1,000 residents evacuated by chlorine gas leak

About 1,000 Lowellites were rudely awakened Sunday morning and forced to evacuate their homes. Lowell sewage treatment plant operator Frank Martin was making a routine inspection and lab analysis of the city's sewage treatment plant at about 8:00 A.M. Sunday when he discovered a chlorine gas leak at the facility. Martin said, "I saw a green cloud drifting near the ground on the northeast end of the building as I drove up", "I knew right away what it was, and sounded the alarm". Martin is also the city fire chief, and within minutes two volunteer firemen wearing breathing apparatus were inside the building and immediately shut off the leading to the leaking copper line. In the meantime police and fire officials, along with city manager Ray Quada determined that the deadly chlorine gas was drifting off to northeast and called for an evacuation of the city's east side. The sewage treatment plant is located about two blocks south of Main Street on the west bank of the Flat

River. About sixty volunteer firemen, regular and reserve police, and emergency medical personnel began blocking streets, and alerting residents by going door to door and by using the public address systems on city vehicles. People evacuating their homes were told to drive to the high school or middle school parking lots and wait for an "all clear". East/west traffic through the city was re-routed to the north, and all streets in the endangered area were blocked. The "all clear" came shortly after 10:00 A.M., and the city returned to normal, with the only exception being the sewage treatment plant.

Martin estimated that about 400 pounds of the chlorine gas leaked from the corroded soft copper line leading from one of four 1,000 pound tanks located in the facility. The chlorine is used as a disinfectant in the sewage treatment process, but when it contacts metals it is highly corrosive. The chlorine gas impregnated everything in the facility.

Lowell sewage treatment plant operator Frank Martin holds the culprit piece of soft copper tubing that corroded through the caused the leak. The 1,000 pound tank that the tube was attached to contained only an estimated 400 pounds of chlorine gas when the leak developed. The tank was empty by the time the mishap was discovered.

MIDDLE SCHOOL OPEN HOUSE

The Lowell Middle School is having an Open House beginning at 7:00 P.M. on Tuesday, October 4. Parents are urged to come and meet with School Superintendent Fritz Esch, Middle School Principal David Burdett and teachers. Coffee will be served in the cafeteria beginning at 7:45.

CHIVALRY IS NOT DEAD!

Two customers came into the Ledger at about the same time one day last week. The first was a young lady here to pick up proofs for a monthly newsletter that we print, she took the proofs, mentioned something about muffler trouble and left. The second customer was a Japanese gentleman that comes here often to have copies made, he is somehow affiliated with Central States Precision Grinding. He dropped off his originals and also left.

A few minutes later, the copies were all run and we were assembling them at the counter when we noticed what was happening out our front door. The Japanese gentleman had his jacket spread out under the young lady's car, and with his tool kit and white gloves, he was working away at repairing the faulty exhaust system. Within a few more minutes the repair work was complete, the Japanese gentleman put his tools away, the young lady thanked him and drove off.

The moral of this story is: "Chivalry is not dead in America, at least not while we have Japanese visitors here".

OFF THE BLOTTER

Injured in an accident on Tuesday September 20, was Clare Barnum, 76, of Lowell. Barnum was a passenger in a car driven by Mary Orcuti, 80, of Lowell when she failed to yield right of way at Main and West Street and struck a vehicle driven by Ronald Martin, 28 of Lowell.

Richard Longstreet, 29, of Grand Rapids was injured Tuesday September 20 when he stepped out in front of a car driven by Dennis Jones, 35, of Lowell on Main Street near Center Street.

Donald Chesebro, 25, of Ada struck the rear of a vehicle driven by Raymond Merrills, 27, of Lowell on Main Street near Valley Vista Dr. Thursday September 22.

Stuart Raymor, 24, of Saranac, struck a steel post with the semi tractor trailer he was driving at Main and Hudson Streets Tuesday September 20. Raymor was attempting to make turn at the time.

Russell Maxim, 25, of Lowell, lost control of the vehicle he was driving and struck a fire hydrant at the corner of Jackson and King Street early Tuesday morning September 20.

Roger Crout, 29, of Ada backed his pick-up truck into a parked car owned by Kenneth Antcliff of Belding early Sunday September 25 on Main Street near Riverside Dr.

Arrested on Charges of larceny from a motor vehicle Monday September 19, was Scott Myers, 18, of Lowell and a 16 year old juvenile, both were apprehended by Lowell officers after investigation of a complaint of a purse being taken from a car parked on Riverside Drive.

Warrants were obtained by Lowell Officers Wednesday for Kirk Demull, 20, of Lowell and Gary Nickerson, 18, of Grand Rapids, in connection with the Larceny of motorcycles from the Shaffer-Clore used car lot on West Main on 19th of August.

at the plant will have to be replaced. Quada put a "very rough" dollar estimate on the damage at $25,000 to $30,000. "It could go much higher than that, depending on how much electrical equipment has to be replaced," Quada added.

When asked if residents were ever in any serious danger from the gas, Quada said, "Probably not, but chlorine is a deadly gas, and small dense clouds of it can stay intact for relatively long distances. So, we decided that it was better to be safe than sorry, and called for an evacuation".

Quada said that the worst danger was to, those with chronic lung and breathing disorders, inhaling even small amounts of the gas could prove to be a severe irritant to these people.

A mandatory seat belt law: Is it a good idea or a case of government intrusion? The controversial issue has resurfaced as players for both sides prepare to battle once again over legislation that would make it illegal for drivers and front seat passengers to drive beltless in Michigan.

The bill, currently before the House Insurance Committee and subject to public hearings, would impose a maximum $10 fine on persons caught not wearing properly adjusted and fastened safety belts. Although considered a civil infraction, a violation would not result in assessment of driver record points.

Exempt from the rule would be drivers and passengers of motor vehicles manufactured before 1965, vehicles which the federal government does not require to have safety belts, cars equipped with air bags or other passive restraining systems, and buses. Unless extended, the law would expire April 1, 1987.

Those favoring mandatory seat belt use say it could lower Michigan's annual traffic death toll by as many as 300 fatalities as well as reduce the severity of or prevent some 24,000 serious injuries and 76,000 minor injuries. Opponents believe the new law represents a policy of ticketing thousands of "offenders" who have committed no real crime. And, since studies show that most drivers don't wear seat belts, enforcement would be arbitrary and costly.

The argument, however, is not over the potential life-saving benefits from putting seat belts to good use. A national study of 15,000 auto accidents revealed that persons wearing shoulder-lap combinations better their chances of escaping moderate to fatal injuries by 57 percent. And here in Michigan, eight months after a child restraint measure went into effect April 1, 1982, the State Police reported auto-related injuries or deaths to children under age 4 fell 35 percent.

Rather, the debate will center primarily on freedom of choice versus the apparent high costs associated with refusing to buckle up.

Opponents of a mandatory seat belt law complain the statute would violate their constitutional rights and argue that the state should not concern itself with a person's decision not to use them. Proponents counter by saying driving is a privilege legitimately regulated by the state, and when it comes to paying part of the tab for treating auto accident victims, the state is very much concerned.

If the bill becomes law, Michigan would be the first state in the nation to require motorists to buckle up. If it should fail, then drivers should be encouraged to know the facts concerning seat belt safety so their choice to wear or not to wear is free and informed one.

Letters...

Dear Editor,

The residents of Lowell owe our Public Safety Officials a debt of gratitude for the way in which the recent "Chlorine emergency" was handled. Officials moved with careful dispatch to plug the leak and to care for the safety of the public without causing undue panic to those unaffected. As a resident of Lowell, I thank those who risk themselves on my behalf. I am sure the community joins me in this appreciation.

Sincerely,
Bill Amundsen

After 132 years of defending the America's Cup, the Americans finally lost it. I'm not sure how proud we should be of that record when considering how the rules have always been set up to favor the American yacht, but there were always those willing to challenge despite the rules. And, despite the lopsided rules, the Australians finally did the unthinkable.

Probably the most visible person throughout the races has been the skipper of the American yacht, Dennis Conner. Like the Mighty Casey, he has got to bear the brunt of the loss, and won't even get a chance to redeem himself until the next races in Australia in 1986. As America's #1 loser, Conner will probably get a lot of offers to do TV commercials over the next few years. Here are some scenarios:

A Miller Lite commercial: Conner walks into the yacht club and orders a Miller Lite saying, "I drink Lite beer from Miller because it tastes good and is less filling. And believe me there are times when I can't afford to be filled up." At that point someone in the club recognizes him and says, "Hey, that's Dennis Conner, the guy who lost the America's Cup, get him". The commercial ends with Conner being chased through the marina by an angry mob of sailors yelling, "string him from a yard arm", "throw him to the sharks", "keel haul the turkey", etc.

A Smith-Barney commercial: Conner is in the yacht club again, this time talking to a friend at the bar. Conner says to his friend, "My broker is E.F. Hutton, and E.F. Hutton says..." At that point everyone in the yacht club says in unison, "Who cares what your broker says, you're a loser". Then John Houseman walks in and goes into his dead serious Smith-Barney routine of "Smith-Barney knows what it takes to win, you have to earn it".

An American Express Travelers Checks commercial: Conner comes huffing and puffing into the yacht club saying, "I got shoved off the dock and lost all my travelers checks". The bartender says, "Settle down, there's an American Express office just a few blocks away". Conner then says, "But they weren't American Express Travelers Checks. To that the bartender replies, "Well, I guess you're just plain out of luck pal. Actually, it couldn't have happened to a nicer guy. It serves you right for losing the cup for us." Then Karl Malden comes on saying, "If you're in the habit of losing things, American Express Travelers Checks are the only travelers checks to buy. We have thousands of offices around the world, even in Australia."

That ought to keep him busy until 1986.

Flat River Snowmobile Club News

The Flat River Snowmobile Club held its eleventh annual meeting on Sunday, September 18, at their club house on Potters Road. The election of officers and regular business meeting followed a Pot Luck Dinner.

New officers for the coming year are Bradley Potter as President for the second term, Angelo Zengri, Vice President second term, Don Souser as Secretary, and Faith Marshall as Treasurer. Wayne Will was elected as Trustee for three years. The other Trustees are Marcie Scheck and Jane Anible.

The past year was ended with the Annual Chicken Barbeque and Picnic on Saturday, September 18 with about fifty members and guests attending. It was a beautiful day and everyone enjoyed being outside and playing horseshoes and Jarts. Julie and Jack Condon were the chefs for the day and as usual did a terrific job.

At the Annual Meeting it was voted by the members to name one of our older members as a Life Member. Steve Smith of Lowell has been a member for many years and we have always appreciated his interest in attending Club Affairs.

Jack Condon is on the ailing list following surgery. He is recuperating at home. Marcy Scheck wasn't able to attend as she has been with her mother in Manton following the death of her father. Hurry back, both of you. Thanks to all of last year's officers for doing a fine job: Retiring officers are Virginia Souser, Virginia Stephenson, and Mike Fugitt. The New officers will assume their posts at the October meeting.

HOMESPUN DEVOTIONS

by Pauline E. Spray

If the Lord delight in us, then he will bring us into this land, and give it to us... (Numbers 14:8).

Brad was proud of his new writing tablet. Then the pad broke loose from the cover. For a moment the little boy was heartbroken. A bit later, however, he looked up into his father's face, nodded his head confidently, and said, "Daddy, you can fix it, can't you?"

A child's confidence in his parent is a marvelous thing. And the parent delights in dispelling his youngster's anxieties by doing those things which enable him to face life free from unhappiness.

So it is with the Heavenly Father and His children. He will dispell our fears if we respect His wishes, obey His commandments, and trust Him implicitly. We may not be able to foresee the events of the future, but we can face life without anxiety, providing we are depending upon Him.

We need not question God's love and attention. We need not question His ability to fulfill His promises. Our chief concern is this: Are we living so He finds delight in us? If so, we shall "possess the land."

Prayer: Help me to live, O Lord, so that Thou canst delight in me. Then I shall "possess the land" which Thou hast promised. Amen.

I do not know, I cannot see. What God's kind hand prepares for me:

Nor can my glance pierce through the haze Which covers all my future ways; But yet I know that o'er it all Rules He and notes the sparrow's fall.

Pests may hitchhike indoors on plants

If you brought your house plants inside after a summer outdoors without inspecting and treating them for insect problems, an insect population explosion may be going on in your home right now.

Gary Dunn, Extension entomologist at Michigan State University, explains that warm indoor temperatures and the absence of natural enemies may permit a few hitchhiking insects to multiply very rapidly. Even plants that stayed indoors all summer may be overwhelmed by pests.

A variety of insects may attack house plants. Pests that feed on plant foliage include aphids, spider mites, white flies and thrips. All feed by sucking plant juices from the foliage.

Aphids are soft-bodied insects from 1/16 to 1/8 inch long. Though they're usually green, they may be brown, black, pink or yellow, and they may or may not have wings. They tend to congregate on new, succulent growth, such as recently opened leaves, flower buds and flower stems.

If your plant seems to have dandruff on its lower leaves or around the pot on the shelf or table, it's probably the cast skins of aphids.

If the dandruff flies away when you shake the plant, you probably have white flies. These tiny insects are about 1/16 inch long with snow white wings. In flight they look like bits of white ash swirling in the air. Both the adults and the immature forms feed on the undersides of plant leaves.

Both aphids and white flies secrete a sticky substance called honeydew. As this builds up on plants, leaves may become discolored with black mold.

Thrips are barely visible insects that feed on the undersides of the leaves. Signs of their presence include irregular or streaked silver areas speckled with tiny black dots.

Spider mites are tiny ter-tranched mites - actually plant-feeding ticks. They're usually found on the undersides of the leaves. Shaking a plant over a sheet of white paper will sometimes dislodge some mites, which you can see as minute specks moving across the paper. If they get very numerous, the fine, silky webbing in which they live becomes visible, also, the undersides of the leaves become covered with the gray, ash-like shed skins of mites.

Signs of feeding injury by sucking insects include speckled or yellow leaves, wilting, poor growth and stunting. All but mites can generally be controlled by dipping plants into a solution of malathion. A miticide such as Kelthane is necessary to control mites.

Tiny (1/32 inch long) insects that jump into the air from the soil surface are springtails. They occur in moist soil and can build up large populations very quickly, though they usually feed on fungi, decayed plant matter and algae, they may also feed on living plants.

The best way to control springtails is by drying out humid or damp areas and increasing air circulation.

Irregular holes in plants leaves may be slug damage. The slug's slimy trail on plants and containers gives away the identity of the pest. Look for the slug between the plant pot and its saucer.

The bottom of the pot is also a likely spot to find sowbugs, pillbugs, millipedes and other incidental pests. Mechanical controls - i.e., knock them off on the floor and step on them - are usually sufficient: If these or other pests are in the soil, drenching the soil with malathion may be necessary to eliminate them.

Births

Randy and Teri Hays (Condon) of Lowell are proud to announce the birth of a daughter, born Sept. 12 at Blodgett Hospital. The little miss has been named Ashley Joan and tipped the scales at 7 lbs. 14 oz. She is welcomed home by her big sister Annika Marie. Proud grandparents are Randy & Leona Bates and Chet and Lila Lewis of Lowell.

Great-grandparents are Lee and Gertrude McGlamery, Gerald and Florence Staal, Pop & Vada Kline of Lowell, Kenny & Helen Peddicord of Alma, Ill.

Glenn and Marlene Zaetsch of Imlay City announce the birth of their son Kenneth Glenn Zaetsch at Hurley Medical Center. Flint. He arrived September 13th, 1983 weighing 7 lbs. 3 oz.

Proud grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Clark Fletcher of Lowell and Mr. and Mrs. William Zaetsch of Imlay City.

Joining her brother Blake is Megan Elizabeth born September 17, weighing 7 lbs. 13 oz. Her parents are Rick and Lana Peckham formerly of Lowell, now living in Sarasota FL. Her Grandparents are Dick and Mary Peckham of Lowell and FL and Mr. and Mrs. Ladd Wolfe of Three Rivers Michigan.

On the average, a person takes in about 16,000 gallons of water during his lifetime.

Business, labor say n-plant vital to Michigan

The Midland Nuclear Plant in the home stretch of construction.

Business and labor leaders, in unusual harmony, say the electricity that will be produced by the Midland Nuclear Plant is essential to Michigan's economy.

Resolutions urging quick completion and licensing of the plant have been passed by both the Michigan State Building and Construction Trades Council and the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce. Both organizations worry that without Consumers Power Company's Midland plant, future supplies of electricity will not be large enough to meet the needs of business and industry.

They fear that even the current recovery could be scuttled, sentencing Michigan to continued recession and high unemployment.

Without the Midland plant, Michigan will be short of electric power "at the very time it is needed most to satisfy the requirements of increased business activity and to create the jobs so desperately desired," says the Building and Construction Trades Council.

The Chamber agrees, adding that the absence of the Midland plant "could cripple the recovery and place a roadblock to commercial expansion." The organization notes that "Michigan's citizens, for too long, have been required to live in an environment in which unemployment concerns have dominated their thoughts. Economic recovery, fueled by the timely construction and completion of the state's electric generating plants, is vital in changing this condition."

Both groups point out that Michigan's current electric supply is deceiving. It is adequate in part because Michigan's recession has greatly reduced commercial and industrial use of power. But as the recovery that is now underway grows stronger, increased demand will quickly eat up existing reserves of electricity.

And as Consumers Power recently discovered, demand can jump unpredictably. On a steamy July 15, the Company's customers set a new record for peak demand—a level of use the Company hadn't expected to occur until 1986.

The Chamber points out that energy plays a critical role in maintaining a healthy economy. A prosperous business demands a plentiful, reliable supply of energy to fulfill its growing needs. That supply becomes an attractive incentive for existing businesses to stay in Michigan, and helps convince others to relocate in the state.

All of that translates into jobs. This advertisement is paid for by the shareholders of Consumers Power Company.

Lowell Red Arrows tops of Tri-River

The Lowell Red Arrow defense stopping the Vikings in this photo, played a major part in Lowell's 39-0 win.

Girls Basketball 1-1 in conference play

Red Arrows Kathy Kazemier puts up a shot, but not enough as Arrows lost 46-30 to Forest Hills Northern.

Lowell's Varsity Basketball team split their games last week beating Fremont 55-26 and losing to Forest Hills Northern 30-46. The win against Fremont evened the Arrows conference record to 1-1 and their overall record is 3-3.

As lopsided as the final score was, Fremont almost got back into the ball game in the third quarter. They narrowed the gap to six. After a Lowell time out, the Arrows scored ten unanswered points to ice the game.

Kathleen Beacher paced the Arrows with 14 points and 6 rebounds. Phyllis Beacher had

The Lowell Red Arrows upped their record to 3-0, as they coasted past the Lakewood Vikings last Friday 39-0 at Burch Field.

The Arrows collected two interceptions one by Alan Southland, the other by John Kloosterman, highlighting the scoreless first quarter.

Lowell scored their first touchdown with 9:59 left in the second quarter as they went 30 yards on 6 plays with John Kloosterman going 2 yards for the score. Dennis Jannenga kicked the extra-point to give Lowell a 7-0 lead.

The balance of the second quarter looked a lot like a game of keep away. The Vikings tried a razzle-dazzle play with 1:32 left in the second, but Jerry Adams picked off the Bill Barker halfback pass.

Lowell trying to capitalize on the turnover threw a long pass intended for Tim Stepek, but it was picked off by Viking defensive back, Dave Joppie.

Lowell showed an instant replay as Jerry Adams got his second interception in :32 seconds.

Lowell quarterback Tim Gochenour fumbled on the first play from scrimmage, and the Vikings got one more chance to even the score. The always tough defense of the Lowell Red Arrows held the Vikings and the first half ended with Lowell on top 7-0.

The third quarter belonged to the Lowell Red Arrows as they scored 25 points on four touchdowns. Lowell's first touchdown in the third came on a two yard run by Kloosterman after a blocked punt by Steve Wernet. Jannenga's PAT was no good, and the Arrows led 13-0.

The Vikings plagued with errors fumbled on their first possession recovered by Defensive tackle Paul Rozich at the six yard line. Arrow quarterback Tim Gochenour then ran around end into the endzone to give Lowell a 19-0 lead. The two-point conversion attempt was stopped short.

The third touchdown of the quarter came on a five-yard run by Kloosterman. He had recovered a fumble caused by Jerry Adams.

Lowell scored their final touchdown of the third quarter when quarterback Tim Gochenour hit a wide-open David Kryger with a 45 yard TD pass. The extra point was no

A slo-pitch softball team sponsored by Larkin's Saloon and comprised of players mostly from Lowell is doing very well in a six team fall league at Wyoming's Palmer Park. The team named aptly, "Larkin's Saloon" is currently 3 and 0 with one rain-out in the eight game season, and has their eye on the league trophy. The team plays Tuesdays

JV Basketball results

The girls JV basketball team won both their games last week, beating Fremont 35-28 and also defeating Forest Hills Northern 34-31. Nancy Stencil led the scoring against Fremont with 11 points followed by Val Phillips with 9.

Stencil also topped the scorers against Forest Hills Northern with 10. Cindy Dumas added 9 and led a full-court pressing defense in both games along with Tonya Phillips, Michele Lindhout, Jenny Hoffman, and Michele McGee.

The two wins brought the Red Arrows season record to 3-3.

Engagement Told

Daniel Serne and Susan Vandawater

Making plans for a December 30 wedding are Susan J. Vandawater of Lowell and Daniel W. Serne of Ada. Parents of the bride-to-be are Mr. and Mrs. Leon Vandawater of Kentwood and the late Doris Vandawater. Parents of the prospective groom are William and Jean Serne of Valencia, Calif. Vandawater graduated from Lowell Senior High School and Davenport College of Business. Her fiancé graduated from Forest Hills Central High School.

To be Wed

Dr. David Durkee and Corrine Wood

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Wood of 409 N. Division Street, Lowell, are very pleased to announce the engagement of their daughter, Corrine Louise to David Gordon Durkee, O.D., of 807 W. Main Street, Lowell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon D. Durkee of 4095 S. Stone Road, Fremont, Michigan.

Miss Wood is a graduate of Lowell High School, and is employed at Blodgett Memorial Medical Center in Grand Rapids, Michigan, in the Medical Records Dept. and will pursue a medical career through in-service training at the hospital.

Dr. Durkee, a graduate of Fremont High School, attended Michigan State University, and is a graduate of Ferris State College of Optometry, and is currently in practice at 1125 W. Main Street, Lowell.

A May 12, 1984 wedding is being planned.

Fall may bring snakes into your back yard

People who get nervous when they see a snake sometimes have a lot to be nervous about in the fall. As the weather begins to cool down and snakes start looking for places to hibernate, they may turn up in sizable numbers in rural and suburban back yards.

According to Glenn Duderar, Extension wildlife specialist at Michigan State University, the chances of encountering a poisonous snake are very small. The only poisonous snake in Michigan is the massasauga rattlesnake, a small rattler that lives in marshy or swampy areas. Unless your yard borders a marsh or swamp, this snake is very unlikely to turn up here.

Snakes that may be found around homes include garter snakes (the most common), milk snakes, blue racers, hogsnose snakes and northern water snakes. All are nonpoisonous and, except for the water snake - which will bite if approached closely - none will bite unless you deliberately provoke them by poking at them or grabbing them. The hogsnose snake may even roll over on its back and play dead. (You can tell whether it's playing dead by flipping it over on its stomach and watching to see if it rolls over on its back again.)

If you do manage to provoke one of these snakes to bite, you'll get no more than a superficial scratch. A thorough cleansing and an antiseptic first aid preparation are the only treatment needed.

Most people with large numbers of snakes in their yards are not concerned about handling the snakes - they merely want to get rid of them.

One way to do this is to eliminate compost piles, rock or wood retaining walls, woodpiles, low-hanging shrubs and bushes, tall grass and other landscape features that provide cover and hibernation sites for snakes. This also destroys the habitat for other, more desired wildlife species, however.

"These common observe. The garter snake and the hogsnose snake adjust readily to being handled and make interesting short-term pets."

An old barn saved is a $aving for farmers

The barns of America are priceless monuments to our historical heritage. They have endured for centuries and provide a reminder of our leadership in American ingenuity. The barns were built from raw materials found on the surrounding land. They were built with a quality and foresite for their long endurance and use for generations to come.

For years barns have provided the American farmer with numerous uses. However, in the last few decades advances in farming technology seemed to render many barns useless due to their structural design. The elimination of the horse for plowing along with the increasing size of farm machinery have been 2 primary causes leading to a temporary obsolescence of old barns.

Dave Ciolek, a builder and restorer of covered bridges and old barns disputes the belief that these barns are obsolete in modern farming. "Quite the contrary," Ciolek says. "In fact, the old barns have tremendous advantages over any other type of new farm building. Because these old barns were so well built to withstand the use of generation after generation, they have literally outlived the men and the era that built them. This enduring quality almost became their (the barns) downfall because as new farming techniques came into existence, the interior of these barns was no longer functional. The height of the low ceilings and many sectioned off spaces on the first level were no longer useful for the larger equipment and tractors. The major problem is that the men who built the original barns, who could have easily converted the interior of these barns using post and beam retrussing, have simply passed away and with them a very valuable building technique almost disappeared." "If the builders of these barns were still alive today," Ciolek says, "they would be using their knowledge of post and beam construction to convert these barns to suit today's farmer rather than having them torn down or replacing them with something else. They would come in and change a few internal structural support beams so that the lofts could be raised leaving the entire ground floor of the barn free standing and undivided. This would achieve everything that a pole building could achieve and much, much, more."

"The original builders of these old barns would have simply retrussed the barn interior to meet the needs of today's farmer. They would have raised the loft to a height of 14-18 feet and structured the barn so as to eliminate sections on the first floor level." This is exactly what Dave Ciolek is doing. Dave has had a lot of experience in post and beam construction both in the removal and reconstruction of old barns and in the restoring and building of covered bridges. Ciolek feels it is his experience in these 2 crafts which have enabled him to save and make highly productive again the old barns of our past.

Besides saving the heritage of old barns, Ciolek is quick to point out the other advantages of retrussing an old barn. A pole building of similar size would not have the same height, nor would it have a loft. The pole building would also have only one half the storage capacity of a retrussed barn. Ciolek says the cost of retrussing an existing barn is a fraction of the cost of construction of a pole building. This is due, in part, to rearranging existing materials when retrussing versus buying all new materials for a pole building. In retrussing, no new property taxes or insurances are added as they are in new construction. There is no loss of farmable land due to added construction and roadways as with a pole building. Also, the superior strength of a retrussed structure cannot be paralleled with that of a stick construction pole building. Pole buildings may be guaranteed for 50 years while post and beam barns have been around for 100 to 150 years. The aesthetic charm and heritage of your farm and barnyard also remains the same. The amount of time it takes to retruss an existing barn takes a couple of days - a fraction of the time of new construction. Likewise, if at some future date due to a change in farming practice, the barn can easily be put back to its original state or can be changed to a totally different interior structure. Other types of farm buildings do not have this capability.

Ciolek says he cannot emphasize enough the fact that these old barns, once retrussed, would function just like a pole building or better at a small fraction of the cost. Farmers have virtually thousands of dollars worth of material in their barns just waiting to be utilized.

Save your flowering annuals from killing frost

The first killing frost need not spell the end of your flowering annuals.

Extension horticulture specialists at Michigan State University say you can save a few plants from frost and straggle as house plants.

Coleus, geraniums, impatiens and fibrous-rooted begonias can be grown indoors in the winter, says Lee Taylor, MSU horticulturist. The key is to provide them with enough light to keep stems from getting long and straggly and leaves from becoming sparse and small.

Because natural light levels are so low in the winter, this usually means growing plants under artificial light.

Before you need to worry about that, of course, you need plants to grow. Taylor advises taking cuttings and starting new plants from them, though you can also over winter whole plants.

Take 3- to 4-inch cuttings from the tops of the plants. Remove the leaves on the bottom third or half of each cutting and insert the cut end of the stem in damp perlite, vermiculite, peat or sand.

Place cuttings out of direct sunlight and water as needed to keep the rooting medium moist. It should take them about six weeks to develop roots 1/2 to 1 inch long. At that point they can be transplanted into 4-inch pots of house plant potting soil and placed in a sunny window or under artificial light to grow.

You can save entire plants either bare root or potted.

To preserve bare-rooted geraniums, dig them before they're frosted and tie them in bundles. Then hang the bundles upside-down in a cellar or other cool, moist area. Temperatures should be around 45 degrees F and humidity at least 80 percent.

Plants to be potted should be dug before frost. Dig up as much of the root system as you can and pot the plant in a container big enough to hold all the roots. Taylor suggests using a soil mixture of one part soil, one part sand and one part peat.

Cut back the tops of the plants by half. Water whenever the soil feels dry, and fertilize about once a month with a house plant fertilizer, following label directions. Grow in a sunny south window or under artificial light.

Plants grown under artificial light will tend to be bushier and more compact and are more likely to bloom during the winter than plants grown in natural light, Taylor notes. Ordinary fluorescent tubes are adequate for plant growth. A combination of one warm white and one cool white is recommended, but all cool white bulbs is OK.

Commodities distribution point changed

The Kent Community Action Program announced today that the commodities distribution site in Lowell has been changed from the Hi-Lo Gun Club to the American Legion Building at 805 E. Main in Lowell (Skating rink entrance).

The American Legion graciously agreed, at the last minute, to provide space for distribution when it was discovered that the Gun Club was no longer available. All residents of the Lowell area who are registered to receive surplus commodities are being alerted to report to the

The easiest way to provide plants with 12 to 16 hours of light per day is to put the lights on a timer that turns them on and off

American Legion Building on Thursday and Friday, September 29 and 30, to pick up commodities.

Kent-Cap is beginning to explore the possibility for another permanent distribution site in the Lowell Area.

Festival raffle winners

Though Sunday was wet and dismal for the last day of the Fallasburg Fall Festival there were bright smiles from the winners in the annual raffle.

Diane Siciliano was the pleased quilt winner. The dulcimer was won by Leah Vredenburg. Other winners, also all of Lowell, were: Phyllis Lessens, the porcelain pottery dish; Ray Zandstra, leaded glass box; Jan Johnson, the set of woven pillows; Vicki Abel, the small basket; Bob Garcia, the tulip photo, and the winner of the Carol Johnson albums was Marie Jandermoa of Grand Rapids.

Kent Co. Road Commission fall color brochure ready

The Kent County Road Commission has completed their 1983 Fall Color Tour Brochure in time for the changing fall landscape. The brochure, free of charge, is comprised of four loops covering much of Kent County.

The northwest loop is approximately 50 miles long that takes you by Long Lake, Dwight Lydell, and Lamoreaux Parks.

The northeast Loop is 48 miles long. Highlights of this loop include Townsend, Seidman, and Chief Hazy Cloud Parks as well as several natural beauty roads.

The 37 mile southeast loop features Thornapple River Drive, Coldwater River Park and two natural beauty roads.

The southwest loop is 48 miles long and includes Indian Mounds Drive. This same loop passes by Johnson, Douglas Walker, Brewer, and Paris Parks.

The brochures are available at the Kent County Road Commission General Offices, 1500 Scribner, the West Michigan Tourist Association, The Chamber of Commerce, Convention Bureau of Grand Rapids, Kent County Clerks Office, Kent County Treasurers Office, All Kent County Branch Libraries, and Grand Rapids Branch Libraries.

For more information, call the Kent County Road Commission Hotline number at 774-6888.

Each year, the nation's largest estuary, the 4,400 square mile Chesapeake Bay, yields an average of 125 pounds of seafood per acre to sport and commercial fishermen, including 90 percent of the country's soft-shell crabs, according to the National Wildlife Federation. The Chesapeake is also the dumping ground for 400 million gallons of municipal sewage every day.

In the 1800's, before railroads carried U.S. mail out West, camels were shipped from Egypt to move mail and supplies across the hot, dry Southwest deserts, says Ranger Rick magazine. It took some getting used to, but the 60 or so camels, known as the U.S. Camel Corps, proved worthy of the task.

At midday, when the sun is overhead, a fish can see objects perhaps 15 to 20 feet away in clear, shallow water, says International Wildlife magazine. When the sun is not directly overhead, little light passes through to illuminate the underwater scene, and fish must rely on their excellent senses of smell, hearing and touch.

Each year, almost 50 percent of all North American ducklings are born in and around potholes, says the National Wildlife Federation; not those potholes you might see on a typical highway, but around the millions of scattered depressions left in the wake of melted glaciers in the Dakotas, Minnesota and central Canada.
