SPOOK INSURANCE

1:45 A.M. last Saturday a vehicle crashed into the east entrance to the north end of the Lowell Senior High School. The vechicle backed out of the debris and fled the scene. Intitial damage estimates ran from $3,000 to $8,000 and included replacement of the custom fabricated entrance and doors, a demolished classroom doorway inside the building, the masonary work around it and 8 to 10 lockers that were damaged beyond repair

Sometime between 1:15 and

The Lowell Police department found several pieces of the vehicle left at the scene including a mirror, headlight trim and a side reflector. The pieces were taken to area body shops and auto deal-' ers in an attempt to identify the make, model and year of the vehicle. The police Department immediately began an investigation working in cooperation with Lowell Senior High School Principal Richard Korb. The school had been prepared to offer a $500 reward in this issue of the Ledger, but at about 1:00 P.M. Tuesday afternoon we were told to pull the reward notice. The pieces were apparently coming together.

At a little after 2:00 P.M. the Ledger was notified by Sergeant Al Eckman of the Lowell Police Department and told that an arrest had been made in the case. After following various leads and pretty well pinpointing the vehicle to a mid 1970's GMC or chevrolet Pickup with green paint, the police arrested Michael Alan Wright, 26, of 825 Hunt Street, Lowell. Wright's vehicle is a 1975 green Chevrolet 4 wheel drive pickup truck, a perfect match. Following the arrest, the police department secured a confession from Wright, and he was charged with reckless driving and leaving the scene of a personal injury accident. Wright suffered minor injuries, and was alone in the vehicle at the time of

Do you remember that fairly hard frost we had a couple of weeks 6 free. Tickets are available ago? Well, for some reason that I can't quite remember now, my car at the door. got left outside that night. The next morning Terese and I were running a bit late, and when I discovered the frost covered windows I really had to hustle around and get them scraped.

I grabbed the scraper and went to work like killing snakes. One of the hundreds of cliches my dad uses. I'm not quite sure I get the meaning, but it sounds good. Later on theat morning I had to use the car again. By this time the sun had come out and the windows were nice and clear, except for where the scraper had scratched them. The scraper I used was one of those with a wooden handle, an aluminum frame at the business end that holds a plastic scraper blade on one side and a rubber squeegee blade on the other. Somehow the aluminum frame had gotten bent, probably from being stepped on, and instead of scraping the windows with the plastic blade, I scraped them with the aluminum frame. Cute, huh?

Though the windows (all of them) look to be scratched to the max, they were actually just coated in places with an aluminum residue. Kind of like soaping a window at Halloween with a bar of paraffine, the only difference is that paraffine comes off with a reasonable amount of elbow grease, this stuff seemed to be there for the duration.

The following weekend we found some time to clean the car, so Terese tackled the interior, and I went to work on the outside, starting with the windows. My first inclination was to try some steel wool, but couldn't find any. As I scouted through the cleaning supplies I finally settled upon some Ajax Cleanser and a plastic scouring pad.

I made a paste of the Ajax and started scouring away at some of the residue on the windshield. After considerable scrubbing, I rinsed the paste away and discovered that I had begun to make some progress, so I really got after it and finished the driver's side of the windshield. Next I worked on the driver's window, where the residue was worse than most places. I scrubbed and scrubbed and scrubbed some more. I rinsed the Ajax away, and discovered what I had done.

The sun was shining on that side window, and I could see tiny little scratches in the glass. I dried the window, and the scratches were even worse than they appeared when wet. The windows that I scrubbed almost appear to be frosted, like a shower stall glass. Driving at night is really fun as the scratches diffuse the light from oncoming cars turning it into a terrible glare. Of course I had to experiment on the driver's side of the windshield and the driver's side window. I have talked to a guy at an auto glass store, and he says that he might be able to polish the scratches out using a buffing wheel and jeweler's rouge. If he can, then maybe I can get out of this fairly cheap, but if he can't I guess I'm looking at replacing the two windows. As for the rest of the windows, I finally found as S.O.S. pad. and it worked just fine, without scratching the glass. And the culprit scraper went out in the trash. But not before I smashed it to pieces 3rd Annual Knights of Columbus DEER

CLUXCULSD.M How strong is your knowledge of the situation in America's steel industry? For example, did you know: • That the U.S. Steel Corporation and the Brit ish government-owned Brit-ish Steel Corporation struck a deal that's been called the beginning of the end for America's steel inde

• That the deal involves importing millions of tons of steel from Britain rather than modernizing steel facilities in this country as the company promised its workers it would do?

· That this could force other American steel companies to follow suit if they want to remain competitive? That this could mean a sharp drop in employment opportunities in the United States? • That this could make America dependent for a good deal of our vital steel, as we are for oil? That many state legis lators and city councils have passed resolutions condemning this deal?

• That many people concerned about our country and our economy are writing their legislators asking them to investigate the proposed arrangement?

Crystal has undergone nine operations since 1979, and says she is really feeling better because of the walking.

They don't walk fast, it took three hours each way on the trip to Lowell. When asked if they'll walk through the winter months, they expressed a concern about icy roads, but felt they could take the cold without a problem. Elaine Parker Shaw of Grand Rapids looks on as Dr. Lawrence Probes of Lowell tries to show Rogr E. Jacobi, president of Interlochen Center for the Arts in Michigan, how to play the original Sousaphone built especially for John Philip Sousa's band in 1898

The largest band instrument built until that time, it was called the "Monster Sousaphone." It traveled around the world many times and was played before every king and queen and head of state of every country by 1931.
