Showboat pays off an old debt

Lowell Showboat realized about one third of a goal that the board of directors set for itself last spring when it decided not to run a show this year. Finding themselves faced with a $45,000 debt, and not wanting to risk going further in the hole the board decided it was time to get serious about paying off the long term debt. Most of the debt dates back to 1974 when the Lowell Showboat Amphitheatre was built. About $14,000 of the debt is owed to the city for their purchase of the upper bleachers, a little over $14,000 to O.E. Bieri & Sons Construction for their work on the amphitheatre project, and the remainder is held in notes at State Savings Bank secured by several past and present board members.

On Monday, August 8, Lowell Showboat President Ray Quada announced that the Show boat's account at State Savings Bank was a healthy $25,236,25 following the issuance of a check from WCUZ in excess of $12,000. Quada in turn wrote a check to O.E. Bieri & Sons for the full amount of their bill, plus interest to date. The Bieris have been holding the outstanding account for nearly ten years, being paid 8-1/2% annually, with only one payment of $3,000 being paid on the principal in 1979 or Ouada also wrote a check for interest on the notes at State Savings Bank in the amount of $2,318.64, and all those notes were renewed secured only by Showboat's assests, with no individuals being required to sign them. Quada said, "I think the present Lowell Showboat Board of Directors has demonstrated to the bank that they are not going to run off on the Showboat's

The Showboat still has in its account approximately $8,500, the board will decide at a later date if that will all be applied to the debt or if some will be kept out for operating expenses. Most of the money raised toward paying the debt has come from the WCUZ Budweiser Softball Benefit and the Camaro Raffle staged by the Showboat. The Showboat is interested in pursuing a major fund raiser or two over the fall and winter months. if you have an idea for a project contact Roger Brown at 897. 9261 or Ray Quada at 897-8457 during working hours

esch honored at 4-H Fair

A champion Holstein steer raised by Freddy Oesch became a tribute to the boy who was struck and killed by an automobile on July 9 as he was riding his bicycle in front of his home near Alto. Freddie, who was ten years old, had raised the Holstein steer since it was a calf for showing at the Kent County 4-H Youth Fair. For the past year Freddie had planned on selling the 1,200 pound steer at the fair's annual livestock auction. Freddie's parents. Fred and Melva Oesch, almost decided not to show the steer because of the memories it brought back, but since it was Freddy's goal, the animal ultimately went to the fair. At the fair the steer was judged as "champion", but it was when it went on the auction block that "Mr. T" Freddy's name for the steer, became a tribute to the boy.

Prior to the auction, James Cook, Jr. a Vergennes Township farmer and Phillip Knisley. Freddy's 4-H club leader contacted eight farmers and business owners willing to pay $400 each for the steer, and then donate it back to the auction. At the auction. Cook explained the agreement he had made over the previous weeks with the eight buyers. and then asked if anyone else would like to get in on the deal. Five more people raised their hands. On top of that, when the steer was finally sold to Otto Schlatter of Grandville, it went for an inflated price of $2.00 per pound, about three to four times the going rate for dairy steers:

times. Freddy had planned to donate his expected proceeds, $700 to $1,000, to the new 4-H Dairy Barn at the fairgrounds, so that is where the entire proceeds from

In all $7,640 was raised by the was erected about a year ago at a steer that was sold fourteen cost of $30,000, and prior to the Oesch donation, about $10,000 was still owed on it

Power outages slated

next week Breakers will be pulled in the Light & Power system, and areas serviced by a pulled breaker will, of course, be without electrical power until it is replaced. The company has completed a schedule which designates a time slot for each of the several breakers to be pulled. but since attempting to define which areas will lose power at any given time would be an almost impossible task, only the time slots will be listed. You may lose power during one or more of the listed times

If you have computer equipment, or some other device that might be harmed by a sudden power outage, please call the Lowell Light and Power office, and they will attempt to tell you when power loss will occur at your business or residence.

Scheduled power outages are as follows: Monday, August 15 from 7:00 a.m. to 7:15 a.m.; Wednesday, August 17 from 7:00 a.m. to 7:15 a.m.; Thurs-

Writing my column this morning marks a first for me. Melinda D'Agostino, our typesetter, bookkeeper, secretary, receptionist and all around "Gal Friday" here at the Ledger is off enjoying a week of vacation. Outside of some part time proofreading help, Melinda and I more or less get this rag out each week by ourselves. So, since Melinda is gone . . . guess who is getting this old rag out more or les

All of this gibberish brings me to the point I made in the first sentence, that is this being a first for me. The "first" is, trying to com pose copy on a video screen. Since Melinda is gone I'm entering al my copy directly into the typesetter, rather than typing it first, and then editing it with a pencil. I realize my way is old fashioned, but think I still like it better than this electronic business. I keep looking for a "Space Invader" to zap me or a "Pac Man" to munch me.

... since I'm having so much trouble composing at this video tube. I've decided to make my life simpler, and just pass along a joke I heard recently. It's a traveling salesman and farmer joke, bu not to worry as there is no farmer's daughter involved ... just a pig. SCENE: Traveling salesman pulls into farmer's driveway intent or selling him some pre-fabricated post holes, and spies a pig roaming the front yard and sporting a wooden leg. The farmer comes out to the salesman's car

FARMER: Howdy

SALESMAN: Good afternoon sir. I'm selling pre-fabricated posholes, but I must admit that your pig with the wooden leg has got the hest of my curiosity

FARMER: Well now, that there is just about the smartest pig in the whole darn world. I'd reckon.

SALESMAN: How's that?

FARMER: You see, a while back a load of straw fell over on m hired hand. The pig saw it happen and pawed away at that straw 'ti he had my man uncovered. He'd a smothered fer sure if'n it weren'

SALESMAN: Say now, that is a smart pig!

FARMER: An that ain't all . . . after that happened my boy was swimmin' down at the pond, and got all cramped up. He'd a drown swimmin' down at the pond, and got all cramped up. He'd a drown fer sure if n that pig hadn't a spotted him. The pig swam out there, an my boy held onto his tail whilst the pig paddled 'em back to SALESMAN: Holy cow, that really is a smart pig! But I still can't figure out the wooden leg.

FARMER: Hey Mr., when you got a pig that smart, you don't want

As costs for a college year climb steadily toward an average of $10,000, many students find that traditional ways to stretch demand managerial and marketresources, grading exams or waiting tables, will not keep them in school. At many colmore ambitious assignments, which include operating a car dealership, devising computer software, manufacturing clothing or even leasing out heavy construction equipment.

Projects on this larger scale ing skills that rival requirements to start any business, according to the Michigan Association of leges, students undertake far Certified Public Accountants. If students yearn to set up their own companies to defray college expenses, there are some basic 4" steps to be considered. Entrepreneurs prepare themselves by consulting with CPAs, and the questions they ask and advice they seek parallels what students have to find out for their own projects

Starting a new business exposes you to greater risks than waiting on tables CPAs point our if your college career is on the line, the level of risk must by studied with care. But there are steps an aspiring entrepreneur can take to lessen the hazards. Businesses fail, CPAs say, mostly because of poor management and inadequate sales. To succeed, a business must be assured its product or service is in demand, that it can be provided in sufficient volume and sold at a competitive price to assure balancing costs. These cost are made up of fixed costs for financing and maintaining a business location; direct costs for labor and materials; and indirect costs for sales and administra-

Other vital areas that need exploring are how much capital is required to start and continue the business; what price would cover costs; how should the product or service be marketed; and what moves lessen your tax liability.

At some colleges, entrepreneurial centers have been set up to advise students on forming their own businesses. Supported by CPA volunteers, the centers will help students devise market surveys to determine the need for particular businesses, and help prepare projections and forecasts essential when seeking venture capital

At Baylor University in Waco, Texas a student started a used car lot. When the business faltered, the student had trouble arranging financing. Once the student auto dealer set up a working relationshp with a local bank. the business flourished

Usually, money made by a student entrepreneur does not jeopardize the financial aid alreday granted. CPAs note. The amount of aid is customarily determined by the college financial aid office at the beginning of the school year and is based on the income of the student and his family for the previous year

A student business could atfect college work study benefits. In that case, the student must decide if the new business promises to pay more than a work study.
