E. R. COLLAR. A CONTRACTOR OF THE PROPERTY O

From Our Point of View

"PLAYING with Fire" was the topic of a very impressive sermon by Rev. Charles Nease last Sunday evening; and his hearers must have been convinced of the folly of forming base habits, indulging in evil practices and violating the laws of God and man, as they were shown how the young man who "Can drink or can let it alone" becomes the older one who can drink and can nor let it alone, and those who play with fire finally become the PLAYTHINGS of fire. A somewhat similar line of thought was worked out by Rev. G. L. Sprague on the same time controverted the old-time idea of deathbed repentance as a "fire escape." The writer has long believed that much missing the for meanness, beastiality and crime. Here, in this life, we see no reason to expect it in the next. Rather, should men be taught to forsake their sins because the consequences are UNAVOIDABLE, than to encourage them to continue in their evil ways by the promise of an effective cure-all as they step from the gallows into eternity. Forguerness are man sow, that shall he reap!" and the man or woman who "plays with fire" and sows thorns and thistless all through this life, will reap more pricks, than figs in the qext. This may be into the propertion of the properties of the properties man sow, that shall he reap;" and the man or woman who "plays with fire" and sows thorns and thistles all through this life, will reap more pricks than figs in the next. This may be very poor orthodoxy; but it's a mighty GOOD doctrine to five and die by.

The National Editorial association has at last discovered that there is a print paper trust, and that the tariff on wood pulp is so much protection pap for the robber trust and ought to wiped out. Several years ago when the writer introduced a resolution at the State meeting to the same effect, some of the faithful called the move "politics." We suppose this one will be labelled "religion." Well, men will stand being skinned some for party's sake; but when it comes to losing the whole hide, that's different. Glad the boys can see through grindstone, if it did take a long time to find the hole.
