Spring has a way of sneaking ts up on us. Suddenly the trees are in full dress. Yesterday they were bare; today they are gowned in luxuriant emerald. Yesterday we were getting up in the dark and going to bed long after the sun set; today the sun was up and shining when we awoke and will barely be down when we're ready to retire. The wind was frigid yesterday, and a

today the breeze blows warm from the south. Almost overnight the dull, drab earth has become spotted with the brilliant hues of crocuses and daffodils, and spring has surprised us with its sudden beauty. How quickly the seasons come and go! How quickly life's drama is played! Only vesterday we were children. Today our g children are adults. As we count the intervening years, we realize how short life's span really is. We are here today and gone tomorrow. Time waits for no one Death is something we do not like to talk about. Yet, to the Christian it holds glorious promise. For "eternal springtime" with all its beauty waits just around the corner to surprise us with its glorious realities. Prayer: O God. life is wonderful, but it is fleeting. Heaven will be glorious, and it will go on forever. With Thee I shall triumph even in death. Amen. I fear no foe, with Thee at hand to bless; Ills have no weight, and tears no bitterness.

Where is death's sting? Where, grave, thy victory? I triumph still, if Thou abide with me.

is to encourage academic responsibility and to positively reinforce those students who consistently demonstrate this trait. Students were given the following guidelines:

- A responsible student will: 1. Complete assignments on time
- 3. Bring pen or pencil to class.
- 4. Arrive in the classroom on time
- 5. Not receive a blue slip (discipline notice).

6. Use bathroom and drinking fountain before coming to class. After each class period, students who had accomplished the six requirements turned in a form to their teachers. At the end of each week, the students who had completed the required tasks on all five days of the week were permitted to put their forms in a ballot box. After a five week period, a name was drawn in each class. Those students were given their choice of going to a movie, shopping, bowling, or the Show-Biz Pizza Place after school hours.

The winners were: Bob Rice, Dana Blohm, Pete Kemp, Doug DeVries, and Adam Buffin.

Classes participating in this program were taught by student teacher, Lorraine Wilcox from Michigan State University. Lorraine's supervising teachers were Ken Akers and Jim Hubbard.

I'm not a Johnny Carson fan, but one night several years ago I was having trouble getting to sleep, and went down to the living room to watch some TV. Richard Dawson was one of Carson's guests. You know him, the English guy from Hogan's Hereos who now has a game show, and kisses every girl who comes on stage. Anyway, after some chit chat with Carson, Dawson asked if he could read a letter that he used back in his old stand-up comedy days. Dawson conjured up his thickest Cockney accent and began reading. It was probably the funniest routine I've ever heard, and went something like this

Larson Masonry Company 213 Wharf Street London

Dear Mr. Larson

As one of your employees, I was sent today to repair some damaged brick at the top of a large building. After surveying the job site, I decided that the best method of getting the old brick down, and new brick up would be to rig a boom and pulley on the roof, from which I could raise and lower a barrel on a rope.

I acomplished this task in short order, raised the barrel to the roof, and tied the rope securely off to a stake. I then proceeded back to the roof, removed all the loose and damaged brick, and placed them in the barrel. This done, and the barrel nearly full. I went back to the ground to lower it

I untied the rope, but unfortunately...the barrel was now heavier than I was. Not wanting the barrel to crash to the ground, I hesitated to let go. I proceeded upward at an alarming rate of speed. Half way up, I met the barrel coming down, whereupon I suffered a rather severe blow to my shoulder. Continuing upsard, at an ever increasing rate of speed, I soon arrived at the boom, striking my head hard against it, and pinching my fingers in the pulley.

At this same moment, the barrel struck the ground with sufficient force to burst its bottom, and allow the bricks to spill out over the ground. Unfortunately I was heavier than the barrel. I proceeded downward, at an alarming rate of speed. Halfway down, I met the barrel coming up taking a painful blow to shins. Continuing downward, at an ever increasing rate of speed, I soon came upon the ground, which was now covered with bricks. Here I suffered numerous cuts, contusions and broken bones.

Unfortunately, while on the the ground I must have lost all presence of mind, for I let go of the rope. Down came the barrel, at an ever increasing rate of speed, and struck me upon the head rendering me totally unconcious.

And that, Mr. Larson, is why I'm writing you this letter request ing two weeks leave from my duties in your employ

Sincerely. Howard Smith Mason

I realize that the above letter is not nearly as funny in print as it was when Richard Dawson did it on TV, but I still get a heck of a chuckle every time I try to picture that poor guy going up and down on that rope. Maybe I'm warped, or more likely, maybe I get such a laugh out of it because it sounds like something I'd do. At any rate, this little bit of plagurism made for an easy column.

More and more of us are enjoying the benefits of teaming fresh or frozen vegetables with pasta for a delicious main dish... they're inexpensive, hearty and nutritious. These all-in-ones, as we like to call them, contain pasta, vegetables and meat or fish mixed with a sauce. Using a canned pasta cooked in its own rich tomato sauce has added advantages, it reduces your time in the kitchen and guarantees great results! All you need is some off-theshelf canned pasta, your favorite vegetables such as peas, green beans, eggplant or zucchini, plus your own creativi-ty to come up with a meal worthy of family or friends.

The Grand River looked particularly good to him because it is largely undeveloped between Lowell and Grand Rapids and because it has fine landing sites at Ada and Indian Drive

Bosserman is convinced that the canoe livery will fill a gap he sees in outdoor recreation in the Grand Rapids area. Many outdoor activites -- golf or tennis, for example -- are rather expensive and often do not involve the whole family. Canoeing, he believes, is something a family can do together without flattening its budget.

Misty Valley will be an allnew business: new canoes, new buildings, and new location.

Even the owners will be a little new at things, Bosserman joked. For the past few years, he and his wife have managed and restored an apartment building at 208 College Ave., in the Heritage HIll section of Grand Rapids.

He expects that the hands-on experience at the apartment will come in handy at their new business
