

AT GRANT'S SHRINE.

The Birthday of the War Hero Is Appropriately Observed.

Synopsis of the Eloquent Address Delivered by Gen. John C. Black—Notable Observances in Several Other Cities.

Galesburg, Ill., April 28.—Business was generally suspended here Monday and the city was in holiday garb, the occasion being the observance of the anniversary of the birth of Gen. Grant.

GEN. ULYSSES S. GRANT.

C. Black, now United States attorney for the Northern district of Illinois, delivered an oration.

Gen. John C. Black spoke in part as follows:

Gen. Black's Oration. "He who stands at Fort Sumter sees, not the lowlands and tumbling sea, but there arise before him Washington and Lafayette and the United Armies of France and America; at Bunker Hill stands Warren's slender form; at Valley Forge the worn and starving continentals; at Vicksburg Grant and Logan, McPherson and Sheridan, McClellan and Blair, and the invincible bestsellers; at Gettysburg, Hancock and Meade and Doubleday and Sickles; ever against them Lee and Longstreet and Pickett and 150,000 struggling men; at Appomattox, Grant and a vast host and a gallant quarry! Such men never die.

"They will not die from among us; they having our hatred, nations point to their glorified battle plains and to high scaffolds, where they paid the last obligations to right; they sentinel the long and glowing highways of fame; they cluster around heroic epochs, made noble by their speech or written words of unselfish deed; they are the better angels of our national life, and prompt to highest purpose and noblest devotion, to love the country and her cause.

"Grant could not have conquered, nor any that I have named of any of our heroic dead have risen to glory, had our armies been of different material; but now, officer and man, they are blended one and imperishable.

"Beginning with Bonapoleon, to the closing campaign in Virginia, Grant trod the ascending round of success and glory, until at last he stood the embodiment of the purpose of the people in the camp, as Lincoln was in the cabinet, holding the sword of the whole union power, lifting it above the prostrate purposes and broken fortunes of a defeated people, whose every hope was gone, and forever! Ruin in their midst; ashes on their hearthstones; their social systems uprooted; their warriors dead; their sons reduced to daily toil.

"They drank the bitter cup they had brewed, and the world wondered what would be the fate of the fallen. All history contains no nobler answer than fell from the lips of the victorious general: 'Go in peace—keep your honor, observe the laws of the land, till the soil, build up anew your broken fortunes and be dutiful American citizens.'

"The surrender at Appomattox was made to an eagle—a victor, to a victor, not to a prowling beast of carnage; to an American citizen, and not to a vulgar conqueror. Valor and devotion gave up the contest to sublime purpose and inflexible will; the lost cause surrendered to destiny and the manifest purposes of Almighty God. Lee, the incarnation of the highest purposes of his people, yielded to Grant, the silent, inflexible, unalterable will of the American republic.

"Honors Fall Upon Him. "A grateful country, loving comrades, admiring citizens, twice elevated him to the chief magistracy. With the traditions and forces of a great war, from which his fame had sprung all around him, what was to be the influence he should exert upon his fellow citizens and the institutions of the land? What would this soldier, bursting from camps upon the attention of the world, do with the enormous power intrusted to his hands? What he did do furnishes the best answer to the question.

"Character such as that of Grant was slow in growth; not attracting public attention, known only to the most intimate of his companions, and not fully comprehended by them; it was accretion to a rock, when the hour came for its display it was found ringed and banded by all the surroundings of his life.

Grant the Grand. "How true he was to friends all know. His word was pledged at Appomattox to the southern soldier, and at a later day, when it was proposed to ignore the terms he had made, he stood like a lion for those who had offered their word—and saved them. What he did for those whose purposes were opposed by constitutional authority he bowed his crest and led the island of San Domingo to. He upheld the traditions of his country and announced, as the illustrious before and since him have done, that on American soil there was room only for American institutions.

"And now we have assembled about his statue three-quarters of a century after his birth, and while the recollections of him still abide with many living witnesses, to renew our regard and tell our affection for him whose ashes are treasured by our distant countrymen in historic urn at the gateway from the sea to the land he helped to keep—let them guard his ashes! Here is the threshold over which he stepped to and this the state that upheld him throughout every moment of his prosperity and greatness! The thronging thousands who shall lift careful eyes to the monument at Riverside shall see beside it a figure pointing over mountain and plain and saying: 'He who sleeps here was a son of Illinois, and from her mighty nurturing arms rose to continental stature and boundless fame.'

Tribute from a Former Foe. Boston, April 28.—Gen. Longstreet, of Georgia, Grant's great antagonist, is the guest of the Middlesex club, and on Monday night was the principal speaker at its annual Grant banquet.

Gen. Longstreet, upon rising to respond to the toast, was received with long-continued cheers, the audience standing and rapturously greeting him, and even during the first few sentences it was impossible for the general to be heard consecutively, owing to the interruption of applause. He said, among other things:

"Of all of the union commanders he was the great leader who accurately surveyed the great field of war, the elements of strength, and points of error, and considered the vast means so necessary to solve the problem.

"He stood alone as the man for the time. When it was ended the war with him was over. His heavy blows were changed to pleasant salutations. Incapable of malice, his generous heart offered all that his enemy could ask as terms for surrender, with abundance of provisions for the hungry soldiers and transportation to their distant homes.

"If he could have been in Chicago in May of last year and witnessed the unveiling of a monument over the dead confederate prisoners of war and could have been with us at the dedication of the national park at Chickamauga in September last, to witness the assembling of Gov. Morton, Gov. McKinley, Gen. Alger, Gen. Groveson, Gen. Bates, Gen. Gordon, and multitudes of those of the blue and the gray in cordial fraternal greetings, he could have known that his prophetic peace was not a tentative hope, but a happy fruition, mirrored in the expressions of all his countrymen."

Observance Elsewhere. New York, April 28.—Under the auspices of the Grant monument commission appropriate exercises were held Monday at the great mausoleum in Riverside park. It had been hoped that the tomb would be in readiness for its final dedication, but this has been found impossible, and the event will not take place until late in the year.

Providence, R. I., April 28.—Appropriate exercises in celebration of Grant's birthday were held Monday under the auspices of the Union League club. At an expenditure of nearly $28,000 this organization has provided a heroic-sized bronze statue of the ex-president, which is to occupy the center of the plateau in front of the clubhouse.

Philadelphia, April 28.—Gen. Grant's memory was honored with speech, story and good fellowship at the Union League Monday night. Many prominent men in military, naval, official and civil life were present. Col. Fred Grant was the guest of honor. Those responding to toasts were Gen. Bragg, Mayor Warwick, Hon. Robert S. Cousins, of Iowa; Hon. J. L. Dailzell, of Pennsylvania; Hon. Andrew D. White, of New York; Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patton, of Princeton; Gen. C. H. Groveson, of Ohio; Hon. Charles A. Boutelle, of Maine; and Senator M. C. Butler, of South Carolina.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 28.—The tenth annual dinner of the American club in honor of the birthday of Gen. U. S. Grant was given Monday evening. The festive and brilliant repast drew a representative assemblage of republicans to the Monongahela house, where the festivities were held. The guests of honor included members of congress, state officials, judges of the courts and local political lights. The principal speakers of the evening were: Congressman J. P. Dilliver, of Iowa, who talked of "Grant;" Senator C. E. Davis, of Minnesota, spoke of "Progressive Republicanism," his address arousing much enthusiasm. Congressman L. F. Quigg, of New York, talked of "The Party of Grant."

For Another Grant Statue. Washington, April 28.—A favorable report was made to the senate on Senator Squire's bill appropriating $300,000 for an equestrian statue of Gen. Grant in this city. Much interest has been aroused in this matter, and members of congress are being urged by G. A. R. men and members of the Loyal Legion to put this bill through at this session of congress.

Death of George Munro. New York, April 28.—George Munro, aged 71, originator of the problem of cheap and good literature, died suddenly of heart failure at Pine Hill, in the Catskills, whither he had gone to superintend repairs on his country home. Mr. Munro was an ardent, thoughtful-minded Presbyterian, and his donations to church objects were large and continuous. Mr. Munro leaves a widow and four children, two sons and two daughters.

Nine Sailors Drowned. Charleston, S. C., April 28.—The schooner Norman, Capt. Gray, from Providence, R. I., which arrived here reports having picked up at sea April 15 seven men in a dory belonging to the fishing schooner J. W. Campbell, of Gloucester, Mass., which went down in a squall on Friday, April 7, at sea, 60 miles south-southwest of Montauk. The Campbell carried a crew of 16 men, of which nine are reported lost.

Killed by a Pencil Point. Louisville, Ky., April 28.—Sam Brumley, aged 19, of 2811 Montgomery street, shot and fatally wounded his half-sister, Iva Clark, aged 15, at tea o'clock Monday morning, because he was jealous of favoritism shown her. He then shot himself in the head, but only inflicted a scalp wound.

Rev. Dias Released. Havana, April 28.—Rev. Albert Dias, of the American Baptist missionary, and his brother Alfred, who were arrested last week, have been set at liberty, but have been ordered to leave the country before the expiration of six days from the time of their release.

Many Horses Burned. Columbus, O., April 27.—A Press special from Galloway, O., says that a shipping stable belonging to Ed. Courtwright at that place burned, and 43 horses, some of them quite valuable, were burned to death. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Roanoke, Va., April 25.—A cyclone, accompanied by hail and a very heavy rainfall, struck the city of Salem, seven miles west of here, Friday afternoon and besides blowing down several barns unroofing outhouses and uprooting trees, demolished two houses, in one of which were 11 colored people. EX-GOV. JEROME DEAD.

Former Michigan Executive Passes Away in New York State.

Saginaw, April 25.—Ex-Gov. David H. Jerome died at Watkins Glen, N. Y., Thursday night. He had been in poor health for several years.

Saginaw, April 28.—The obsequies of ex-Gov. David H. Jerome Monday afternoon were attended by many distinguished citizens from all over the state. St. John church was packed and the service was conducted by Right Rev. Thomas F. Davies, of Detroit, and Rev. Benjamin T. Trego, rector of the church.

(David Howell Jerome was born in Detroit November 11, 1828. He was a son of Horace and Elizabeth Hart Jerome. His father, dying while he was an infant, his mother removed to central New York. In 1844 she returned to St. Clair county, Mich., where the family lived until 1864. Mr. Jerome went to California during the gold excitement, where he located the claim of the "Live Yankee" tunnel mine, and constructed the tunnel for a distance of 600 feet. From this mine millions of dollars were taken. In 1883 Mr. Jerome started in business in this city, first with a general store, and later in hardware. He was the senior member of the firm of David H. Jerome & Co. at the time of his death.

In 1867 Gov. Blake authorized him to raise a regiment, the Twenty-third Michigan, apportioned to the Sixth congressional district, and commissioned him camp commandant, with the rank of colonel. That year he was elected to the senate and continued in office for six years. For eight years he was a member of the state military board, retiring in 1873. That year he was appointed a member of the constitutional commission, and was made chairman of its finance committee. Two years later President Grant appointed him a member of the board of United States Indian commissioners.

In 1889 he was nominated for governor against a field of prominent aspirants for the honor. At the close of his term Gov. Jerome was a candidate for reelection, but a combination of peculiar circumstances caused his defeat, and Gov. Begole was elected on the greenback-democratic fusion ticket. During his term he had vetoed a bill requiring all railroads to place safety blocks in all frogs to save trainmen from disaster. His opponents made a great outcry over it, and the state was flooded with posters representing a man with his foot fast in a frog, while a train was bearing down upon him. These alienated the votes of railway employes to a great extent. Gov. Jerome withdrew from politics after the election and devoted the remainder of his life to his private business.)

KILLED BY A PENCIL POINT.

Curious Accident Leads to a Charge of Murder Being Filed.

Port Huron, April 25.—Simon Kettler, of Marine City, was arraigned in the police court Friday morning on a charge of murder. Kettler refused to plead, and a plea of not guilty was entered by the court. On the evening of April 6 Kettler and Frank Burns were in a saloon at Marine City discussing politics. Hot words passed between the two men, and Burns said he could whip Kettler. During the scuffle a pencil, supposed to have been in Kettler's pocket, ran into Burns' neck and broke off. Burns did not know the piece of pencil was there until several hours after the trouble. Blood poisoning set in, and on April 19 Burns died. Kettler claims the affair was entirely accidental, and that he was forced to fight. He does not know whether the pencil was in his or Burns' pocket.

Fatally Wounds His Sweetheart's Father and Kills Himself.

Tecumseh, Mich., April 28.—Henry Luce, aged 16 years, shot and probably fatally wounded Eugene Camburn at Tipton, six miles from here, Sunday evening and then committed suicide. Luce had been keeping company with Camburn's 18-year-old daughter Eva, against the father's wishes. Luce had threatened several times to kill the girl and himself. Sunday evening Luce called to see the girl, when her father again protested. Luce stepped outside and fired a revolver at Camburn through a window, the ball taking effect in the right breast and inflicting a probably fatal injury. Luce then shot himself in the head, dying almost instantly.

C., March 19, 1865, while a member of the Fourteenth Michigan Infantry. A FRIEND'S ADVICE.

MONTAQUE, Mich., Nov. 13, 1893. William Winderknecht, a wealthy farmer of Muskegon county, personally appeared before me, a Notary Public, this day, and deposes and says: "That for the past year or so he was afflicted with Weakness, Trembling, Heart Failure, Extreme Nervousness, Headache, and General Debility; that he has consulted with physicians and received no benefit. He was persuaded by a friend to try a sample bottle of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer, and he says that the trembling and nervous feeling was immediately stopped by its use. Afterwards he used two bottles of the same medicine and says he is entirely cured and free from that trembling sensation; his heart gives him no trouble and he sleeps well. He further says that his general health is much better, and that he is calling the attention of his neighbors and friends to the remarkable value of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer." Signed, W. WINDERKNECHT. Sworn to and subscribed before me a Notary Public for Muskegon county, state of Michigan, JAS. MORRISON. For sale by D. G. Look and Hunter & Son.

QUESTIONS. FRANCIS LYNDE. (Copyright, 1915, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

She disappeared in the house and came out again in a moment with a sunbonnet drawn over her head. "That's a short cut over the shoulder of the mountain, and I low you'd better take it; you'll be a hour or two on the road, but you'll be a lot better off than you are now." "That's just what I want to do," she said. "I'll take it." "You'll be a lot better off than you are now," he said. "I'll take it." "You'll be a lot better off than you are now," he said. "I'll take it."

He was anxious to be gone, but as there was no train until noon, he was obliged to wait with patience he could command, and he went to sleep thinking that he would spend the forenoon with Ludlow, and give him the facts of his discoveries in the abandoned mine.

Those who ought to know most about such matters pointed out the suitability of things terrestrial by showing that the change in position of a single grain of sand may determine the course of a mighty river, or that a chance raindrop may determine the course of a single grain of sand.

brought Ringbrand back to things present, and the thought that he should not let his horse and a sharper strike as the time of his departure came nearer. He recalled the little incidents of his acquaintance, and tried to get some comfort from the belief that his heart was still in her own keeping, and that the pain of renunciation was going to be made up to him by the glad news that would come to him when he was again in her arms.

"You're right," he said. "I'll take it." "You'll be a lot better off than you are now," he said. "I'll take it." "You'll be a lot better off than you are now," he said. "I'll take it."
