LEDGER TO PUBLISH LATE

Next week's Grand Valley Ledger will be published one day later because of the Monday, Labor Day Holiday. Because we don't receive the materials for our TV section until the Tuesday following a Monday holiday, it's virtually impossible for us to get a paper published in just one production day. Since we tried this on both the Memorial Day and Fourth of July holidays, and didn't receive any complaints, we intend to make this Ledger policy. We will of course give you advance notice. Those in Lowell and on Lowell rural routes will receive your papers on Thursday, others will also be a day later than normal. Thank you for your cooperation, and enjoy the holiday

LABOR DAY CLOSINGS

All offices of the State Savings Bank, First Security Bank and Great Lakes Federal Savings and Loan will be closed on Monday. September 5 in observance of the Labor Day Holiday. Also closed will be Lowell City Hall, schools, the Post Office (no delivery or lobby service) and most retail establishments. Two businesses requested that we make special note that they WILL be open Labor Day were T.J.'s Restaurant and Heritage Meat market.

BALLOON CLASSIC THIS WEEKEND

Looking for something to do this Labor Day Weekend? The Grand Rapids Marriott's 2nd Annual Balloon Classic will be held Friday, September 2 thru Monday, September 5. There will be balloon flights at 7:14 P.M. Friday, 7:10 A.M. and 7:13 P.M. Saturday, 7:11 A.M. and 7:11 P.M. Sunday and 7:12 A.M. on Monday. ### Dam's name is set straight

Ozzie Bieri of 1177 Godfrey St., Lowell called us last week to point out a couple of errors in our article about the Fallasburg Dam and Powerhouse. "First off," Ozzie says. "it was never called the Fallasburg Dam or Powerhouse, it was the Consumers. Power Co. Dam and Powerhouse". According to Ozzie, the Fallasburg Dam was located just upstream from Fallasburg, and has been gone since early in the century. In our research for a construction date, we got the Consumers Power Co. ### 'No instant, magical answers,' says ex-energy secretary America's energy problems aren't over yet, but former Energy Secretary James B. Edwards says solutions are coming into focus that promise great hope for the future.

"The energy crisis is not over, but we can put the siege mentality that it spawned behind us," says Edwards. "We are in the midst of a long, sometimes very painful transition to new forms of energy. There are no instant, magical answers. There are no universal energy truths awaiting discovery. Our only tools are hard work, devotion, prudence and creativity.

America must realize it is not running out of energy, he says. But it is running out of cheap energy.

Edwards' comments on America's energy future appear in the current issue of "FOCUS: Views on Energy", a magazine published by Consumers Power Company. A former governor of South Carolina, he was the nation's top energy official during 1981-82.

Edwards expects electricity to supply an increasing share of the nation's energy in the future. with coal as a major fuel to generate the power. But he also cautions that the country can't rely solely on coal.

"It was counterproductive to advocate reliance on a single energy source to be our salvation. or to rule out particular energy sources," he says. "We need a mix of energy sources. We need to split wood and atoms and everything in between."

He says nuclear power must be an important part of that mix. "Nuclear power is still the safest, cheapest, cleanest form of thermally generated electricity known to man," he says. "We have 600 years of reactor operating time in those big plants, and there has not been one death or injury due to nuclear radiation. Nuclear power is safer than nearly any other large-scale form of energy generation."

Edwards defends the decision by America's utilities to build the generation of nuclear plants coming on-line during this decade.

"Demand for electricity was growing at about 7 percent (when the decisions to build were made)," he points out. "Nuclear power plants were, by any calculation, the cheapest investment. At the time of the oil crisis, utilities had about 95 gigawatts of new capacity on order. That was only slightly more than what would have been needed.

"Had utilities not ordered that much new capacity, they would have been guilty of dereliction of responsibility. No one could have foreseen the oil crisis and its impact on demand for electricity.

To help emphasize the importance of extra caution by motorists during the school year. Gov. James Blanchard has declared Sept. 2-8 Michigan Traffic Safety Week

More children die in traffic accidents than from any other cause," states the declaration. Michigan motorists can drastically reduce this human toll by driving carefully, wearing safety belts, observing posted speed limits and refraining from mixing alcohol and driving.

"Michigan children did a better job of following safety rules last year than the year before." said Cullen. "But we need more pedestrian and motorist cooperation to complete a school year without traffic deaths."

Twice last year a school bus fatally struck a child who was picking up items he had dropped while leaving the bus, according to State Police.

"Those mishaps occurred in the danger zone -- 10-ft wide area that surrounds the school bus," explained Cullen. "In the danger zone, bus drivers have blind spots in which they're unable to see children as they walk or bend over. Children must be tions.

taught to keep at least 10 feet away from buses so drivers can see them."

Safety teaching aids and safety belts from 55,000 patrollers are among the supplies the Auto Club annually distributes to 4,200 Michigan schools. Parents may pick up free "School's Open -- Drive Carefully" bumper stickers and placemats from the Auto Club's 60 offices statewide.

The Auto Club reminds motorists that 862,000 Michigan youngsters will be traveling to and from elementary schools this year. Drivers especially should be alert for the 120,000 students ages six and under going to school for the first time.

Michigan law requires motorists to stop at least 10 feet behind school buses with flashers on as they load or unload. Motorists should not proceed until those lights stop flash-crossing guards. -Walk on the sidewalk. If there isn't one, walk facing traffic

-Dress in light-colored clothing for maximum visibility.
