Strand closes after 55 years here

After 55 years as Lowell's entertainment center. The Strand Theater is closing its doors. When built by Harvey J. Callier in 1928, The Strand was heralded as "Michigan's most beautiful small theater". Present owner Robert DeNolf, has operated the theater since 1972 as a family run business. DeNolf blames the impact Low "s new Cable TV system has had on the Strand's attendance as the principle reason for closing.

COZY corner

By Roger Brown

The Brown's and another couple rented a 25 foot Catalina sailboat out of Holland over this past weekend. The weather, and the sailing couldn't have been better, with the possible exception of a pretty hairy trip back to Holland from Saugatuck in rough seas on Sunday. It was a new experience for all of us, and it was kinda fun. to see how the other half lives. But, I did come away from the weekend with a few questions, here are a few of them.

Since the loss of our front license plates in Michigan, we have been plagued with a 99% corny crop of "personalized" license plates. You know the ones I mean, "His", "Bob", Swingin' Grandma", and everybody's favorite, "God, Guns and Guts Made This Country, Let's Keep it That Way". My question is, why do all the motorists have such corny bumpers, while all the boaters seem to be able to come up with such clever sterns? A couple of my favorites from this weekend were, "Nuke" which had her port of call painted underneath "Three Mile Island", and obviously a doctor's boat which was tagged "Knot on Call"

Flies....those vicious black biting flies. What in the world are they doing miles out over Lake Michigan? They must wear themselves to a frazzle flying around out there looking for unwary boaters. We had enough wind to keep them blown away most of the time, but for a while on Saturday, we had a real fight on our hands. It took our full arsenal of "OFF", "Deep Woods OFF", a Fly Shooter and a boat cushion to fend them off. We thought we might have to turn the cockpit over to them, and go below, but we doubted whether they could maneuver us down the Pigeon Lake channel.

Where does all the money come from? We saw boats that cost more than most of us will make in a lifetime. In the Kalamazoo River going into Saugatuck, there were two boats that were in serious question of even being boats, more like ships. I'm guessing that they were approaching 100' in length, cost in the millions and would require a sizeable crew. We did see a roughly 60' Chris Craft motoring up the river, the old owner was just sitting out on the bow. FRI., AUGUST 5: Lowell puffing on a cigar while his uniformed captain and another uniformed crewmember took care of things at the helm. I wonder if they ever let him steer?

Why do landlubbers hate it so when you use sailing terminology and nomenclature? The logic for it is simple, since there are so many items on a boat that pertain only to boats, you must have unique words to describe them. If there wasn't a word like "hanks", then every time a sailor wanted to refer to "those little brass snaps that old the lead edge of the foresail to the forestay", he would have to say, "those little brass snaps that hold the lead edge to the foresail to the forestay". Hanks is a lot easier. So, why do non-sailors make such fun of our vocabulary, heck, I've got nothing against such words as chip, bogie, birdie, par, wedge, divot and pitch.

My last question. Why can't I figure out how to do what I did last city. DeNolf theorizes that these same people are just waiting for the films to pop up on cable. And more simply states DeNolf. "people that used to be theater patrons, now have twenty odd channels on their TV's instead of four, and are just staying home".

DeNolf is keeping an open posture about the Strand, however. "There is a possibility that we may reopen for a limited season, or for a special engagement for a certain film now and then". says DeNolf. The doors are closing, but the fixtures and equipment will remain for the time being. "Things can always change", says DeNolf.

There is a lot of history behind the walls of the Strand that was very aptly summed up by Carol Sebastian in a 1976 feature that appeared in the Ledger. We feel it is quite fitting to reprint that feature now.

"Stately stands the trees we pass every day ...never missed until taken away

Three years before the Village of Lowell celebrated its centennial year, Harvey J. Callier built a structure in Lowell that, when completed, was heralded all over the state as "Michigan's Most Beautiful Small Theature."

Today, the structure still stands on Lowell's West Mair. Street, partially filled with memories of a by-gone era when a night at the movie house was the only form of exciting entertainment.

Since that time, much has tures. been altered in the way of things to do, but the Strand continues its role in the community....and today is the only remaining small town indoor theatre in Kent County, outside of the metropolitan Grand Rapids area.

Callier who visualized the need for such a facility in a growing area, had originally planned to build the Strand in Saranac. The basement was laid, on the site which now houses the post office, but technical snags were met, forcing its removal to Low-

When Callier's "Strand" officially opened on June 12, 1928. it housed 514 opera chairs, a domed ceiling, shutter-sound controlled organ loft, a stage curtain detailed with local advertising, and four dressing rooms in the basement.

One "star's" dressing room was installed at stage level, and another above stage level had an arched ceiling and a small window over-looking the stage and parts of the auditorium.

The back portion of the building four stories high, held the fly loft, and a unique system of controls, ropes and sand bags, for the scenery and curtain drops.

Found in the second story above the main lobby area were several offices; one for a lawyer. a beauty salon, and the manage-

The pages of history tell us the first "grand opening" showing was: pictures, illustrated news, comedy and a newspaper drama Telling the World," introducing scenes of Chinese riots. The entertainment concluded with a vaudeville act put on by a quartet of dancing girls.

One year later, in 1929, the Strand became known as the "Home of Vitaphone talking Pic-

The flavor of New York style premiers blended into this small village as Mrs. Bill Haysmer fought the heat of the organ loft to produce the music for soloists such as Orrin Sterken, who preempted for the stage action.

All grandeur broke loose when celebraties made personal appearances, such as Laurel and Hardy, Daisy and Violet Hilton, the famous Siamese twins, joined at the hip, and a litle later the WLS Barn Dance from

It was during the early 1930's that action on the screen began to overpower the live stage entertainment....people began to become more enthralled with the quick action of stars like Conrad Nagel. Douglas Fairbanks, Gloria Swanson, Eddie Cantor, Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper,

George Roberts, former assistant Lowell Postmaster, who once had the fever of theatre life in his veins, worked for Callier. and recalls that there were four changes of shows a week; Sunday-Monday, Tuesday-Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday-Saturday.

"Tony Kropf, Bud Myers, Clark Morse and myself kept things moving along, working at the theatre. It was a good experience.

Two years before the adorable Shirley Temple began to charm the audiences, Lowell High School's Class of 1935 held their largest screen in Western Michigraduation exercises in the Strand; the only class to do so.

The Strand stage was also used for high school plays, when the village hall was being used by other groups.

The dressing room walls, names as Bill Doyle 1935, Ann Rodgers, Margaret Niles, Herb Reynolds 1935, Bob Henry 1939, Joe Heil, Pauline Christoff, Judy Hank, Bud Myers, Kay, Marion and Maxine.

controlled organ was returned to the Page Co. and the last of the live stage shows were held.

The depression years saw the introduction of "Screeno" and "Bank Night," games similar to today's bingo, which drew standing room only crowds; some staying only long enough to try for the jackpot prize which could range anywhere from $25 to $200 dollars

Things began to smooth out during the mid 1940's, and such movie greats as "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" drew the theatre

It was in November of 1948 when the Earl Evans and Ray Engle families purchased the Strand from Callier. The years to follow produced many changes.

In October of 1953, one of the finest improvements of all times was made at the Strand. The installation of a new panoramic wide screen.

Incorporating some of Hollywood's most recent developments, the Strand took great pride in offering to the public an entirely new theory in motion picture presentation...wide screen viewing that makes you feel a part of the show, necessitating total involvement.

The Strand today has the gan. An award in past years was made to the Strand for having one of the best sound systems for theatre presentations.

Many interior changes were made...seating was improved, the lobby area was revamped, today, still are etched with such the restroom facilities were moved to the main floor, and it was air-conditioned.

In 1972, the theatre's ownership was taken over by the De-Nolf family.

The most recent change by the In 1940, the thermostatically DeNolfs has been a new seating arrangement in the auditorium giving movie goesrs more leg room comfort.

It's a continual struggle to battle the television world and meet the high-rental movie company's cost, but as long as the public support is there ... so will be the Strand.

As past history has proven, a movie theatre is the only place people can go to where they can absorb themselves in the picture, forget many of their everyday problems, and enjoy themselves.

The theatre still remains one of the lowest cost forms of enter tainment...and the popcorn is great! How long has it been since you've visted the Strand?

"Stately stands the Strand we pass everyday...never missed until it's taken away."

Fair, continued

dairy goats, beef steer classes, and beef showmanship will be on Tuesday, with swine, poultry, and beef breeding classes on Wednesday. Dairy classes will be judged on Thursday.

The annual livestock auction sale of members' project animals will be held on Wednesday evening beinning at 7:00 P.M. in the Reath Show Barn. The sale offers the opportunity to purchase these quality animals and fill your freezer.

The pet parade scheduled for 2:30 P.M. Thursday gives youngsters (2-13) the chance to show their favorite pet. (Animals must not be a regular exhibit.) Any youngster with any pet is welcome to participate.

A new feature this year is a

Youth Rodeo to be held or Thursday evening beginning at 7:00 P.M. Youth will compete in some traditional rodeo contests like brone riding and barrel racing and some less traditional like goat tying and greased pig racing. Gate fee is $3 per person.

Friday evening's program will include the popular lightweight draft horse nnll beginning at 7:00

There are no parking nor ad mission charges (except for the rodeo) so bring the family and enjoy a day at the Fair.

Calves & machinery lost in fire

$60,000 to $80,000 damage to the Vern Nauta dairy farm, 2821 Parnell Road, in Lowell.

The fire, which destroyed a 40-by-60 foot barn, killing nine calves and burning some machinery, was reported to the Grattan Townshp Fire Department at 5:26 a.m. said Assistant Fire Chief James Jorgensen.

Lowell, Cannon Township and Ada Township responded.

Harry Morris, fire chief for Cannon Township, said his men

A barn fire early Sunday did arrived first, finding one barn fully engulfed in flames and two adjacent larger barns also on fire.

Nauta said the quick response of the volunteer fire departments prevented more severe losses. We figured another five minutes or so; and we might have lost the whole thing," said Nauta."

The cause of the fire had not been determind, but Jorgensen said arson could not be elimi-
