were with the last parties, but they are taking many horses with them. Settlements are becoming alarmed and are making preparations to organize companies. A number of men are going in, via Teton Basin, to assist the whites, who are making rifle pits at different points.

MISTAKE OF A MOB.

They Lynch a Man Whose Innocence Is Now Proven.

FORD, Ky., July 27.—It developed Friday that the negro, Bob Haggard, who was lynched here last week, charged with having outraged Miss Elkin, was innocent of the crime with which he was charged. The story told of how the deed was done has been proven to be utterly false. The work was done by a few hot-headed men who did not take time to inquire whether Haggard was guilty or not.

VICTIMS OF A VILLAIN.

List of Ten Persons Thought to Have Been Slain by Holmes.

CHICAGO, July 27.—Every day brings to light one or more atrocious murders committed by H. H. Holmes. In all, so far as known, circumstantial evidence of the strongest character points to the man as the slayer of the following:

Conner, Julia L., who lived with Holmes as his wife; supposed remains found in basement of Holmes' building, 791 Sixty-third street, Chicago.

Conner, Gertrude, daughter of above; supposed remains found in basement of Holmes' building, 791 Sixty-third street, Chicago.

Cigrand, Amelia, Holmes' secretary; disappeared.

Pitzel, Benjamin F.; dead body found at 1315 Callowhill street, Philadelphia.

Pitzel, Howard, year old, son of Benjamin F. Pitzel; disappeared; supposed to have been murdered in Indianapolis.

Pitzel, Alice, daughter of Benjamin F. Pitzel; dead body found in the cellar of St. Vincent street house, Toronto.

Pitzel, Nellie, daughter of Benjamin F. Pitzel; dead body found in the cellar of St. Vincent street house, Toronto.

Williams, Minnie, disappeared from 791 Sixty-third street, Chicago, where she lived with Holmes; supposed to have been murdered.

Williams, Annie, younger sister of above; disappeared as did her sister.

Wild, Miss, formerly a clerk in Holmes' employ at the "Castle"; she disappeared two years ago and has never been heard from.

In addition to this Holmes is believed to have been concerned in the murder of Mrs. Cron, the old woman who was so ruthlessly killed at Wilmette two years ago.

Other persons known to have been identified with Holmes at Englewood and other places have disappeared, but as yet little evidence has been found to show that Holmes had a hand in their sudden retirement from usual scenes. The searchlight of police investigation is gradually but slowly disclosing the worst features of Holmes' career in Chicago. Chief Badenoch said unreservedly Friday that he believed that the house in Sixty-third street had been built to make murder feasible and that many of Holmes' victims perished within its walls.

NO SKIRT DANCE.

Church Women Spell an Entertainment at St. Joseph.

St. JOSEPH, July 27.—"Kirtness" was presented here Friday night by 100 young ladies for the benefit of the Congregational church.

The ladies were accompanied by Mrs. Barnes, a professional dancer of New York, who is visiting here, first to dance for them.

Her first recital was so successful that she was recalled three times.

Miss Barnes was on the programme for a skirt dance, but when the time came the church ladies would not allow it to go on.

In carrying out the resolution they took the instruments away from the orchestra and stopped the music.

The entertainment was stopped.

All the GREAT Scotch Medicines FOR SALE BY W. S. Winegar D. G. Look W. M. Clark Hunter & Son

LOWELL JOURNAL, LOWELL, MICH.
Wednesday, July 31, 1895.

Farmer's!
We have put a new department in the Journal wholly in the interest of the farmers. It is headed "Farmers Wants" and as it is intended solely for farmers, to let their brother farmers know what they have for sale, want to buy, or have to exchange for something else, we have made a special rate for these ads. Consult it this week for bargains and for terms of advertisements and if you have anything to sell, or exchange, or want to buy anything from pickets, cornstalks or straw, to a farm, try this column. We think that being classified and set apart so it will be easily found and the convenience of this column as a means of exchange, will be appreciated.

FOR Style Wear AND Perfect Fit Try the Shoes Sold by Anderson & Findlay THE REASON WHY Everyone is so well pleased with the Alaska Refrigerator is because they will Keep Provisions Longer and Use Less Ice than Any Other

The ice rests on a corrugated galvanized iron rack, which is so constructed as to leave an air passage under the iron. The warm, damp air in the provision chamber rises through the flues at each end of the ice chamber, comes in contact with the ice at the central opening in the lid flue, becomes colder and drops under the ice rack—where all the moisture is condensed—and falls through the central opening under the ice into the provision chamber, COLD and DRY. No other system keeps the air so long in contact with the ice as does the ALASKA, consequently the ALASKA does the work more thoroughly than any other refrigerator.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED
by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound and your hearing is impaired. Deafness is often the result of colds, and is cured by the use of our medicine. It is a simple, safe, and effective remedy. It is sold by all druggists.

BASE BALL!
The Lowell Club Wins at Ionia.

Last Wednesday the Lowell B. B. Club went to Ionia and broke Ionia's broken record of victories. The game was played from start to finish, our boys putting up the best game ever seen in Ionia. The game was full of brilliant plays, notably the difficult catches of Kitchin and McQueen after long runs. The boys went after everything and got it too. Blume made two home runs, besides only allowing seven hits and one base on balls and struck out six of Ionia's hard hitters. In fact the team had its batting clothes on, hit the ball every time it was pitched. The score tells the story:
Lowell, 19 runs, 23 hits, 3 errors
Ionia, 4 " 7 " 9 "

Prue's Management.
BY MALBORO RICHARDSON.
"Oh, no trouble at all. Glad to be able to direct you. The shortest way to South Danville is straight up the turnpike till you get to a house with a porch and a sign that says 'Prue's' and then turn to the right."
A fresh-faced young woman, who was standing near the corner of the village store, reddened slightly as she heard her new home thus designated, and when the groom turned to her and said, smilingly: "Now, make up your mind to go with me, Prue," she straightened herself with a little touch of dignity.
"I am Miss James Rice," she began. "I do not know you."
"With great interest," "You don't say, I will, I don't blame him one bit," she added, gallantly.
A smile stole across the bride's pretty face, and her severe expression relaxed a little.
"Jim, he told me he did all his trading here, so I thought I'd just step down this morning and order a few things. I want two pounds of brown sugar and a bag of four of best right away."
"Bridal Veil, of course," laughed Mr. Barnes, with a confidential wink, and he hurried away to the back of the store to give the order.
"Two pounds of brown sugar and a bag of four of best right off—Jim Rice on the turnpike road, Peter."
"The red house with the white paint all over it?"
"That's the one," said Mr. Barnes, returning to the door to bow out on his new customer.
Mrs. James Rice walked thoughtfully down the village street with her black bonnet knitted in a little frown. It was the second time in this village, where she was well known and highly respected, that she had heard Jim's home referred to in that disrespectful manner. The day before, when she and her husband returned from their two-week honeymoon and had driven up to the large dingy-looking house, it had occurred to the bride that her new abode was not so good as it seemed. But she would not allow this thought to be put into words. It seemed almost disloyal to Jim to not mention his home, and she was unsatisfied with anything in her new home.
But now she felt justified in calling his attention to this oversight. "Why, on all these things," she exclaimed indignantly, "I have seen the polished surface. You could have knocked me down with a feather when I heard that James Rice had actually been in the village for some time. I can't get it out of my head. How I do wish Lucy could see it!"
"Want to hear it?" Prue suggested, with a proud little smile.
"I'd like to, first-rate, but I can't stop now. I just run in for a minute on my way to Mr. Deacon Gibbs' and see how his best loaf was for years. I'd no idea it was so late."
"Tain't," said Prue, glancing up at the tall timepiece. "It's only half-past ten."
"Oh, but you ain't allowin' for the clock's loss in time, Prue. Don't you know it's allus as much as an hour long when it's been that way for years, ever since it was moved here out of Grand Shedd's house."
"It's been fixed," said Jim's wife dryly.
"Of all things! How'd he ever come to do it?" Lucy interrupted, "because he didn't like his meals half an hour behindhand every day."
"Why, but Lucy ain't figured for the clock's loss in time, Prue. Don't you know it's allus as much as an hour long when it's been that way for years, ever since it was moved here out of Grand Shedd's house."
