CHARLIE DOYLE IS PUBLISHED

Lowell Postmaster Charlie Doyle recently submitted an article about the history of the Lowell Post Office to the state postal newspaper. The article was published along with a 1939 photo post card of the building. His article also included some facts and history about our community which painted Lowell in a very nice light. Charlie ended his article with a cordial welcome to anyone visiting in the area. The editors of the newspaper tacked on a thank you to Charlie for his "fantastic story and intertesting information".

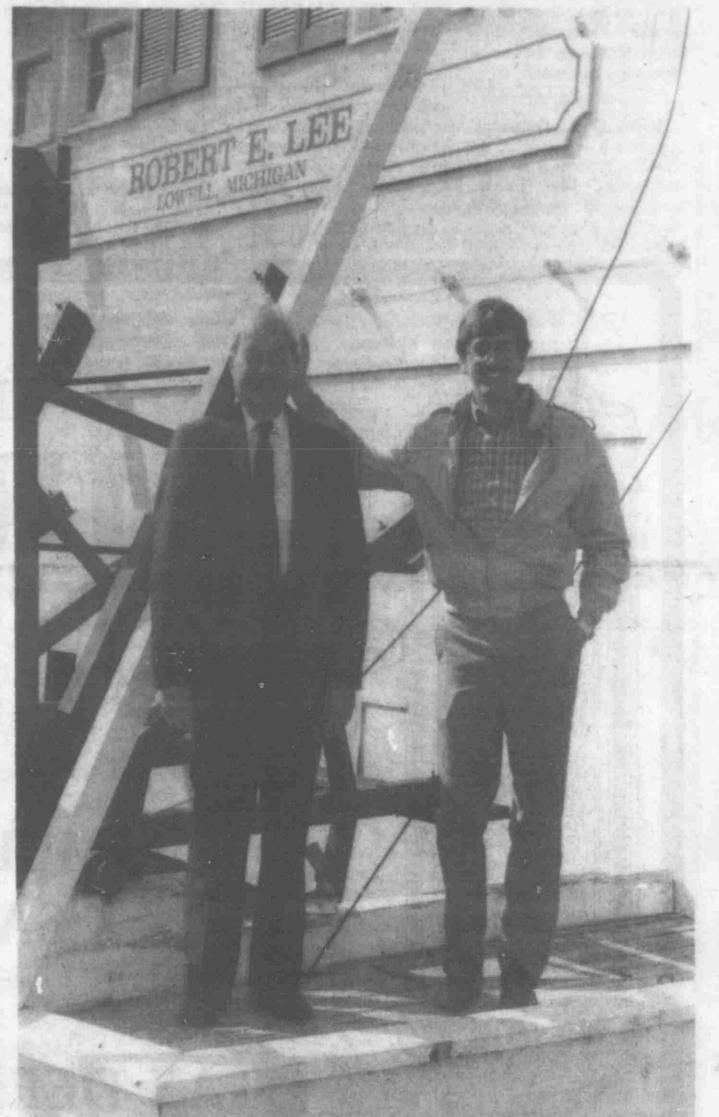

LOWELL SPORT SHOPPE TO OPEN

Lowell's newest business is scheduled to open next week. The Lowell Sport Shoppe will open its doors at 119 East Main St. The building is known to many as the Levee, and was most recently occupied by Sparky's Cafe. The business will be operated by George and Ruth Summerfield who have moved here from Tekonsha, Michigan. George is a cousin of Lowell Wrestling Coach Gary Rivers, and has fallen in love with our community during his many visits here. The Summerfields operated a similar shop in Tekonsha along with a baseball card trading business with an inventory of over 1 million cards. George and Ruth sold the baseball card business, put their home and store building up for sale, and moved their sporting goods inventory to Lowell. The store will specialize in team sports equipment, uniforms, trophies, athletic shoes and custom lettering. We would like to be among the first to welcome the Summerfields to the community.

Along Main Street Chamber & Communiy Ed. to sponsor "Person of the Year"

Get hopping on all those community- minded projects you've been meaning to do all year. The Lowell Chamber of Commerce and Lowell Community Education program are sponsoring their first annual "Person of the Year" banquet. The event will be held aboard the Lowell Showboat on Friday, June 27. The evening's festivities will be highlighted by honoring a person from our community for his or her efforts in making Lowell a better place to live.

The party will begin with cocktails at 6:00 p.m. Set-ups will be provided. Alcoholic beverages are on a "bring your own bottle" basis. Dinner will be served at 7:00 p.m. Following the dinner and awards ceremony, there will be dancing aboard the boat and on the stage to the "Big Band" sound of the Bruce Early Orchestra. Early led the Showboat Orchestra for many years, and his eight-piece dance band is in big demand in the Grand Rapids area.

One of the most common disorders of the gastrointestinal tract is irritable bowel syndrome, also known as "spastic colitis," "spastic bowel," or "nervous colitis," Irritable bowel syndrome is diagnosed after other diseases have been ruled out. This syndrome is due to a disordered motility of the bowel. This syndrome appears more commonly in women than men and is usually diagnosed in young adulthood. It is very rarely diagnosed in older adults unless there is concomitant laxative abuse.

The most common symptoms of irritable bowel syndrome are g, bloating, lower abdominal pain, intermittent constipation and diarrhea. Abdominal pain is usually located on the lower left side and is due to spasm of the muscles in the bowel. Occasionally mucous will appear in the stool. Irritable bowel syndrome never causes blood in the stool.

It is felt that irritable bowel syndrome is due to stress and/or dietary factors. Certain "stressful" situations may precipitate an attack of irritable bowel. Another theory is that certain foods trigger painful spasms.

Diagnosis of this syndrome is usually made after ruling out other diseases such as peptic ulcer, ulcerative colitis, lactase deficiency. or Crohn's disease. This is usually done by performing x-rays of the upper and lower GI tracts. Sometimes endoscopy (looking into the stomach or bowel with special endoscopes) will be performed. Therapy of irritable bowel syndrome is directed at the underlying cause. If certain foods seem to bring on painful spasms, obviously. avoidance of those foods is indicated. If stress seems to be the cause, avoiding stressful situations or dealing effectively with stress can lead to relief. This is much easier said than done! Stress management workshops, or bio-feedback may be useful to help us deal with our daily stresses. Regular exercise also seems to combat the effect of stress. Increasing the amount of fiber in the diet will often help. Sometimes psyllium, (Metamucil®), a natural laxative which helps maintain water in the stool, will be prescribed. This will help control diarrhea and constipation. Occasionally. antispasmodic medication or antidepressants will be prescribed.

In conclusion, irritable bowel syndrome is a very common disorder which can be dealt with effectively. It is not cancer nor will it lead to cancer. Dealing with stress and avoiding foods which trigger "attacks" underlie an appropriate management program.

A Kent County 4-H member. Natalie Wieland, of Lowell, was among 90 young people and adults to participate in the 1986 4-H Capitol Experience program March 16-19 in Lansing.

"The purposes of the activity were to acquaint Michigan 4-H'ers with legislative and governmental processes and to encourage them to get involved in public affairs on local, county, regional, state and national levels," explains Margo Smith, 4-H Capitol Experience coordinator.

The youths participated in discussions on state government, met with media representatives who cover the capital, visited the Capitol, including the governor's office and the Senate and House chambers, hosted legislators at a special legislative breakfast and talked with representatives of several state agencies.

The 4-H members spent one morning working on a community service project in the Lansing area, working with political reporters at the Capitol, visiting the State Police training academy in Lansing, distributing food at the Greater Lansing Food Bank or working in the governor's communication section sorting

After returning to Kent County, Wieland will help organize a community action program, using knowledge gained

A Bartinger cozy corner ----by Roger Brown

I guess it was about two years ago that Auto Owners canceled out my auto insurance. They cited an "adverse loss history" as the reason for cancellation. At first I protested about being canceled after only a couple of recent claims. But, when my agent pulled my file and began ticking off the myriad of little claims I had collected over my twelve years with the company, I was forced which provides greater handling Lasso and 11/2 lbs. atrazine per to agree with their decision. Just for good measure, I did get in one more $600 claim between the notification and the actual cancellation. That made me feel a little better about being canceled out.

Well, I found a new insurer, and everything has been just hunkydory since. My rate was even a little lower than with my old company. That is, everything was hunky-dory until about a week

My local agent called me and said, "Roger, I got a notice of cancellation on your car insurance this morning." I said, "What the heck are they cancelling me for?" "Non payment", he said. "But, I paid that bill!" I said. "Not according to them" he said. "Hold on", I said.

I went to the paid receipts, and pulled out a bill for $225.00 that had been paid in February. With a confident flair, I began reading the information from the receipt to my agent. "That's the policy on the Ledger building" he said. "@Ø% $#" I said. After considerable searching, I found the bill for my auto insurance. It was still stapled to the policy, and filed with the other policies, rather than with the accounts payable. They were right, was wrong. The whole misunderstanding went something like this. Back in ebruary I got a notice from Frankenmuth Insurance telling me that my auto insurance would be canceled if not paid by the February 14 due date. My bookkeeper was off work throughout January and most of February. I had been trying to stay on top of such things, with limited success. I went to the accounts payable drawer, pulled out the only bill in there from Frankenmuth, and paid it. As fate would have it, that bill was within just a few dollars of the auto insurance, and the due dates were only two days apart. I simply assumed that I was paying the bill they were asking about, and thought no more of it. That was on a Friday. During the next week, I got a notice of cancellation. Still thinking I had paid the bill, I figured the check and the notice had crossed in the mail, especially since that Monday had been a postal holiday. That was the last I heard from anybody, until last week's call from my agent. After I had discovered my error, I told my agent to get ahold of Frankenmuth, explain the mistake and assure them that a check would be sent out post haste. My agent then quoted to me from some state law that basically says insurance companies cannot reinstate customers they have cancelled. "#%% 会#"", I said.

Now I am with my third auto insurance company in two years. And, to top everything else off, I have a claim for a parking lot mishap pending, that dates back to coverage by my old insurance, and a broken windshield that will be covered by my new company You are probably one of those people who have been with the same company for 20 years, never had a claim, and wonder why insurance rates are so high. Well, it's guys like me (with a little help from my wife) that keep those insurance rates up there. I can't wait 'til my kids start driving.

Consumers Power offers safety advice for kite flyers

tential hazard -- overhead power lines.

"Successful kit flying is no accident," says Alzubaydi. "Each year the majority of kit flying accidents occur when a child tries to untangle a kit from a tree or power line. To avoid an accident and the serious injuries it could bring, children and parents should be aware of these basic safety rules," Alzubaydi says.

1. Fly your kite in an open area, away from electrical lines, trees and busy streets.

2. Never climb utility poles, trees or broadcasting towers in pursuit of a snagged kite. Electric current from power lines can travel through metallic materials or moisture and cause severe burns.

3. Use wood, paper or plastic in making your kite, not wire or metal. Avoid using any materials that could conduct electricity.

4. Don't try to repeat Benjamin Franklin's experiment by flying your kite in the rain. Lightning can cause injury much more severe than the minor shock Franklin experienced.

5. If a kite gets caught on an electric line, call the utility company for help. Never pull on an electric line.

6. If a power line falls, stand

"Remember, look up and stay clear of power lines to be safe," Alzubaydi says. Consumers Power, Michigan's largest utility, serves nearly six million of the State's nine million people in 67 of 68 Lower Peninsula counties.
