Lowell City Council approves zoning variance granted a zoning variance to Allen Hull of 201 Donna St., Lowell at their regular meeting of September 6. Hull had obtained a building permit for a large garage, 28 x 32 feet and sixteen feet high, but after construction began it was noticed that the building did not conform with zoing requirements. After complaints came in to city hall from Hull's neighbors, it was discovered that the building was much too close to the lot line.

The Lowell City Council Hull in his site plan drawing had measured from the curb, and not his actual lot line which resulted in the building being only 12-1/2 feet from the lot line rather than the required thirty feet.

At a public hearing prior to the August 15 City Council meeting, several of Hull's neighbors were present to complain of not only the location of the building, but the size, height and fact that it is pole type consturction. The building is framed in with truss rafters in place, but no roof building to store two trucks used in this house painting business and the family car.

After taking two weeks to think the problem over, the city council has granted a variance to Hull that will allow him to finish construction, but ony if he meets certain requirements. The stipulations laid out by the council include lowering the roof peak to twelve feet, finishing the building with the same siding and paint as is on Hull's house, and adding a breezeway to give the project a more "finished" look. Hull agreed to the stipulation, and the variance was granted.

The roughed in structure belonging to Allen Hull will be lowered 4 feet, sided to match and attached to his residence to comply with a ruling set by the Lowell City Council.

Lowell and Alto busy this weekend

This Saturday is a busy one for the Lowell and Alto area. for starters there is the annual Honey Creek Christian Homes' "Country Fair". The day's activities get rolling around noon when a huge auction gets underway (see an ad in this issue for a list of items). Areo Bats radio controlled airplanes begin flying and the chicken and pork barbeque food booths open. All day from noon until 5:00 there will be musical programs, crafts, puppet shows. games, pony rides, a flea market and as the fair's planners say. "something for everyone".

Admission is free, and you are urged to bring the entire family and spend the day at the Honey Creek Christian Homes, 11652 Cascade Road (Old U.S. 16).

The Alto Fall Festival is also slated for Saturday. The day's activities begin with a breakfast

Crash injures Lowell retailer

John Koewers of 4 Mile Road, Lowell was injured last Thursday at about 7:30 P.M. when he drove his pickup truck into the path of an oncoming semi tractor and trailer hauling a load of polo ponies. Koewers was northbound on Parnell Road and had stopped at the flashing red light at Bailey Drive. According to one report Koewers waited for one car to pass and then pulled into the path of the eastbound truck driven by Jose Campos of Conservation and Faro, Ada.

Reports say that Koewers was thrown from the vehicle and suffered multiple cuts, abrasions and at least two broken ribs, one of which punctured a lung. Koewers was listed in good condition Tuesday at Butterworth Hospital. Koewers is the owner of Discount Enterprises, 219 E. Main Street, Lowell. Campos was not injured in the accident, and the polo ponies were also apparently uninjured.

Koewers mother was following him home, and witnessed the accident. Campos was en-route to the family owned polo field on Fallasburg Park Drive. Kent County Sheriff's Deputies are investigating the accident.

Eckman promoted to sargeant

Sergeant Al Eckman

The Lowell Police Department has been without a it since the retirement Jim Hutson early this year. That is no longer the case, as Officer Al Eckman is now Sergeant Al Eckman. The announcement was made by Lowell Police Chief Barry Emmons last week. The promotion was effective on August 28.

Eckman has served nine years with the Lowell Police Department as a regular duty officer. and another two years as a reserve officer. Eckman was named the prestigious, "Kent County Officer of the Year" in 1980.

Eckman, 40, resides at 707 Foreman, Lowell with his wife Phyllis and nine children. Over the years Eckman has been extremely active with the Lowell YMCA and has given untold hours of his time to that organization. He is currently the adult sponsor of the YMCA's Boys Leader Club, but confesses that he is not as active in the YMCA as he used to be because of family commitments.

I know it's probably just because I'm thick headed, but I have trouble understanding some of the things that people do from time to time. An example happened this past weekend, when a friend of mine was mixing himself a little toddy. He had spent the long dollar on a bottle of Jack Daniels black label sour mash whiskey. Good stuff. So what does he do with it? You guessed it, he mixed it with try Fair time at Honey Creek Coca Cola. You might as well buy the cheapest whiskey on the shelf if you're going to do that, because it will taste like Coke anyway. No problem...I just don't understand.

Another aquaintance of mine makes it a point to buy the best fresh ground coffee avaiulable which is totally understandable. What I can't understand is why she then takes this good fresh coffee, and prepares her coffee maker before bed so that all that needs to be done is to turn it on in the morning. Her nice fresh coffee has then become nice stale coffee. No problem... I just don't understand.

I know several people guilty of this. Whether they be out to dinner or buying steaks for the grill, these people always order the biggest and thickest steaks available. Then of course they cook them, or have them cooked into a dry old piece of shoe leather. No problem...I just don't understand.

If they are on the menu, Terese and I will quite often order a plate of oysters on the half shell as an appetizer. It never fails, that there will be at least one person at the table to make a comment like, "oh yuck, I hate those things". to which I always reply, "Have you ever tried them?". The answer is always, "no". I can't understand how anyone can "hate" something they've never tried. No problem...I

Mr. Larkin explained that the Planning Commission has discussed the problem of zoning for the best interest of the City many times, especially in the area in question. Sometimes against his better judgement and teachings, changes have been made, because of the Commission's familiarity with the City. The whole area of West Main Street, from Bowes Road to Gee Drive has been discussed many times as the best area for commercial growth, and has been so designated for that purpose on the interim map. Because the Land Use Map has not been formally adopted, the property in question has remained under the current zoning of R-3 Residence and Apartments, which was changed several years ago. He displayed a sectional map entitled "F" and noted how many drawings and how long it had taken before the Planning Commission had been fully satisfied with the various zoning designations.

Manager Quada also announced that the new roof on the Li brary was just about complete. He asked Council's pleasure on submitting a portion, or all of the cost of the project to the Helen Look Daley Committee for consideration.

IT WAS MOVED by Councilman Christiansen that the entire renovation project for the Lowell Library be submitted to the Helen Look Daley Committee for consideration, supported by Councilman Fonger.

Under Citizen Suggestion, Mr. Warning stated he thought that he had read either in the Lowell Ledger or Grand Rapids Press that City monies would be spent to develop a park for the Macker Tournament, and he wanted it known by Council that he is very much against it.

Councilmembers countered that they had given a letter to the Macker Committee, pledging support to help keep the tournament in Lowell, but that no monies have been pledged. Development of a park has been discussed in several different locations, several times, in which the annual event could be held, but nothing concrete had been decided. If anything, the Macker Committee has stated that they are willing to contribute monies to the development of a City park, if they could use it for their annual one-weekend event.

Mr. Warning also asked about complaints having been made about messy condition in back of Eberhard's Supermarket.

Manager Quada replied that he was not aware of any complaints being made to the City, but will check on the situation and have it corrected if necessary.

Under the Manager's Report, Manager Quada requested that the Council meet after the close of the Regular meeting for an executive session to discuss land aquisition.
