'OUTDOORS'

with Jack Friesner

In the past I have made several comments concerning the Michigan D.N.R. and the lack of field grade protection officers available for duty. Let's take an in depth look at the manning of this depart-

Presently the total authorized strength of the department is for 240 officers statewide, in the grade of sergeant or below. We are now below the authorized number of officers with 220. It is reasonable to assume that 10%, or 22 of these are on vacation, hospitalized. or convalescing at any given time. This leaves 198. We must also realize that, since the duties require 24 hour per day, 7 days a week, 365 days per year coverage that only twenty five percent are ever available at any given moment. This leaves approximately 50 officers on duty. Of this number at least one third will be involved in non fish and game related enforcement matters; I.E; pollution control and other environmental protection problems. This removes an additional seventeen which leaves 33. Now let's say that ten are involved in court actions, paperwork burdens etc. This leaves 23 Statewide. It is quite reasonable to assume that out of those original fifty individuals at least five would have the day off due to sickness or personal problems. This would leave 18. We have seventeen district headquarters which are usually manned by a Sgt. This would leave only one, and I am certain that he would be on coffee break. He certainly deserves it. Who does this leave tending the flock?

I know that figure don't lie, and I fully realize that liars do figure. In fact after looking back on the previous mathematics I believe maybe I should run for political office.

The DNR has recently proposed a package of new legislation which conceivably, if passed, would generate $123.8 million in additional revenues. They tell us that if this action fails, the first axe to fall will cut 40 field grade P.O.'s from the staff. In other words this one officer which we had on coffee break is now going to be cut by

These minus nine officers are still responsible for patrolling the entire state of Michigan, including 3.9 million acres of State Forests and 2.5 million acres of Naitonal Forests alone. This also include 11,000 lakes 870,000 miles of rivers and streams, and some 200,000 miles of shoreline. Even if they don't lay off forty officers. This one that is left on duty is going to be required to travel awfully fast to cover the area and provide adequate fish and wildlife protec-

Why should the hunter, fisherman or trapper be worried about increased license fees? It would appear that since we have no enforcement body, we need not bother with licensing.

I am indeed surprised that Oklahoma hasn't rustled our deer herds, Ohio hasn't absconded with our state lands, or Wisconsin hasn't herded the Lake Michigan fish all over to the west side of the Lake. I personally believe that if the number of officers were dou-

I had to run into Shelby last Saturday for a part for my sailboat. Terese went along to pick up a birthday card for her sister, and I knew right then that the whole morning was shot. I've never seen anyone who could spend so much time picking out a card. She could make a career out of card selecting. Not wanting to provoke an argument by hanging over her shoulder in the drug store saying, "hurry up, hurry up", I decided to duck into the local newpaper office to see what was happening there.

I grabbed a copy of the Oceana County Her. 'd-Journal and went to the counter to pay for it. The lady working there was very nicely dressed and businesslike. I pegged her as the owner, so I asked, "how's the newspaper business?". She replied that it was very good. I then asked her if she was the owner, and she said, "yes I am, are you in the newspaper business too?" This impressed me, as I never admit that I am the owner of the Ledger to a stranger. You can bet your bottom dollar that the person asking is either a salesman, bill collector or a lawyer hired by someone who didn't like what was said about them in the paper. In answer to her question, I told her that I am the publisher of the Grand Valley Ledger in Lowell, and that I was just nosing around while my wife pursued her career as a card selector.

We got to talking shop, and she wanted to know all kinds of things about the Ledger, such as circulation, format, history, competition, frequency of publication, etc. I had a little advantage on her, as I usually pick up a copy of her paper when I'm there on the weekends. I knew for instance, that the Hart Herald and Shelby arry recently to form a big, strong, county wide weekly; and that they were further strengthened by the fact that they also publish their own shopper, which pretty much gives them a monopoly on advertising in Oceana County. All in all, the Herald-Journal is a very impressive weekly paper. When she said the newspaper business was, "very good", she wasn't kidding.

With still no sign of my professional card buyer, Maxine (we had introduced ourselves) and I kept on talking. She told me that she was the fourth generation of the family who has owned the Shelby Journal for eons. She said that she disliked the newspaper part of the business; writing, editing, etc., but she really enjoyed the business end of it. I told her that I stumbled into the newspaper business at age ten, when my father bought a small town weekly, bought the Ledger eight years ago on a shoestring, and agreed with her that I don't care much for the newspaper business either. I have decided since our conversation that apparently neither one of us know any

We talked for over an hour, and I really enjoyed the conversation, even after Terese showed up, card in hand, and began throwing me those glances that mean, "let's go". I particularly like her anecdote about her father who had died recently at age ninety-one. Maxine said that he hand set type for the Journal at age five, and had graduated from college by age sixteen. She used this as a statement of how an education has always been available for those who want one badly enough. I just figured that if I were made to hand set type at age five. I'd want to get off to college as soon as possible too.

I've got to hand it to Maxine for even talking to me though. As I mentioned, she was very nicely dressed, and there she was talking shop in her front office with a guy claiming to be a newspaper publisher dressed in beat up dock siders, sweat pants, disheveled hair, a two day beard and a T-shirt with a drawing of a frog leaning against a bag bearing a caption "Bunky's Bar". I'm sure she was impressed.

The planet, Uranus, nearly came to be named Herschel – for its discoverer, Friedrich Wilhelm Herschel.

Swan family doing well

As you can see from the above photo, Lowell's mother swan and her four offspring are doing well. The swans received a lot of publicity this past spring when the male was shot and killed. Attwood employees have been enjoying watching what are apparently flying lessons. The mother flaps her wings until the youngsters imitate her, and then she flies off a short distance, probably hoping they'll follow. So far the lessons haven't resulted in any flights for the young swans, just a lot of gawkish

Festival slated for September 24 & 25

The 15th Annual Fallasburg Fall Festival, sponsored by the Lowell Area Arts council, will be held in Fallasburg Park, four miles north of Lowell, Saturday and Sunday, September 24th and

This festival has grown in all aspects since the LAAC took over sponsorship in 1978 and offers something for the entire family to enjoy. Because of its popularity amongst west Michigan artists, the juried show continues to grow in number and quality. 70 artists and skilled craftsmen will offer their work for sale at this year's show, and finding the perfect purchase a pleasure.

Eleven food booths offer evsnack for the kids. Complete meals featuring barbequed chicken, Polish dogs and beans, beef barbecues, and hamburgers will be available. Dessert and snack booths feature hot pretzels, icecream, popcorn, homemade pies, and donuts. Hot and cold beverages will be sold, also.

Children's activities, free of charge, will keep the youngsters busy while their parents shop or browse, and the whole family can enjoy the music from the outdoor stage as various performers entertain during the afternoons. A special feature of this turn-ofthe-century celebration is the many demonstrations of skills our grandparents used in daily living, such as candle-dipping, butter churning, beekeeping, or rug-hooking. These demonstrations help bring out the theme of this festival, "Celebrating Yesterday Today". In keeping with the theme many visitors and participants will be garbed in costumes of eras long past. This theme was chosen because of the appropriateness to the setting of the festival. Fallasburg Park is the site of the old Fallasburg Village and the Fallasburg Covered Bridge, over one hundred years old and still open to traffic. A visit to this bridge and the nearby Old Schoolhouse Museum, operated by the West Central Michigan Historical Society, can help the visitor capture the mood of the past. Also on the grounds
