DID YOU KNOW?

Lowell 9th graders have an opportunity to take Social Studies 9, a class geared toward learning how to study.

Lowell Area Schools was able to provide 1/2 day of inservice training for our teachers during this year because of lack of funds in this area. Is this sufficient to improve our teachers and help them to develop into even better educators?

Over the past three years, Lowell Area Schools have purchased eighteen Apple 2E computers for students, grades 4th through 8th, who have scored in the lower level on the Michigan Educational Assessment Program tests given through our school. These computers will be used to strenghthen mathematical skills. Funds for these computers were made available through Federal Block Grants for Educationally Disadvantaged Children.

This information has been supplied by the Lowell Citizens for Education.

A Teen Institute is a gathering of teenagers for fundamental earning and social activities. The program is set up by a group of Lowell High School students with the help of advisors. This group (called Teens Involved) is hoping to help teens have a better understanding of themselves and improve in communicating with others.

The day will include speakers such as John Belaski from Montcalm County Project Rehab. Activities such as alternative highs (fun activities) skill builders, athletic times, and a dance will show the teens that they can get "high on life", without the trouble of drugs and alcohol.

Registration materials are available in Student Services Center. The fee of $2.00 will include lunch, dinner, and the dance. For more information, call 897-9202, extension 7.

City will enforce 2 hr. parking

Parking in the central business district has long been a problem in Lowell. At the urging of a reorganized Chamber of Commerce, and a mayor whose business suffers from conjested parking, Lowell City Manager Ray Quada has announced a tough new parking policy for the down-

In a letter dated March 5 and distributed to all downtown merchants and property owners, Quada stated that beginning April 1 the police department will rigidly enforce the 2 hour parking restrictions that apply to most downtown parking spaces. Street parking on Main Street, Broadway north of Main, Riverside north of Main and Water Street will all be limited to two hour parking will be designated for the row closest to the businesses in both the east 200 block lot and the west 200 block lot. In the lot south of Main on the east bank of the Flat River the first five spaces on either side of the entrance drive will be designated as 2 hour parking.

Several abusers of the two hour parking limitation in the central business district have combined to prompt the tough new policy. Tenants of the upstairs apartments in downtown buildings, employees and in many cases even the merchants themselves have combined to bring the problem to a boil. "These people park their cars on Main Street at 8 or 9 o'clock in the morning, and they stay there taking up valuable spaces all day," Lowell Mayor James Maatman said. "It just got to the point where something had to be done, and that's when I talked to Ray (Quada)," Maatman added. Maatman owns three businesses built on the levy. Maatman said that he, Duane Lambert, owner of Lambert Variety and Bob Pfaller, owner of Pfaller's Riverfront Clothing, all stood in the window of Maatman's photo finishing lab one day last week, and identified virtually every car that lined the south side of Main Street as one that was parked there for the entire working day. "My business depends on traffic to survive, and if there's no place to park, then there's no traffic," Maatman said.

According to Quada new signs are on the way, and the entire central business district will be re-signed to designate the specific time limits of the parking spaces. The current ordinance calls for 2 hour parking from 8:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m. Monday thru Saturday in the central business district unless otherwise posted. Quada said that the police department will use photos as evidence that violators have overstayed the limit. The current fine for illegal parking in Lowell is just $2.00, but Quada . plans to approach the City Council with a proposal to increase the amount. Quada said that he hopes the new get-tough policy will stimulate some meaningful conversation between businesses, tenants and employees.

Quada feels that abuse is actually a bigger problem than a lack of parking spaces. "Those who are abusing the posted time limit of spaces critical to businesses requiring parking for transient trade have to be made aware of the problems they are causing," Ouada said.

Lambert has been quite vocal about downtown parking over the years. He said that he was provided with a list of eighteen tenants in apartments over buildings in the West 200 block of Main Street. With the first row of the municipal lot there designated as two hour, there are only twenty spaces left in the lot for all day parking. "If the tenants use eighteen, that leaves just two for other all-day parkers," the person who prepared the list argued. Lambert pointed out that this argument wasn't really valid because not all of the tenants own cars and most work during the day, so their cars are gone anyway. Lambert welcomes the new parking enforcement policy pointing out that a better parking situation might help fill some of the vacant stores in the downtown like Townsend's, That Special Place and the Ranch House Restaurant. Lambert said, "I realize that there will be some problems when this goes into effect, but I'm sure the bugs can be worked out and we'll end up with a positive solution."

The City Council recently gave their approval to plans for turning Riverside Dr. from Main Street to Elm Street into one-way traffic to the north. Berms will be installed at Main Street with a small opening left to allow traffic to enter Riverside there. With the traffic directed to just one way the street can be used for angle parking on both sides, adding a few sorely needed spaces to the area. Once a final plan is approved by the Council it is hoped that the project can proceed this spring. Lambert pointed to this plan as one way in which a little innovative thinking can help create additional parking in the central business district.

to attend the state competition. Following the payment of bills the Board heard from high school students, Amy Davis and Jami Andrews, who gave a presentation of the Teens Involved (TI) group and their activities. At their request, the Board moved to support the activity "Teen Institute" scheduled for March 23 and approved a donation of $150 to help off-set the anticipated $500 to $600 cost. The Board then heard from Jim Kyburz of the Alto Lions and Dave Potter of the Lowell Lions who presented a possible program for middle school students in helping young people learn how to deal with challenges by offering positive growth experiences and teaching specific coping skills placing special emphasis on preventing drug and alcohol abuse. The Board took no action but the item will be taken to the Curriculum Council for their recommendation before coming back for Board action. In personnel matters the Board accepted the resignation of Doug Snyder as high school math teacher to enable him to assume a new position as principal of Ravenna High School. Mary Dewey was granted a maternity leave from her position as teacher at Bushnell for the remainder of the 1984-85 school year. Violet Rohrer was hired to fill vacancy created by Doug Snyder and Sharon Cromartie was hired to fill in for Karen Burd who is on maternity leave.

Fritz Esch noted that the administrative package increase is in line and in some cases lower than other school districts in Kent County and places all administrative salaries in the lower 1/3 of administrative salaries paid for the 1984-85 school year throughout KISD.

In the last item of business the Board heard a review of the projected enrollment along with staffing needs for the 1985-86 school year.

Apply now for local scholarships

Applications for all three local scholarship programs are now available from the Student Services Center at the high school. Deadline for returning applications and recommendations is April 1, 1985.

The three programs include the Edwin Doyle Scholarship, the Helen Look Daly Scholarship, and the C.H. Runciman Scholarship. Each of the programs has differing amounts of awards, although all have common application requirements. To be eligible, a student must have a 3.0 GPA, be able to prove financial need, and supply letters of reference (forms are available with the application).

Each of the scholarship programs was set up by the estate of the deceased through the estate administrators to benefit Lowell High School students in their pursuit of further learning.

While we understand the urgency of restoring electric power to all of our consumers after a severe storm, we consider hazardous conditions created by the storm to be our first priority. That means the detection and repair of downed overhead power lines, and we need your help.

Power lines which have been snapped or pulled down as the result of a storm present a serious, even deadly danger. If you come across a downed wire, stay completely away from it. Don't touch the lines, the pole to which it is attached, or anything else in contact with the wire. Call us immediately - don't assume someone else will. We want to know about downed wires immediately so we can send our professionally trained linemen to make the needed repairs.

Take some time today to teach your children about the dangers of downed electric wires. Instruct them to tell you or another adult as soon as possible about the problem, and to warn other children away. Never, never assume a wire is harmless. Let us make the determinations and the repairs. Together we'll continue to keep our community safe from electric

I mentioned in this space a few weeks ago that some of my reliable old sources of material are drying up on me. The kids are getting older and less likely to do those cute little things that make good copy. I've repeatedly used Terese's shopping habits as material. My old dog is just getting older, and I've broken just about everything I own to provide copy for this column. Ah, but help may be on the Last fall I came up with the idea of buying my dad a new dog for his birthday. He had owned and enjoyed a couple of male Boston Bull Terriers in the past, so that's what I looked for. I struck out at every kennel I called, but finally found a lady that raised Bostons and French Bulldogs. She didn't have any Boston pups at the time, but she did have one six week old "Frenchie" ready to go. "So what's a French Bulldog?", you ask. Well, they look just like an English Bulldog, except that their ears stand up like a Boston Bull. They are bigger than a Boston Bull, but much smaller than an English Bulldog. They vary in color from fawn to brindle or black and white. My dad says he once heard them described as a cross between a terrier and a train wreck. A pretty accurate description. Well, as you have probably guessed, we bought the little guy and gave him to my dad. His name is Charlie. For the past six months he's been winning his way into the hearts of the whole family. And believe me, as ugly as he is, he has to work at it really hard. He's got the manners of a pig, the energy of a cyclone and an ego second to none. But he's still cute. I've got a hunch that Charlie is going to provide me with material for this space as the years go by. He recently pulled a stunt that is the type of thing that finds its way into this space.

My kids were visiting at Grandma and Grandpa's a couple of weeks ago. Casey was having a snack of some sort by the TV, and had put his dental retainers on the coffee table nearby. Anything on the coffee table is "fair game" for Charlie, and the lower retainer became the object of his attention. By the time Casey discovered that his retainer was missing, Charlie had chewed it up pretty good. Now we have to go to the dentist to either have this retainer repaired, or order a new one. I'd almost be willing to bet that this story will be a new one on the dentist, who after thirty years of practice had probably thought he'd heard them all.

My parents are taking off on a little vacation soon, and guess who has volunteered to keep Charlie while they are away? I can almost gurantee that he will be the topic of at least one of these columns over the next few weeks. I just hope that his future antics aren't as expensive as I think that retainer is going to be!

Health training for teachers

The Lowell teachers, along with East Grand Rapids and Grand Rapids public schools are participating in thirty hours of health training instruction to update their content knowledge in health in order to facilitate the instruction of the new Michigan Model for Comprehensive School Health Education. The teacher training and curriculum materials are being funded by a grant from the Michigan Department of Education. The grant monies flow through the Kent Intermediate Staff Development Center where the training is being conducted, and the materials are being purchased. The K.I.S.D. Trainers for the project, Marie Neil, Todd Johnson, and Roxanne De Weerd, are working very closely with the Lowell teachers to implement this project.

The focus of the Michigan Model for Comprehensive School Health is on prevention. The leading causes of death in our country in the early 1900's were communicable diseases such as diptheria and influenza. The leading causes of death today are chronic diseases such as heart disease and cancer. Chronic diseases are not contagious, but rather are related to life styles and personal risk factors.

The legislature funded the teaching small children good health risks and hence contain Michigan Model in hopes that health habits will reduce their health care costs in the future.

> From interviewing L.A.S. teachers, we also find there are those who are very concerned with meeting the needs and scholastic level of "high achievers" -- the students who always have assignments done first, receive high grades consistently and comprehend at a faster rate than others of their class. Teachers feel this area is practically ignored. It is an issue that must be addressed if these students are to be adequately challenged and given the opportunity to stretch their minds. The committee has information of successful programs in use at other area schools. The teachers and some principals feel programs for the "high achiever" are possible in Lowell using a "zero hour" before school, or a "seventh hour" after school.

Presentations made to the administration and School Board asking for replacement textbooks -- not updating the books -- just buying some that can be given to students to use and implementing a program for high achievers are met with the same response: "There is no money to fund these requests." Are we willing to allow a mediocre program of education for our children, or do we want an above average program that will prepare all students for the ever-advancing work-a-day life 80% or more will be put into upon graduation from high school or college?
