

A pocket book with money in it is a handy article—

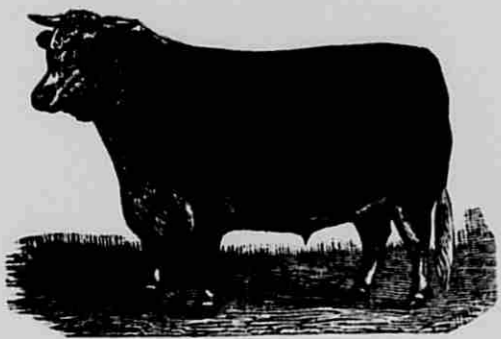

Good to have and fine to keep. A bank book which shows that you have a comfortable sum in the bank is far better than the pocket book with money in it. The bank book is handier, safer and far more convenient.

This bank offers every facility for a bank account. Small accounts are as welcome as large ones and receive the same careful attention. A small business requires a bank account just as well as a large business. A bank account is advantageous to all kinds of business.

FINE NEW STAND BARN.

E. D. McQueen's New Building Nearly Ready for Patrons.

Dr. E. D. McQueen's new "stand barn" is nearly completed and is already filling a long felt want. Located in the flat iron block opposite the heavy barn, it extends from street to street, 100 by 55 feet.

It is a handsome building of cement blocks, with window and door frames painted green; and will accommodate thirty rigs, horses and vehicles.

There are no posts to interfere and the big entrance door will admit a moving van or a load of hay. There will be a watering trough and mangers throughout the barn, where farmers can use their own feed.

The building is well lighted and will be a comfortable tie up for horses in Summer and Winter.

The charge for accommodating rigs will be 10c; and if the patronage is what the proprietor expects, other public conveniences will be installed.

BASE BALL.

The Lowell Base Ball team was organized Wednesday evening, July 11th, at a meeting in Lawyer Wiecek's office. R. VanDyke was elected manager and Earl Thomas, active manager, a more complete organization to be effected later. At the citizens meeting last Friday evening, a committee composed of Frank McMahon, N. Henry and M. Ruben, was appointed to solicit funds for the base ball team, and the money has been raised for suits and other expenses. The field next to the apple dryer, near the P. M. depot, has been rented and is being prepared for use after Aug. 1st. The team is as follows:—Captain, B. C. Wiecek; Catchers, Benson and Lake; Pitchers, Collar and Long; First, Wiecek; Second, McCarty; Third, Lully, Short Stop, Mills; Fielders, F. McMahon, Benson, Hunt, Gilbert, Morgan.

The suits for the base ball team have been ordered, consisting of shirt, pants, cap and socks. The shirts are to bear "Lowell L. C." on their fronts, for the Lowell Lumber company, which pays half of the suit bill.

A good equipment is being procured and games will be arranged with neighboring teams. It is proposed to have a team of purely local players; and the property and management will be in charge of R. VanDyke and Earl Thomas.

"AFTER MANY YEARS."

T. T. vonKamecke, representing the National Paperette Co. of Springfield, Mass., was in town last Friday, for the first time since 30 years ago, when he left here a lad of 13. He said he would be remembered by his former playmates as Tom Hinds, the latter being the name of his step-father. Mr. vonKamecke, whose hair is now streaked with gray, pointed out old landmarks, commented upon those that were missing, and upon the many changes wrought during the years of his absence. Like all of us whose hearts are right, he has an affectionate remembrance of the old times, places and faces; and we presume has a hope that he is not entirely forgotten by the old boys and girls.

HOOVER PIONEER PICNIC.

The Executive Committee of the Hoover Pioneer society has fixed on Thursday, July 26th 1906, for their 14th Annual Picnic dinner, to be held at the residence and yard of Mrs. Magdalena Ryder, on Monroe Street East side. All members of the society are expected to be present, as many of them, judging from last year's deaths, will not have the privilege of attending many more reunions.

DUG UP THREE INDIANS.

Sewer Diggers Unearth Remains of Red Men on Flat River Bank.

The remains of a young Indian warrior were unearthed by sewer diggers while at work by the transforming station in this village Monday. The skull was somewhat broken but the teeth were intact and the wisdom teeth only half developed showed it to be the body of a young person. An iron tomahawk with traces of the handle still in the socket and two well preserved copper kettles containing corn and beans and a considerable quantity of well preserved water melon seeds were found with the bones.

John S. Hooper, pioneer and Indian Interpreter, believes the body was buried not later than 1838.

Deputy Sheriff Jacobl viewed the remains and decided an inquest was not necessary. He suggested, however, that the relics be given to the Kent museum for preservation.

Later, two smaller skulls and other bones were found, perhaps those of a squaw and child. The entire find which includes silver brooches, bracelet, Indian hair and pieces of blankets is now on exhibition at Simpson's store.

Fighting For Supremacy. A telegram received in Panama from San Salvador says that Honduras has declared war against Guatemala.

The revolutionists in that country have been attacking and robbing the country with more or less success.

The trouble between Salvador and Guatemala is an outcome of the progress of the revolutionists in their efforts to drive out Cabrera.

While no actual declaration of war has been made between these two countries, a state of war practically exists. All Guatemalan citizens between 18 and 50 years old have been called upon to join the ranks, and martial law has been declared.

The statement has been made that Salvadoran regulars are fighting with the revolutionists, but President Escobar of Salvador declared that his government was observing strict neutrality and had nothing to do with the revolution in Guatemala.

The revolutionists appear so far to have had the best of it. They have captured and held several towns, and as the movement progresses and succeeds their ranks are constantly being strengthened.

sprang up between Mr. Phelps and his wife. The breach gradually widened, and Mr. Phelps brought suit for divorce, naming Hart McKee as co-respondent.

Following the return of Mrs. Phelps to this country, her two little children were forcibly taken from the Waldorf Astoria by Mr. Phelps and hurried away to Denver, where he had resided for some time.

Remarkable divorces, remarriages, breaches of promise, elopements and chorus girls have littered before ordinary features of their lives. They seem to have become rich so suddenly that they have lost their heads.

Years before Harry Thaw ever heard of Evelyn Nesbit or Stanford White he was eccentric to the verge of craziness.

At the Waldorf one morning Mr. Peacock was discovered scribbling on a sheet of paper in the dining-room.

Married Mother's Maid. John Alston Moorhead is one of the latest. He was a heavy man on the Yale football team and also played in the crew.

Charles Clarke, of San Jose, Cal., married Miss Elizabeth Stocking of Atlanta, Ga. (Ohio) as he was known.

At any rate, he sued for divorce and told that he had endeavored to maintain the two by doing the family cooking in a chafin-dish in their little room over in Allegheny.

Willis George Lander Carnegie has figured somewhat among the Pittsburg prodigals, his brother Coleman, or "Coke," also a high roller, has decided to "straighten up."

It is a strange fact that chorus girls and actresses seem to appeal to the Pittsburg millionaire and his friends.

Another Pittsburg millionaire who had a varied and noteworthy career was James King Clarke, known to his friends as "Big Boy."

Young Clarke inherited a part of the millions of his father, Charles J. Clarke, of Pittsburg. He was in the habit of spending a part of his time in Washington, and it was there that he met Miss Esther Bartlett.

As related by Clarke in the suit for divorce which began a year after her arrival in this city he left his bride in his room with Mr. Kellogg while he went downstairs to look after some baggage.

His father, E. Sellers McKee, a multi-millionaire glass manufacturer of Pittsburg, supplied him with practically limitless funds, with which the young man proceeded to cut a wide swath.

Mr. Clarke afterwards sued for and obtained a divorce, after which she became a high roller in the city of New York.

Mr. Alexander Howland Peacock is another Smoky City candidate for fame. Mr. Peacock is worth many millions of dollars.

Stiff Fight Based On the Hope That Law Is Invalid.

The railroads do not feel that they are by any means whipped yet, and they are not prepared to give up the struggle in a campaign looking to final victory in the war started by the president.

This hope is based upon the clause giving the rate-making power into the hands of the interstate commerce commission under circumstances which many of the railroads' attorneys regard as a direct delegation of legislative power.

During the course of business in Pittsburg Andrew Carnegie transformed himself from a poor man into a millionaire.

Contemporaneously with the Thaw murder Mrs. Scott Hartje, the wife of Augustus Hartje, Pittsburg millionaire paper manufacturer, has begun to fight against her husband for divorce.

Selling Snow In Italy.

Snow is sold in the north of Sicily, and it fetches about a cent a pound. It is a government monopoly, and the Prince of Palermo derives the greater part of his income from it. The snow is gathered on the mountains in felt-covered baskets, and is sold in the cities for reinvigorating purposes.

A Mixed Order.

Tom and Polly had been occupying the den in unbroken silence for a little time. Then Polly spoke with the utmost cordiality.

"The violets were perfectly lovely, Tommy, darling."

"They were beauties," said Tom. "You must have the best there are, Polly."

"That's sweet of you, Tommy," remarked Polly, tenderly. "And it's nice to think you don't send flowers to any other girl."

"I've got the one girl," said Tom, with great content in his voice.

"It's nice to think you don't send flowers to any other girl," persisted Polly.

"Why should I?" asked Tom, lazily, "when the girl I send them to can use them up faster than any girl I ever knew?"

"But it's nice to think," persisted Polly, softly, "that not another girl in all the world is getting violets—or roses, perhaps. Not from you."

Tom removed his cigar from his mouth and shot one keen glance at Polly. Then he looked lazily serene once more and sat still. Polly spoke again.

"Do you think I eat too much beef, Tommy, nowadays?"

"How often do you eat beef, Polly?" asked Tom.

"Never oftener than once a day, and just one helping then. And not always once a day."

"Then that's not enough," said Tom, promptly. "That accounts for your pale cheeks."

"I thought you said they were lovely, peaches-and-creamy and too sweet for anything," said Polly, stentily.

"Well, if you don't eat more beef, it's pure paleness," said Tom, decisively. "Now, Polly, promise me you'll not only get a fine time at least, and every night when they lie in it.

"It makes people red and positively purple," said Polly. "If they eat too much of it. That was what I was afraid of—that my cheeks were getting an awful purplish red. I was afraid people were beginning to notice it, that you'd notice it. And I didn't like that. Nobody would, you know."

"Well, you have a long way ahead of you," said Tom, "before you need be afraid of getting purplish red. Purplish red!"

Tom rolled in his chair with an attack of hearty laughter.

Suddenly Polly began to laugh, too. At first she seemed to be laughing with Tom, but after a minute or two that you're a comedian sat slowly up and surveyed her in great doubt. Was it possible she was laughing at him instead of with him?

"The doubt grew to a certainty as Polly began to mop her eyes helplessly and throw a succession of wicked glances at him.

"I was kidding—of the other girl," she gasped when Tom's repeated commands brought a certain sort of speech out of her. "The girl who got the roses, Tommy; the girl who got the roses!"

Tom dropped heavily into a chair. "Oh! that girl! Why, Polly, she was just a girl!" he stammered, incontinent surrender. "An ordinary girl—cousin of Jimmy Reynolds. A fellow has to be decent."

"Deceit," gasped Polly, "she's feeling funny. So girl likes to be told that she's got pink eyes. Oh! yes, I got the violets and a card with this on it—'These girls their gorgeous color from your cheeks and lips and warm, great heart!'"

"No!" thundered Tom.

"Yes," declared Polly. "And it hasn't been a bit cold yet, and you ever heard of a purple heart! And I want to know what really and truly went on the other card."

"The card that Jimmy Reynolds's cousin got," admitted Tom, "read as follows: 'I kiss these blossoms, one by one, for your dear eyes, whose color outshines them as the sun the stars.' And if you'll tell me how I'm ever going to put it about those flowers."

"Kiss 'em!" said Polly, brutally. —Illustrated Bits.
