Along Main Street | EPA files civil suit against city

The City of Lowell made the front page of Friday's Grand Rapids Press, and the article didn't concern Showboat, Macker or the wrestling team. Lowell and the State of Michigan have been named in a civil action filed by the United States Enviromental Protection Agency (EPA). The suit claims that Lowell is in violation of the Clean Water Act and its National Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) permit as the city discharges pollutants into the Flat River from its sewage treatment plant located at 300 Bowes Rd. The penalty in this case can be as much as $10,000 per day for each day since July 1, 1985, when new waste limitations went into effect. A news release from the EPA states that Lowell is currently discharging about 600 pounds of suspended solids into the Flat River each day, and their NPDES permit allows for a maximum of 363 pounds per such suits filed by the EPA. Five suits were filed in New Jersey against Hoboken, West New York, Jersey City, Bayonne and North Bergen. The other suit was filed in Colorado against the city of Denver.

Lowell City Manager Ray Quada feels Lowell was singled out because the city government here has been very vocal about their stand on building a plant without federal and state financial help. Such plants have normally been funded at 75% federal dollars and 25% local and state. "The plant that has been designed and was approved by the EPA and state Department of Natural Resources (DNR) in December of 1982 would cost an estimated $5 million to construct," says Quada. Quada points out that if Lowell has to fund this project alone, and is able to bond the project at a market rate of 7%, the first year's interest will be $350,000, or about $35 per month from each of the city's 1,200 sewer customers. "Add in operating expenses, payment on the principle, normal repairs, etc., and we could be looking at sewer bill increases from $50 to $75," Quada added.

On September 30, 1985 the EPA ordered the city of Lowell to submit a municipal compliance plan specifying corrective measures with a fixed rate schedule, which would allow the city to achieve full compliance as soon as possible, but not later than July 1, 1988. The compliance plan says in effect that the city will meet the EPA's discharge standards by July 1, 1988 with or without federal funding. Lowell is 36 on the state's list for funding, and well out of the running for financial help. Because there is no federal funding, and because $75 sewer bills are beyond most residents' ability to pay, the city government has been unwilling to submit a municipal compliance plan.

The suit also cites Lowell for missing deadlines or failing to Lowell's primary sewage treatment plant at 300 Bowes Rd. was listed in the Environmental Protection Agency's civil suit against the city of Lowell as the source of pollutants now being discharged into the Flat River.

Lowell was one of only seven State Savings affiliates with Zeeland based bank

It was jointly announced today by Harold J. Englehardt, Chairman of the Board of State Savings Bank, Lowell, and David M. Ondersma, President and Chief Executive Officer of First Michigan Bank Corporation, that a letter of intent to affiliate has been signed by both com-

The proposed affiliation is subject to the approval of various regulatory agencies and approval by the shareholders of the State Savings Bank. The affiliation would be accomplished through an exchange of 6.6 shares of First Michigan Bank Corporation common stock for each share of common stock of State Savings Bank. FMB stock is listed on the National Over-The-Counter Stock Exchange. Tuesday's Wall Street Journal listed the stock at 20 3/8. Ondersma commented, "We welcome the State Savings Bank to our family of banks and welcome the benefits this affiliation brings to both organizations and to the communities they serve." Englehardt stated that State Savings Bank will continue to operate under its current name and as a separate entity. He does not anticipate any changes in staff, officers or directors. "We will keep all our current employees, will continue to do all of our bookkeeping here and operate our computer center at the Lowell office", said Englehardt.

The main office of the State Savings Bank and a branch are located in Lowell, with one additional branch office on Myers Lake Road near Rockford. Established in 1934, the bank has grown to $61,500,000 in assets at year end 1985.

First Michigan Bank Corporation, with total assets of $760,687,000 as of December 31, 1985, is the parent organization of FMB-First Michigan Bank, Zeeland; FMB-Lumberman's Bank, Muskegon; FMB-Oceana Bank, Hart; FMB-Community Bank, Dowagiac, and FMB-First Michigan Bank-Grand Rapids.

Both millage issues pass

Less than 800 voters turned out Monday to cast ballots on two millage issues proposed by the Lowell School District. The small turnout of only 8 or 10 percent of the district's 8 to 10 thousand registered voters approved both issues.

The first item on the ballot called for the renewal of 22.2 mills of operational millage for a five year period. The second item asked for a shift of .7 mills of debt retirement millage to operational millage. The .7 mills was due to be deducted from the districts 3.3 mills of debt retirement because increased assessments generated more money than was needed to pay off debts.

The first proposal passed by a 569-193 margin. The second item was a little closer at 484 to 287. The precincts tallies broke down as follows: Precinct 1 -Lowell City, renewal - 311 yes -

FACTS ON INFERTILITY

In last week's article we began a discussion on infertility - that , a couple's inability to conceive a child. We discussed both means of correction. Today we will concentrate on some of the argical means of correction. Today we will concentrate on some of the medical therapies for infertility, and also discuss some of the support groups available for infertile couples.

Medical therapy for infertility is aimed primarily at inducing ovulation (egg formation and migration). Clomid*, a frequently used fertility drug, works by "fooling" the hypothalumus gland into producing more hormones which act to induce ovulation. If Clomid® proves to be ineffective, Pergonal® is an injectable product which attempts to mimic, as closely as possible, the hormonal releases of the male and female reproductive systems. In the female, Pergonal® aids in the development of ovarian follicles, which contain the eggs released at ovulation. In the male, this drug insures a sufficient production of sperm. Pergonal® therapy must be monitored closely by both physician and patient, since it acts directly on the ovaries; over-stimulation can result in multiple ovulation and the possiblity of multiple pregnancy.

Infertility can be a difficult emotional and psychological experience for a couple. Feelings of anger, quilt, and helplessness are common reactions. A thorough evaluation requires an understanding team of physicians who will consider the couple's psychological state as part of the treatment process. Though cure rates are high. infertility treatment can consist of a long and exhausting set of

To help couples through this period and to help those who must confront permanent infertility, there are support groups such as Resolve, Inc., P.O. Box 474, Belmont, MA. 02178, (617) 484-2424, a nonprofit agency with chapters in over 40 cities around the country. These groups can provide counseling and help refer couples to physicians specializing in infertility treatment.

I don't know about you, but I've really been looking forward to the coming of Halley's Comet. I happened to be in the Florida Keys as the comet was coming past us on its way toward the sun. Every night I'd head out with my binoculars hoping for a glimpse of the famous comet from this southern vantage point. But, every night I'd be disappointed by hazy skies, moonlight and car headlights on the nearby highway. I never did spot the darned thing.

Determined to see this once in a lifetime phenomenon, I began our joy in the risen Lord." researching the possibilities of sighting it on its trip past us after rounding the sun. I found that the best viewing would occur during the week of March 17. The comet would be visible at about or 12 degrees above the southeastern horizon from about 4:30 to 5:30 a.m. with no moon to hamper visibility. Hot dog, I could

I checked with Casey, and he said that he wanted to be awakened if I went out comet spotting. The females in the family relish their sleep too much to be a party to such foolishness. So, I had Terese set the alarm for 4:00 a.m. on Monday. I got up, checked out the window, and saw nothing but clouds. I repeated the process on Tuesday, and again it was cloudy. By Wednesday Terese was getting a bit irritable with this 4:00 a.m. routine because she is the controller of the alarm clock. She'd be awakened, only to be told to reset it for the usual time. It was also cloudy on Wednesday, and again on Thursday. I was really beginning to worry as to whether I would ever see the comet, and began checking air fares to someplace with clear skies.

Finally, at 4:00 a.m. Friday morning I looked out the bedroom window to nothing but clear, starry skies. It was colder than a well digger's ankles, but the skies were at last clear! I double checked with Terese to see if she had changed her mind, and got a few mumbled remarks about my intelligence in response

I put on a pot of coffee, and woke Casey up. I told him to dress in warm clothes, and I went back downstairs to don my long johns and sweater. The dog was totally confused by all this early morning activity, and just stayed in his bed in the kitchen with an, "are you nuts, or what?" look on his face. Even though he's a golden retriever, I don't think he's got what it takes for early morning duck hunting excursions. He's lucky he ended up with a family of comet spotters instead of duck hunters. Duck season comes around every fall. Halley's Comet only comes around every 76

I filled a thermos bottle with coffee and grabbed the binoculars. Duffy finally decided he was going too, so the three of us jumped in the car and took off. We headed south out of town where we'd be up out of the river valley with a good view of the southern horizon. We stopped just east of Alden Nash on 52nd Street, and

After about fifteen minutes of zeroing in on each star in the general vicinity of where the comet was supposed to be, my fingers were so cold they wouldn't work, and I still hadn't spotted the elusive comet. I got back in the car to continue my search through the window. The dog had finally come to life, and was thrashing around, making my comet spotting more difficult. I was really getting depressed, and was just about ready to give up my search when I decided to concentrate on a faint glow that I had stumbled across during my scanning.

I guess I had envisioned the comet as a point of light like a star, with a tail. But, as I focused in on this hazy glow, it definitely took on the shape of a comet with a tail pointing off in the proper direction. Since it was so vague, I began to wonder if my 5:00 a.m. mind wasn't playing tricks on me. I gave the binoculars to Casey, and he said he saw the same thing. That glow was either Halley's Comet, or Casey and I hallucinate alike. I'm betting it until we've resolved this money issue," Quada said. "We currently have our engineers scaling down our plant design in case we are forced to build without noted. Ouada feels the city can would meet the EPA's discharge requirements, but would cost much less than the $5 million price tag on the current design. The EPA requires a design that will service not only the city, but from Lowell Township. Also, if funds, they can skirt the Davis/ Bacon Act which mandates that certain pay scales be met on federally funded projects. The EPA plan also stipulates that federally funded sewage plants be designed to handle projected increases for 20 years.

The experience was a bit under-whelming, but at least Casey and I can say we saw Halley's Comet. He'll be a ripe old 86 the next time it comes around, and I'll be 112, going on 113. But, I'm not apt to live that long, especially if I ever wake Terese up at 4:00 a.m. for a week straight again.

Ouada feels that the bottom ine to the issue is that the EPA project or guarantee that Lowell keep its place at 36 on the state's list for funding, even if the city "I'd hate to see the residents of Lowell have to pay outrageous slot in line for funding if it ever becomes available," Quada said.

Lowell to get touch tone service

Bob Canfield, a switching equipment technician at Lowell's Michigan Bell switching station displays some of the new equipment installed to provide touch tone service to the "897" exchange.

The "897" exchange will get Michigan Bell's touch tone service beginning in early April. New equipment has been installed at the Lowell switching station on North Hudson St. over the past several months. Customers can call Bell's business office number for commercial accounts is 530-3535. Residential accounts should call 530-3500. The charge for touch tone dialing is $2.50 per line, per month. There is also a service charge for the initial switch over.

Besides being a much faster to make applications. The phone means of dialing, touch tone also allows customers to use an ever increasing array of computer services activated by the touch tone system. Many banks offer computer banking, and several paging and message systems are available.

Microfilmed Ledgers at Library

Lowell Librarian Kris Vogelar demonstrates the microfilm reader available for use with the reels of microfilmed Lowell Ledgers and Lowell Journals.

the just plain curious . . . can now find fullfillment at the Lowell branch of the Kent County Library. The long-awaited microfilm of past copies of the Lowell Ledger and Lowell Journal are now available to the public.

Copies of the Lowell Journal from 1870 through the late Geneologists, historians and 1890's and the Lowell Ledger from 1893 until the present are neatly stored on microfilm at the library. The microfilming, a microfilm reader and a cabinet for the film was all funded by the Look Memorial Committee at a cost of approximately $5,000. "I think this is a wonderful asset to the community", said Ledger Publisher Roger Brown. "We now have over 100 years of Lowell history available to the public, and neatly stored in a box not much bigger than a bread box", Brown added.

The original copies of these issues were all bound, but many were in pretty sorry shape. "I'm glad we got this project done before the copies deteriorated any further", Brown said. There are some gaps, but for the most part the microfilm is a pretty complete history of the community.

To some this may all sound pretty boring, but these old copies of the Ledger and Journal contain details of tremendous floods, huge fires, a spectacular train wreck, a bank robbery com plete with a Main St. shootout that killed a Lowell police officer and lots of other Lowell history that is anything but boring. Of course there is a lot of the less exciting, but still important history, such as births, deaths, marriages, etc.

The next time you are at a loss for something to do, you may want to consider a trip to the library for a journey back in time.
