Historic Society wants to move the old St. Mary's Church to Fallasburg

By Matt Berry

Owner's of Johnson's Food Basket have made plans to build a retail shopping center next to the grocery store, but they must first either demolish or re-locate the old St. Mary's Church.

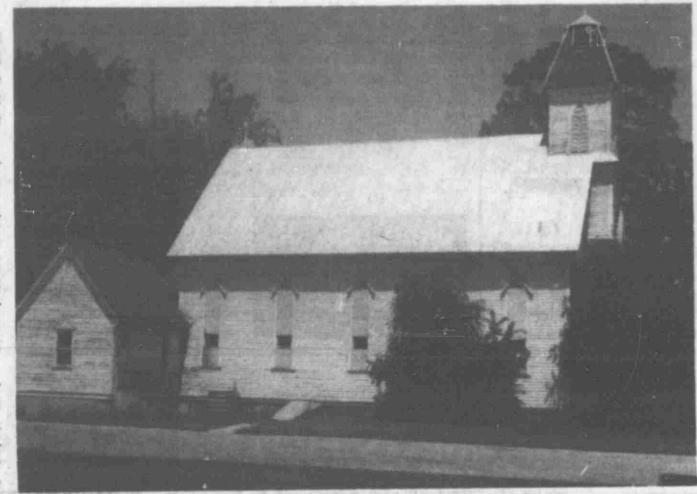

The location of the church, behind the grocery store, is where the future retail center would be. Phil Johnson, co-owner of Johnson's Food Basket and the Church, said that the church will be demolished unless the West Central Michigan Historic Society can conjure enough money to have it relocated to Fallasburg

The Society needs "somewhere between $10,000 and 20,000," to re-locate the church, according to Judy Baird, an officer at the Society. The Society currently hasn't raised any money since Johnson offered the church to them last Saturday.

Johnson explained that he is giving the Society four to six weeks to announce if they will have enough money to move the church. He plans on starting construction at the future mall within four to five months.

"Downtown Lowell is growing very fast, and we want to catch on with it," Johnson said.

The Historic Society has been working for over 25 years to preserve Fallasburg Village. The Vil-

Members of the West-Central Michigan Historic Society are trying to raise between $10-20,000 in order to re-locate the old St. Mary's Church to Fallasburg Village. The church must be moved or demolished, since Johnson's Food Basket have made plans to build a retail center on the land where the church is, the corner of Lincoln Lake and Chatham.

lage is a type of an outdoor Lowell history lesson as it contains buildings that date back to 1837.

Some buildings currently in the Village include the Old Fallasburg Schoolhouse, which was restored and made into a museum, a Stagecoach Inn, the old post office, a general store and blacksmith shoppe.

Also a part of the Village is the original house of John Fallas, built when his family settled here from New York in 1837.

Baird said that she is positive that the Society can raise the needed money, but it will take some help, she added.

"We're looking for contribufrom individuals or groups," Baird said. "We have a short time to raise the money, but I think we can do it. Most of the families who go to the new St. Mary's Church will hopefully donate some money."

Baird added that the Society is a non-profit organization, which means donations are taxdeductible.

Work progresses on Middle School

By Matt Berry

A 1.9 millage increase passed last October has enabled the Lowell School District to begin construction on two school roofs this summer.

Grand Rapids based Vanderbroek Roofing Inc. started replacing the middle school roof Wednesday, June 11, and they will begin working on Alto Elementary's roof in August. The entire middle school roof is being replaced, while Alto's roof is to be repaired above the boiler room and kitchen only.

Construction at the middle school is scheduled to be completed by August 15. Alto's roof will be done "a couple of days after we finish the middle school roof," said an official at Vanderbroek.

"The middle school was very much in need of a new roof," said Lowell Superintendent Fritz Esch. "Leaking was a big problem on the current roof. Water was entering the building, through the roof, at several locations.

The middle school's new roof will be a trocal roof, a polyvinyl chloride white roof which will be 60 mills thick. The current roof is a build-up of three layers

The advantages of the new roof will include being stronger and lasting longer. The current cking of the current roof and the roof is 14 years old, and the new first layer of the roof was wet, roof will have a life expectancy inhibiting heat retention.

Another plus of the new roof is that it will be reduced in The insulation will be tapered weight. The future roof will be unballasted, containing gravel or broken stone, which will lower the weight of the roof.

The millage proposal passed on its first attempt last October, and it included an assessment of 1.9 mills for 1986, and 1.4 mills for the following seven years. All revenues will be used strictly for roof repairs and making energy efficient improvements to the district's buildings.

Pinworm infestation is a common disease seen frequently in the office. It is probably the most common parasitic infestation in Pinworm infection occurs only in humans and is usually seen in children between 5 and 10 years old. This intestinal parasite inhabits the large bowel of the affected individual. The fertilized female worm travels down the bowel to the perianal skin and deposits her eggs. The eggs are very small and can usually only be seen under magnification. These eggs become infective in a few hours and may re-infect many be contaminating food, water or from hand to mouth spread. Pinworms are highly contagious and infection rates can reach up to 50%in some groups of school children or day care centers.

Signs and symptoms of infestation can vary. The most common symptom is severe anal itching which usually occurs in the evening or night when the female worm emerges to lay her eggs. Sympotoms may also include restlessness, fatigue, irritability, sleeplessness and vague gastrointestinal symptoms. Many children will Diagnosis is made through the use of a simple test -- "The Scotch Tape Test." Scotch tape is placed, sticky side, to the perianal area and then removed and applied to a slide early in the morning before bathing. Examination under a microscope will reveal the presence of eggs in a positive test. The test is usually done on 3

Treatment is also quite simple. Usually a one dose tablet is given which clears the infestation. Often the entire household will be treated. Prevention is also important. Frequent washing of the hands and good hygiene practices can help prevent the spread of this disease. Alertness to the symptoms of excessive perianal itching, irritability, and sleeplessness will help combat the spread of the infestation that may affect as many as one in five school places on earth for terrorists these days may well be Austria. 6/29/86

One of the most dangerous

Vienna Airport in Austria places in the world.

Even tighter security measures as those that effectively thwarted a recent terrorist attack have been adopted at Vienna airport. More members of anti-terror units have been assigned to flight patrol as of January, 1986. Special anti-terror units protect all najor cities in Austria. Austria also participates actively in international cooperation on terror prevention

Thanks to beefed-up security only 3 terror attacks occurred in Austria last year, against 31 in West Germany Another reason for this might be Austria's virtually tensionfree climate which is hardly a breeding ground for internal terrorism as experienced in many other countries. By the way. Austria is the only European country where overall crime figures are in a steady decline.

cozy corner

by Roger Brown

Help! I'm floundering in the air waves, and I'm about to go Kevin Matthews and Rick Rumble packed up the Morning Cafe and left for St. Louis, Missouri. I could always count on those two to get a grin on my face and my motor running each workday from 6:00 'til 10:00 a.m. Now I find myself sleeping in, and forcing myself off to work just because I can't find anything decent to listen to on the radio. Kevin's departure may be the beginning of the end for the Ledger if I can't figure out a way to get back into the swing of things.

I tried Kevin's replacements for about a week. I was so impressed by their program that I've forgotten their names, I've almost forgotten the call letters of Kev's old station. Since my departure from WLAV, I've been spinning the dial in search of some a.m. inspiration, but finding only frustration.

Everybody is always touting Andy Rent and Dennis Sutton on WCUZ, so I turned the dial their way for about a week. Sorry, but their brand of humor just didn't appeal to me, and their country western play list turned me off. The one thing I will credit WCUZ with is the fact they are the only station I've found that plays any Jimmy Buffett material. That didn't hold too much water with me though, because I've got all of Buffett's tapes and already know most of his music by heart. Besides, I got tired of listening to six songs about trucks, just to hear one Jimmy Buffett tune.

So. I was off to the WKLO "Zoo". I found it aptly titled, and gave those monkeys only a morning or two of my attention. Then I tried WJFM, the station that has a gimmick of a morning wake-up call. The D.J.'s idea of entertainment here is to call someone, at the request of a listener, and play a prank on them. I listened for a couple of mornings, and wasn't too impressed. When the D.J. called a guy, woke him from a sound sleep, and told him his store had burned down in the night, I decided I had heard enough.

I've tried others, including Gary Bazner at WOOD. I liked Baz as a TV weatherman, but I just can't get into his morning show. He's just a little too smooth, and his music just a little too mellow. I find myself nodding off, rather than gearing up. I drink strong black coffee to compensate, but I can only hold so much.

I've tried classical music stations, religious stations, all news stations, etc. You name it, and I've likely had it tuned in during the last month or so. Now my clock radio is switched over to the buzzer, the radios in the bathroom, car and here at the shop are all tuned in to "OFF" and I'm slipping further and further into a depressed mental state. I haven't been this low since Thor died.

Does anybody out there have a friend in St. Louis? I'm thinking we could have this friend tape Kevin's show each day, and send us a week's worth every Friday. Who cares if it's a week late, an hour off and the news, weather, sports and traffic all relate to a city several hundred miles from here. At least we'd be hearing from not only Kevin and Rick, but also from Jim Shorts, Bob Science, Jackie Stewart and the rest of the Morning Cafe gang. Speaking of Bob Science, I wonder if he still broadcasts his weather report from Burnips on his Radio Shack CB? Maybe he can patch me through to Kevin's show.

When Hulda died in 1984 her son and his wife asked the Garden Club of Lowell to promote a memorial in Hulda's honor, since she was active in the Garden Lore Club and started the Showboat Garden

Winds uproot tree on Hudson St.

Strong winds uprooted this large tree on Hudson St. near Suffolk Monday evening. The tree fell against power lines, but did not disrupt service to customers. The branches of the large maple blocked the right hand lane of traffic until Lowell Light & Power and City D.P.W. workers could remove the tree Tuesday morning. The tree was located in the back yard of the Arnold Wittenbach residence. Some fencing was knocked down.
