Bond sale benefits Light & Power

The Michigan Public Power Agency (MPPA) today anthe nounced $369,365,000 of advanced refunding revenue bonds. According to Tim Morawski, General Manager of the Board of Public Works at Holland, Michigan and Chairman of MPPA, "the bonds were issued for the purpose of defeasing a major portion of MPPA's 1983 Belle River bonds and, because of the low interest rates available at this time. MPPA and its participating municipalities will receive substantial savings."

MPPA is comprised of eighteen municipalities in Lower, Michigan, all of whom operate their own electric systems. These municipalities are: Bay City, Charlevoix, Chelsea, Croswell, Grand Haven, Harbor Springs, Hart, Holland, Lansing, Lowell, Niles, Paw Paw, Petoskey, Portland, St. Louis, Sebewaing, Traverse City and Zeeland.

In 1983, on behalf of eleven of its members, MPPA issued $590,000,000 of Belle River Revenue Bonds at an interest rate of 10.8% to purchase 242,650 kw of capacity in the Belle River Power Plant (1,300,000 kw total capacity) being constructed by the Detroit Edison Company at St. Clair, Michigan.

The refunding revenue bonds sold today have an average interest rate of 7.48%. These bonds will replace a portion of the higher priced bonds of 1983 and will lower the overall debt service of MPPA and its eleven participating members in the Belle River Project. "The overall reduction in debt service over the

The report revealed important data for coaches and teachers and showed that athletes are doing exceptionally well academically. The Board then took action to approve the realignment of the OK White Division by removing the district of Kenowa Hills and replacing them with Zeeland effective the fall of 1988. Approval was then given to add a JV girls softball team for the 1985-1986 season at no cost to the Board.

INSOMNIA -- SOME HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS -- PART II This week we will hopefully enlighten you with further sugges tions on how to manage insomnia on your own, and without medical Briefly, last week's suggestions included: 1. Don't eat or drink excessively before going to bed.

2. Avoid caffeine products after noon.

3. Resist the urge for daytime naps.

4. Follow a daily exercise routine.

5. Don't rely on alcohol to induce sleep. Additional suggestions include:

6. Develop a bedtime routine. Establishing a routine each night before bedtime can be very helpful. Taking a warm shower or bath, giving the hair "100 strokes," or having a warm glass of milk before retiring can build an association between these activities and sleep. For optimal results, one should try to go to bed at the same time every night.

7. Set aside time for relaxation before going to bed. Reserve 20-30 minutes before bed for relaxation. Listening to soothing music, watching a favorite television program, or reading may help one to unwind. Avoid suspense or mystery books that entice the reader to ignore the normal bedtime hour.

8. Think of ways to make the bedroom more inviting for sleep. If noise and light are the problems, denser carpeting and heavier drapes can help. Comfortable night wear, a good mattress and pillows, and clean linens also help to enhance the sleeping

If waking frequently during the night is the problem, the following suggestions may aid in restoring an unbroken sleep.

1. Once awake, allow 20 minutes to return to sleep. 2. If more than 20 minutes elapse and you're not asleep, go into another room and pursue a quiet or boring activity for 20 minutes. Do not use this time to raid the refrigerator; eating t stimulating and can also be a subconscious reward for waking up

3. Return to bed. If you remain awake for more than 20 minutes get up and repeat the process for as many times as necessary If none of the suggestions made in these two columns is success ful, we feel that a consultation with your doctor may be approp Chronic insomnia may be a symptom of an underlying disorder. one which may require the use of medication.

Boy, oh boy, didn't that little bit of a thaw feel good? The streams are opening up. The Tigers are into their exhibition season. The maple sap is flowing. Kids are playing basketball in the driveway. And we can count the number of days until spring on our

Ah, but the long awaited, much heralded, coming of spring in the north is not all maple syrup and the return of robins. The sudden thaw caused some water seepage in my basement that soaked up some carpeting and is giving me good cause for concern. The snow melt here at the Ledger has sprung a leak in our roof, which we just had repaired last fall. I have water coming down on me here, and coming up on me at home. Not a good situation.

I thought maybe I'd be safe in my car. No such luck. The wet roads got to the electrical system, and the car would barely run. I'm now light the cost of a new distributor cap, rotor and plug wires. On top of that, while driving into Grand Rapids Monday, the car in front of me kicked up some gravel left by a salt truck, and busted my windshield. Seems like spring is out to get me this

There are lots of other little gems that can take a little luster off a warm spring day. For instance, there are all those little land mines in your yard that were deposited by the neighborhood dogs over the long winter. Get ready to dig deep into the old pocketbook for new clothes for spring. You can bet the kids have outgrown theirs, and the wife's are out of style. A warm day gets you outside to see how everything weathered the winter. Chances are you'll spot lots of peeling paint on your house, and rust on your car. Like the flow of sap from a tapped maple tree, your wife gushes forth with an endless stream of projects she wants done around

I could go on, but I'm afraid I'd have you all longing for a cold blustery day with your feet up in front of a fire, sound asleep with a good book open in your lap and your old dog curled up beside you. No way! You've been doing that all winter. Get outside and wash the windows, rake the yard, paint the house, trim the shrubs, clean the garage, wash the car, sweep the driveway, clean out the eaves . . ! Get moving man, don't you know it's spring!
