WAS A ROUSING RALLY

Republicans Had a Big Meeting at Lowell Tuesday Night.

The Republicans rally at the opera house Tuesday evening was, of course, a successful jollying bee, enough Democrats joining in the big crowd to make it unanimous. One lady said it wasn't her night to toot; but it was a good natured gathering and a jolly lot of speakers who talked most everything but party politics, with the exception of Andy Fyfe who went way back to the Civil war and waved the bloody shirt at the party he belonged to till he despaired of getting office in it and went to better pickling.

Of course we missed the band music—that last good Lowell band that was sold out, you know, for $637, but the girls and boys, God bless 'em, got out their tooters and did their level best to fill the gap.

The "devil wagons" were a half hour late but the candidates got the glad hand when they did arrive; and the benzine buggies were busy from that time till 7:30 giving the school youngsters merry whirls about town.

Promptly on time, the Governor's party filled the stage before a house crowded to the doors and Chairman S. P. Hicks introduced the following speakers:

E. A. Crozier, county treasurer and candidate for reelection.

Ralph Mosher, candidate for county clerk.

Allen M. Freeland, candidate for school commissioner.

Andrew Fyfe, state senator, sixteenth district and candidate for reelection.

Huntley Russell, state senator seventeenth district, and candidate for reelection.

Dennis Murray, candidate for representative first district.

Collin P. Campbell, candidate for representative third district.

Cassius B. Towner, representative second district and candidate for reelection.

Theodore O. Williams, candidate for county surveyor.

Governor Fred M. Warner, candidate to succeed himself.

William Alden Smith, twelve years in Congress, candidate for reelection and incidentally out for the United States senatorship to succeed R. A. Alger.

Frank J. Cook, chairman of the Kent county Republican committee.

The list looks formidable but most of the speakers were very brief. Fyfe, Warner and Smith making the principal addresses.

The Governor had to tell his two pet stories, one about the fellow who told him he was right about not being a speaker and the other about Ringling Bros. show; but he got down to brass tacks on state affairs and showed that while the state tax levy is greater than ten years ago, the multiplying factories are bearing the increased burden and individual taxes are even lighter than then. McCarty had given the Governor an order for cheese, and he was so tickled with the speech that he doubled the order when show was out.

Of course William Alden made a good speech; he always does. He told how a man on an ocean steamer sent the cold chills up the Congressman's spinal column by asking him if he was to leave America what country he would choose for a home? No other country for William Alden, not while the offices hold out, any way. He did a little in the stand-pat line, saying that he would rather give up his job than to vote to rescind the Dingley tariff, under which the Nation has experienced unprecedented prosperity. Then he sprung the chalk story chestnut on Governor Warner, telling a dream of himself and the Governor dying and applying for admission at the pearly gates, how they were given chalk to write their sins on the eternal black board, and how Warner had to go back "after more chalk."

The meeting wound up with the singing of America in which Messrs. Hicks, Fyfe and Russell did a lung stut, with the Lowell man leading by about 100 pounds pressure to the square inch.

And then the hand shake, in which the candidates shook a race with themselves and all the voters and their wives and sweethearts. Come again fellows.

CORELL-BREADY.

The Methodist parsonage was the scene of a very pretty wedding Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock, the contracting parties being Mr. Horace B. Corell of Hartford, Michigan, and Miss Lucile Bready of Niles. As Mrs. Russell H. Bready played Mendelssohn's wedding march the bride party took their places before an improvised floral altar. Mr. Charles Gardner of Grand Rapids was best man, and Mrs. Marguerite Gardner was matron of honor. The beautiful ring service of the Methodist Episcopal church was read the bride's father, Dr. Bready of Niles officiating, and the bride's brother, Rev. Russell H. Bready of Lowell, assisting. Richard Hugh Bready was ribbon bearer. After the ceremony a wedding supper was served by Misses Lucile Watts, Arlet Lawrence and Annie Lasby, in the dining room. The house decorations were of cut flowers, and the lights shaded for the pink effect. The out of town guests were Charles Gardner and wife, Jno. C. Guilford and wife of Grand Rapids, the groom's mother, Mrs. Corell, of Niles, and Dr. Bready of Niles.

Born—in Rensselaer, Ind., to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kisor, a ten-pound son. Mr. Kisor is a former resident of Lowell and brother of Miss Marion Kisor.

IN MEMORIAM.

BENNIE MURPHY.

The subject of this notice died on Monday, Oct. 5, 1906, at the age of 28 yrs. nine months and twenty nine days, after an illness of one year and seven months, caused by tuberculosis.

He was born and lived in Vergennes all his life, where he had many friends and was loved by all who knew him. He was married March 7, 1905, to Miss Clara Mansor of Owosso and one son was born to them. He leaves to mourn his loss, his wife and son Walter, his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Murphy, three brothers, John, Thomas and Stephen, six sisters, Mrs. E. G. Cody of Hersey, Mrs. John McCabe of Ada, Mrs. R. McGee, Mrs. L. Doran and the Misses Kattie and Essie of Vergennes. During his illness he was very hopeful of getting well, never giving up till the end. The funeral was largely attended at the Parnell Catholic church on Wednesday morning, Rev. Fr. Byrne officiating. The whole community tender their deepest sympathy to the bereaved wife and family, for they too have lost a friend.

With tender words of brief farewell he lightly passed the threshold o'er; but angels heard the parting knell. The waiting requiem—no more. [Communicated.]

THE NEW CREED.

Rev. Amory H. Bradford, president of the American Missionary Society says, "Who shall put into reverent words the spiritual beliefs of our most spiritual men? Who shall write the new creed? It ought to be written. A person pervades and transcends the universe. He may be interpreted in terms of Fatherhood. He is truly revealed in Jesus the Christ. History is the progressive realization of the Divine Ideal for humanity. God's will for man may be found in every human soul and all should dare to read and trust what is written there. Happiness and blessing follow obedience to the law of God and misery its disobedience. Death is but a change in the mode of existence. Sometimes all men by God's unmerited grace as revealed in the Gospel will reach the stature of the fulness of Christ. The kingdom of God will fill the earth. Along some such lines as these the creed of today should be written. But no man can tell the terms in which the creed of tomorrow should be written."

ROYALTY INCOG. IN LONDON

Great Folk from the Continent Delight to Stroll About Her Streets.

London is not the only biggest thing of its kind on earth but it is the town that the royal folk on continental Europe love to visit in a wholly unofficial capacity.

To these royal refugees or truant London is perfectly charming, because of its size, its mixed population and that excellent habit its natives have of attending to their business and letting eccentric persons follow their own sweet will in many things. The Pope himself could stroll along Regent street without ever having a head turned. The result is that in winter the streets of this crowded yet orderly city hold many personages who wear crowns and cordons and high titles when they are at home.

In winter they flock to London because then the British royal family and most of the fashionable folk are away from town, but the streets are full of life, the shops full of desirable things for purchase and the theatres full of excellent plays.

Sometimes Scotland Yard is informed and keeps an eye on the royal visitor who is in disguise, but it only keeps an eye out, it does not tell the newspapers of its knowledge. For instance when Emperor William is going to drop over to London for a few days incognito his whereabouts are revealed to Scotland Yard, which however, takes precautions that in no wise interfere with the absolute freedom of a certain Herr Blank who poses, at a small hotel, as a German councillor sojourning in the British capital on account of his legal interests.

Of late years he has come nearly every winter for a couple of days at least to London. On one occasion he went all through the offices and plant of the London Times without being recognized. He brought a card of recognition from a newspaper editor of great influence in Berlin and in the capacity of a master mechanic he was shown by a courteous member of the pressroom staff all over the premises of the Thunderer.

The police of London can boast that their town entertains unknowingly more royal folk than any other in Europe and without an accident befalling any one of them. Once upon a time a German Princess did sprain her ankle as she came down from the top of a bus, but that is the most serious casualty that ever befell a personage visiting the town unofficially.

There is really some surprise to be felt over this because one and all the holiday making princes ride on the tops of omnibuses and find those two horse arks the most delightful chariots in the world. There is a well known Grand Duchess of North German origin who declares that the top of a London omnibus is the proudest and most comfortable position she ever occupied in all her exalted life.

Several great ladies of her class have rented small flats in London where they can live when they visit the capital incognito, and the Queen of Rumania has even tested the London boarding house. She explains the fancy of her class for making these experiments by saying that many a crowned head confesses to the possession of a very bohemian heart and that London is the only spot on earth where a royal personage can feel at once free and safe. The Duchess of Aosta, before her marriage the Princess Helene of Orleans, grew up in England and speaks English like a native, and she comes every year to London as plain Mrs. John Brown, to put up at a nice, exclusive little hotel and shop. She and one companion, an English woman, stroll about the streets, looking in windows and picking up bargains in a way that would not be tolerated in a princess in Italy.

Balls and Bats in California.

Californians buy more baseballs and bats with which to play the national game than the people of any other state in the Union in proportion to population.

Close to 50,000 balls and 20,000 bats are annually required to supply the demand created by the strong hold which the great American game has secured in this state. Climatic conditions in California impose no limitations on the playing season, and therefore the game is in evidence here during every month of the year, which, of course, furnishes one of the explanations why a greater number of balls and bats are required than in other less favored localities.

Of course the professional leagues use up a great many balls in the course of a season, but they are by no means as important a factor in the trade as are the numerous amateur teams organized among the business houses of a large city like San Francisco. These amateur teams cut a very much greater figure than would be imagined by the casual observer.

It is worthy of note that at the present time there are six baseball teams in San Francisco made up of Japanese, all of whom are well equipped with uniforms and the other appurtenances necessary to the playing of the great American game in the most up-to-date style. The Orientals declare that they like the game very much indeed, and they readily become proficient players. Baseball is making a big hit in Japan, and the sport may become as popular in the realm of the Mikado as it is in America.
