OUR BOYS and GIRLS

More of Lowell's Successful
Young People.

WHAT C. O. LAWRENCE CALLS CHEEK.

Potatoes and Peaches will be "in it" this Year.

NOW THE ATHLETIC BOYS MADE IT.

The Death of Dr. Edwin F.
Sayles.

THE MARRIAGE OF MR. A. P. HUNTER.

F. HOMER HOSFORD was brainy when a boy. When attending the Lowell school he always had his lessons perfect, and had lots of spare time to devote to something else. He early developed a capacity for literary work, and with no other preparation than he secured at the village school, has become a prodigy in the field of letters. From a reporter and correspondent of obscure papers, he has advanced step by step to wider fields, upon metropolitan journals, as Washington correspondent, and has become a power in the political work of the state committee of Michigan, and tally clerk of the House of Representatives at Washington, where he wields a potential influence in political circles.

His home is in Detroit, but his field of labor embraces the whole of the United States. His motto is Excelsior, and with his perseverance and zeal, it is useless to limit the bounds of his achievements.

CHARLES BOYCE

is a Lowell boy and received his education in our public school, but he early became identified with the Bell Telephone company, and became so proficient in the business, that he received frequent promotions, and now is the electrician and general superintendent of construction of all the telephone lines in the state. The position is one of great responsibility, and he brings to it a clear head, a mechanical genius and a thorough knowledge of the business. His residence is in Detroit, but his duties keep him on the move to all parts of the State.

FRANK W. HINE

was born in Lowell, graduated at the village school read law in Lowell and graduated at the Michigan University in the law class of 1881.

He went to Grand Rapids and became a partner with the late Judge Holmes, and was afterward Register of Probate for Kent county for some years. Is now a successful lawyer at Grand Rapids, unmarried, and the same genial, fun-loving fellow that he has always been.

FRANK ECKER

is a Lowellite by birth, education and residence. His planing mill is one of the substantial enterprises of the town and Frank's smiling countenance can generally be seen about the mill.
He gives steady employment to several men, and is generally recognized as one of our successful and respected business men with a comfortable home, a good business, an accomplished wife and lots of fancy chickens. What hinders his being contented and happy?

WILL M. CHAPMAN.

To no other citizen does the people of Lowell owe more of a debt of gratitude than to Will M. Chapman.

He has grown up and been the school mate of our oldest boys and girls, who were stimulated by his studiousness, and influenced by his beneficent example. As principal for years in the Lowell schools, he was ever the friend, counselor and guide of his pupils, by precept and example moulding the young idea in honor, truth and sobriety.
He fostered the budding aspirations, directed the moral and mental growth and laid the superstructure of intelligence and manhood, upon which so many have so permanently builded.
When he looks over the little army that he has so amply equipped to march forth into the world and to do life's earnest battles, he cannot but feel proud of the result of his labors.

ENGENE PARISH

grew from boyhood to man's estate in our village and is well remembered by all the early residents. Always energetic, always trustworthy and reliable with an active brain for capital, he has carved out his own fortune. With one of Lowell's estimable girls for a wife, he has made himself a home, reared a nice family and is now a leading merchant in Ithaca, Mich.

FRED R. HINE

was reared in Lowell and graduated at our public school. As a boy he was active and brainy, and as a man he fulfills the promises of his early years. For many years he was one of Lowell's prosperous business men but the tide of emigration carried him westward and he is now cashier of a National bank at Kinsley, Kan. His wife was a Lowell girl and they have two children, "chips of the old block" to enliven their happy home.

BELLE MALCOLM

has grown from the toddling child of 30 years ago, to womanhood. All her early years were spent in Lowell, where she attended the village school as one of its brightest pupils, and graduated with full honors. Carl Watherwax one of Lowell's reliable young men, carried her away to Stanton and afterward to Aberdeen, Washington where they still reside.

She retains her brightness and cheerfulness, is a happy wife, a model housekeeper, a fond mother and an ornament of society. One bright 5-year-old boy is a conspicuous element of the household, and makes home the centre of attraction.

To our girls the field of usefulness sometimes seems circumscribed, but as wives and mothers, they exert an influence more potent than they dream.

ONE ON LAWRENCE.

"Talking about cheek," said Charley Lawrence the other day, "we had an exhibition here once that took the whole bakery. There was a tough looking family in from the country, and they came in with a big market basket and asked permission to eat their lunch at my table. My shop was full of customers and I was almost ashamed to have them around, but told them to use the table, and they squared themselves and set to work. Gracious, what a mess they made. They threw chicken bones on the floor, scattered crumbs everywhere, walked over to the water tank gnawing a bone on the way and slobbering the glass all over, and finally walked out without even a "thank you," leaving me the mess to clean up, and not buying a cent's worth. If they should come again, I would show them the door so quick it would make their heads spin."

ATHLETIC ENTERTAINMENT.

The entertainment given by the athletic club Monday evening was well attended, the gross receipts being $42. The various acts seemed to please the audience if one may judge from the applause accorded. The boys have undoubtedly made much improvement since their first performance, and the strong frames they are building up will be of service to them in after life. Music was furnished by Worden's orchestra and it was late when the long program was finished.

CROP PROSPECTS.

Apples are now selling for $7 per barrel at Detroit. Specks, rottenness, small size, it makes no difference so long as they are apples. Potatoes too are on the boom: The recent cold snap which swept the country from one end to the other, cut the growing potato crop of the South to the ground. Re-planting became necessary in many sections so the advent of the new potato is not looked for soon.
Fortunate indeed is the man who has any of the old supply on hand. Potatoes and diamonds are on a par.
Every one is holding onto their stocks with a strong grip, and unless something happens soon the tubers will fetch 75 cents per bushel in the city markets. The location of a few large lots is known that are being held for emergency although they are not ample enough to "cut any signify" in case of a potato famine. It is understood now that the Southern crop is not to effect the Northern market whatever as the crop will be late and its volume small. All this applies to peaches as well as potatoes the same freezes that cooked southern potatoes did the same by the fruit crop. The Lowell man with a bearing peach orchard will be "in it" this year. Farmer friends, let up a little on wheat and raise more potatoes and peaches.
The time to begin is NOW.

MARRIAGE.

Our esteemed citizen, Mr. A. P.
Hunter, was married at Greenville, on Wednesday, April 25, by the Rev.
Mr. Hills, to Mrs. M. A. Covey, daughter of Harvey Gibson, an old and well known resident of West Campbell. Mr. and Mrs. Hunter are spending a few days at Detroit, and will be at home to their friends after May first. The LEDGER extends congratulations.

DR. EDWIN F. SAYLES

died in this village, Monday, April 23, after an illness of eight weeks, of paralysis. During that time he was almost entirely helpless and a great sufferer.

The deceased was born in Canada, July 18, 1836. When nine years of age he came to Michigan with his parents and settled on the farm three miles east of this village. He taught school from the age of 18 until 45 old, when he took up the study of medicine at a college in Indianapolis, and graduated three years later. He began practice in Sheridan where he lived for two years, then removed to Freeport where he has since resided.
The deceased had been married three times. He married his first wife, Delia Rice, in 1868. Three children by this marriage survive him. About eight years ago he married Mrs. Eliza Chamberlin.

Dr. Sayles was the oldest of fifteen children and the first to be taken away.
His father died just seven months before. His widowed mother and a sis-

ELDER MOORS CANNED.

At a combined meeting of the Grand Army and Relief Corps Wednesday evening, Rev. A. P. Moors was presented by S. P. Hicks, in behalf of the two organizations, with a gold headed cane. The spokesman informed Mr. Moors that he had been tried and found guilty of doing his level best to advance the interests of the societies, and it had been unanimously agreed that he deserved canning. The elder made a happy response and a very pleasant evening was enjoyed by the participants.

A POSTMASTER WHO TUMBLED.

Profited by the Fate of Those Who Had Gone Before.

It was in a far West village of about 500 people and the postmaster was so bland and courteous when the mail came in that I felt it my duty to give him a few words of praise.

"I hev to do it—hev to do it," he whispered in reply. "Come to the door with me. D'ye see them three graves over thar?"

"Yes."

"Them's my predecessors in office—three of 'em!"

"Postmasters who have died, eh?"

"Postmasters who hev been killed, sir—wiped out right here because they didn't tumble to human nature around a postoffice!"

"You must have a special brand of human nature in this town?" I queried.

"Exactly sir. Mabby you noticed old Bill Wheeler? He's never got a letter in all his life and probably never will, but when he asks for mail I go over the whole grist and do it mighty careful, too. If I jest said: 'Nuthin fur you, Bill,' he'd out with his gun and blaze away. Did ye take notice of that one-eyed feller, Jim Hastings? Of course I know thar ain't no letter fur him, but I hev to run 'em over and inquire about his health and keep him good-natured. He shot the first postmaster here. Paps you observed the little woman with a bundle under her arm—John Dawson's wife? Her husband shot the second postmaster because he wouldn't open the office Sunday afternoon."

"And what was the third one shot for?"

"Got too high-toned. Uncle Tom Wallace tried to git him out of bed at midnight to see if there was a letter for him, but he bucked. Uncle Tom kinder hated to shoot, but felt that he order do it fur an example."

"And do you get up nights?"

"I don't hev to. I leave the mail out here in a basket, keep a light burnin' and the door open, and if anyone wants to paw the grist over they are at liberty to do it. It's the same week days and Sundays and I guess the folks and the community is purty well satisfied with the office and the way things is runnin. Leastwise I haven't been shot at in the four months I have had the place, and I take that as a good sign."

TOD "MARRA" FOR HIM.

"I want some consecrated lye," he slowly announced as he entered the drug store.

"You mean concentrated lye?" suggested the druggist, as he repressed a smile.

"Well, maybe I do. It does n' meg any difference. It's what I canphor, any way. What does it sulphor?"

"A quarter a can."

"Then you can give me a can."

"I never cinnamon who thought himself so witty as you do," said the druggist, in a gingerly manner, feeling called upon to do a little punning himself.

"Well, that's not bad, either," laughed the customer, with a sly, sly, sly glance. "I ammonia novice at the business, though I've soda good many puns that other punsters got the credit of. However, I don't care a coppers faras I am concerned, though they ought to be handled without cloves till they wouldn't know what was the madder with them. Perhaps I shouldn't myrrh myrrh. We have had a pleasant time, and I shall caraway."

It was too much for the druggist. He collapsed.

It supplies all the egg shell and flesh forming material necessary, and it stimulates nature to convert this material into eggs. Monday, April 23, was the sixth birthday of Artie Sherman. He entertained about ten of his playmates upon their beautiful lawn with fun such as boys only know how to make until their genial hostess interrupted their play by an invitation to the dining room where a table had been bountifully spread with all the dainties that boys after a hard run always enjoy. Judging from the animated faces that gathered around the table they did ample justice to the goodies provided for them, and returned to their homes happy after the days spent. Contributed.
