Mrs. Starbard of Lowell Seeks Damages for Her Hisband's

A suit for $20,000 damages was

The bill of complaint in the case bard, administratrix of the estate of her husband, Melvine Starbard, who was killed on the track near Lowell by a D., G. H. & M. train;

The bill states that Melvin Starbard lived in Lowell township and was on July 18, 1896, a young, able bodied man, with a wife and six children. He was a farm laborer, a d in going to and from his work on the farm of Sylvanus Hull he walked on the railway company's track. While on his way to work after dinner, Starbard was struck and killed by a train. The bill states the engineer knew Starbard was unconscious that the train was approaching him, but did not acken speed or try to stop the train. agement of the locomotive by its servant, the engineer.

It is stated that the train was due to have passed the place where the toward none and charity for all." accident occurred an hour before it did and that no train was due there at that time. It is claimed Starbard was on the track with the knowledge and consent of the defendant company, inasmuch as he was in the habit of walking there and had never been forbidden,...[Grand Rapids Herald.

If you will dig below the surface you will find that while the great mass of religious assumptions and ab surdities taught in the name of religion are not fit to be taught in schools to innocent children or to aduits or taught anywhere on tais planet in 1898, you will also discover certain 'principles" well called "religious" which may well be taught anywhere, in schools, in lanes or crowded streets, principles self-evident in their simple ruthfulfulness and as easily demontrated as a problem in mathematics

Many such will occur to you if you will put on our thinking cap when you cogitate upon religious afficies Just look at old Micha, and I quote at random: "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly and to love mercy and to waik a very with Best Papers the Best Mediums.

There is much good solid sense for every advertiser in the following garagraph from a thoughtful eastern advertiser: The daily paper is by far the safest and most certain method of reaching the public. It should not be difficult for any intelligent man who has lived for any time in a com to know just what papers will serve him as advertising me diums. It isn't at all necessary to examine the books in the newspaper's counting room or to get their affidavits of circulation. A paper that you read yourself and that your neighbors read and respect and that you know to be widely read and respected, you can safely rely on as a satisfactory mo-dium for reaching people of your own kind.

The thin, weak structure just burst like a cannon rocket. There was little fire to speak of. Up to the time of the explosion only an occasional faint flare was seen through the windows of the third story. It came as unexpected as a flash of lightning from a clear sky. The fire boys and citizens were working side by side, close up to the building, and no one had given the first thought of danger, though everyone knew the nature of the structure. The most remarkable feature of the disater is the proportion of death tell size of ruins. Strange to say, there was not a single individual in building when the fatal explosic.

Lewis and Frank Nehring, of Ossinck, and while returning in the everning were struck by an express train which was an hour late and was running faster than usual. Frank was driving and Lewis laid down on some straw in the rear end of the sleigh box. The train cut the box in two just back of the seat, killing Frank instantly, while Lewis was thrown 20 feet and was uninjured. One of the horses was tossed to one side instantly killed and the other was dragged 300 yards and literally cut to pieces.
