A NEW BAND AT LAST

Instrumentation Has Been Secured and Rehearsals Began Monday Evening.

The demand for a band has been answered at last by an organization which was made last week and held its first rehearsal Monday evening, starting out with the following membership and instrumentation: Cornet and leader, E. S. White; Cornets, Chas. Kopf, E. P. Langdon; Clarinets, Harley Maynard, Howard Maynard, Alvin Hesse, M. E. Shippson; Alto, R. E. Springett, Orra McCall, A. C. Stone; Trombones, Theo. Gusch, Guy Fletcher; Baritone, John Berry; Tuba, C. J. Bradish; Drums, Bruce Crawford, Leon Hammer.

The new band starts out with a good degree of enthusiasm, competent leadership and the assurance of support by our business men. Success and long life to the new Lowell band!

GOOD NEWS FOR CUCUMBER GROWERS.

The Heinz Company has issued circular letters to its Michigan contract pickle growers stating that owing to unfavorable crop conditions, high prices and scarcity of farm labor, the company has decided to pay an increase of 10c per bushel for vat run pickles, over the contract price, making the price 70c and 25c same to rule from the beginning of the season. This means a substantial gain for our cucumber growers.

The "New Process"

The Stove for Summer Cooking

The improved "NEW PROCESS" vapor stove, is the original evaporating stove that has revolutionized the gasoline stove business. For many years it has demonstrated its superiority over every other stove, in safety, simplicity and economy of operation, and has won for itself a place in the hearts and homes of many thousands of women, whose burdens have been made lighter and lives happier by its use. The stove can be instantly started in operation; turn the valve wheel and apply the match; the stove is ready for work. The ovens are constructed the same as gas ranges, which have an enviable reputation for perfect baking. The "NEW PROCESS" solves the problem of economical cooking in all country homes where gas for fuel cannot be obtained, giving the user every advantage, convenience and comfort which the use of gas stoves and other modern appliances afford. We have the sale of these stoves and invite you to call and see them demonstrated.

ALL HAIL PE-RU-NA.
A Case of
STOMACH CATARRH.

Miss Mary O'Brien, 306 Myrtle Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "Peruna cured me in five weeks of catarrh of the stomach, after suffering for four years and doctoring without effect. In common with other grateful ones who have been benefited by your discovery, I say, All hail to Peruna."

Mr. H. J. Henneman, Oakland, Neb., writes: "I waited before writing to you about my sickness, catarrh of the stomach, which I had over a year ago."

"There were people who told me it would not stay cured, but I am sure that I am cured for I do not feel any more ill effects, have a good appetite and am getting fat. So I am, and will say to all I am cured for good."

"I thank you for your kindness, 'Peruna will be our house medicine hereafter.'"

Catarrh of the stomach is also known in common parlance as dyspepsia, gastritis and indigestion. No medicine will be of any permanent benefit except it removes the catarrhal condition.

Gained Strength and Flesh.
Miss Julia Butler, R. R. 4, Appleton, Wis., writes she had catarrh of the stomach, causing loss of sleep and appetite, with frequent severe pains after eating. She took Peruna, her appetite returned, she gained strength, flesh and perfect health.

SERVING THE FOWL
TWO DELICIOUS WAYS OF PREPARING CHICKEN.

When Pressed It Makes as Fine a Dish as Could Be Desired—Steamed with Rice and Mushrooms.

Pressed Chicken.—Cover a young fowl, cut in joints, with boiling water, and let simmer until tender, together with a few slices of carrot, half an onion, and a stalk of celery. Remove the skin and bones, and return them with the broth to the fire, and let simmer until reduced to about one cup; strain and set aside. When the flesh is nearly cold, cut into tiny cubes or chop fine; remove the fat from the broth, reheat, and stir the chicken into it, adding salt and pepper and other seasoning as desired. Decorate a mold with slices of hot-boiled eggs; in this pack the hot chicken, cover with a buttered paper bearing a weight, and let stand until cold and set. Serve, sliced thin, with salad.

Steamed Fowl with Rice and Mushrooms.—Truss a fowl for boiling, rub with the cut side of a lemon and lay on slices of salt pork or bacon and steam with an onion and two or three stalks of celery until tender—three hours or longer. Have ready a mound of boiled rice, seasoned with butter and salt, and dispose the fowl upon this. Arrange mushrooms cooked in the usual manner about the rice. Serve with the strained chicken liquor, thickened with flour and enriched with two egg yolks, beaten with a half cup of cream.

Jellied Chicken.—Boil a chicken and let it get cold in the liquor. Skin the liquor from every particle of fat. Remove all the skin and bones from the chicken and cut the meat into pieces of uniform size. Soak a half-cup of gelatin in a half-cup of cold water. Mix with the chicken a dozen sliced olives cut up small and two dozen canned mushrooms, also cut small. Bring the chicken liquor to a boil, add the soaked gelatin and when this is dissolved take from the fire and set aside to cool. When it begins to "jelly," pour a little of it into a mold wet with cold water, put in a layer of the chicken mixture and when this begins to stiffen add more of the jelly and more of the chicken, continuing in this way until the mold is full. Set in the ice chest for 24 hours. When ready to serve wipe off the outside of the mold with a cloth wrung out in hot water and turn the chicken out upon a chilled platter.

Cleaning Rings.
Rings set with precious stones should always be inspected from time to time to ascertain if the gems are at all loose, especially in the case of claw settings. It is also a good plan to wash them periodically in warm soapsuds, to which a few drops of sal volatile have been added, an exception being made, however, in the case of turquoises, which should not be dampened. In every case the claw settings should be cleaned by means of a wisp of blotting paper rolled into the form of a shading "stump" and worked into the interstices so as to clear them of any accumulation of dirt.

The First-Aid Valise.
The latest production of those purveyors who are always inventing something useful for the motorist is called the first-aid valise. It is a small but very useful pendant of remedies for bruises, cuts and other ills that may, alas! befall the traveler on an automobile.

Sunshine Cake.
Three-quarters cups of butter and two cups sugar creamed, yolks of ten eggs, two and one-half cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one cup milk, one teaspoon of lemon or orange. Bake in steady oven 50 minutes and frost with yellow frosting, made of the yolk of one egg, one tablespoon water and one teaspoon lemon or orange flavoring. Add confectioner's sugar till thick enough to spread.

Bedroom Set in Applique.
Bedroom sets in shadow work applique are charming, and may be used over white or colored linings, and the effect of these filmy embroideries over highly polished woods must be seen to be appreciated.

In laundering this class of work it must be pulled and smoothed into place before it becomes dry.

A cloth should be placed between it and the iron, and the pressing continued until the article is thoroughly dry.

A pretty fancy is the use of shallow boxes in the framing of small prints. Photographic views, carefully colored with Japanese paints, are set in boxes one to one and a half inches deep. Some of the prettiest of these are set in gray wood, the tint of weather-exposed shingles. The colorings of the photographs is not difficult to learn. The amateur photographer will find this a suggestion for utilizing summer vacation "takes" for the recreation of a special room or for charming and inexpensive Xmas gifts.

To Remove Scorch.
Any article which has become scorched in ironing, if placed directly in the sun, will be restored to its natural color. No trace of the scorch will remain.

WORN TO A SKELETON.
A Wonderful Restoration Caused a Sensation in a Pennsylvania Town.

Mrs. Charles N. Preston, of Elland, Pa., says: "Three years ago I found that my housework was becoming a burden. I tired easily, had no ambition and was falling fast. My complexion got yellow, and I lost over 50 pounds. My throat was terrible, and there was sugar in the kidney secretions. My doctor kept me on a strict diet, but as his medicine was not helping me, I began using Dean's Kidney Pills. They helped me at once, and soon all traces of sugar disappeared. I have regained my former weight and am perfectly well."

Tom Ochiltree's Moon.
After Tom Ochiltree, that able congressman and laugh generator for the afflicted rich, settled in New York as the amuser of the John W. Mackay family, he effervesced in a thousand different directions, and was as good in some ways as Ben Ward. One night he escorted John Mackay's friend, the Count de Biscuit, down to the Battery to show the sight of New York. The moon was grand, and the count went into raptures as "her maiden reflection rippled over the peary waters." He cried: "Eet iss grand! Eet iss grand! Daar iss no such moon in all Italy!" "Count," said Ochiltree, solemnly, as he lifted the occasion, "you just ought to see the moon in Texas!"

Saw Chance to Economize.
After weeks of waiting and longing for the sport, rods, reels, gear—everything was in readiness for a week's trout fishing. The young wife, smiling brightly, hurried into the room, extending towards her husband a neatly speckled paper.

"For goodness' sake," he exclaimed, "what on earth are you doing with these old fish papers?" "I saved them for you last summer, dear," she answered. "I am know you said you always had to buy flies when you went fishing."

A Pardonable Fault.
Dr. Edward Everett Hale, discussing a rather finicky attack that had been made on certain recent statements, smiled and said: "But who or what is blameless? It is like the case of the Scottish hen. An old Scottish woman wished to sell a hen to a neighbor.

"But tell me," the neighbor said, "is she a'thegither a guid bird? Has she got nae faults, nae faults at all?" "Aweel, Margot," the other old woman admitted, "she has got one fault. She will lay on the Lord's day."

A Foine Bird.
An Irishman who wasn't much of a hunter went out to hunt one day, and the first thing he saw to shoot at was a blue jay sitting saucily on the top of a fence. He blazed away at the bird and then walked over to pick it up. What he happened to find there was a dead frog, which he raised carefully at arm's length, looking at it with a puzzled air. Finally he remarked: "Well, begods, but ye was a devil of a foine looking bird befor Oi blew th' fithers off o'yers!"—Judge's Library.

Statue Finally Completed.
When Alfred Stevens designed the noble monument to the duke of Wellington in St. Paul's cathedral, London, he intended that his work should be crowned by an equestrian statue. But Stevens died before his design was carried out. Now, 32 years after his death, the equestrian statue has been completed and before long will be placed in position.

FAMILY FOOD.
Crisp, Toothsome and Requires No Cooking.
A little boy down in N. C. asked his mother to write an account of how Grape-Nuts food had helped their family. She says Grape-Nuts was first brought to her attention on a visit to Charlotte, where she visited the Mayor of that city who was using the food by the advice of his physician. She says: "They derive so much good from it that they never pass a day without using it. While I was there I used the Food regularly. I gained about 15 pounds and felt so well that when I returned home I began using Grape-Nuts in our family regularly. "My little 18 months old baby shortly after being weaned was very ill with dyspepsia and teething. She was sick nine weeks and we tried everything. She became so emaciated that it was painful to handle her and we thought we were going to lose her. One day a happy thought urged me to try Grape-Nuts soaked in a little warm milk. "Well, it worked like a charm and she began taking it regularly and improvement set in at once. She is now getting well and round and fat as fast as possible on Grape-Nuts. "Sometime ago several of the family were stricken with LaGrippe at the same time, and during the worst stages we could not relish anything in the shape of food but Grape-Nuts and oranges, everything else nauseated us. "We all appreciate what your famous food has done for our family. "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in page.

IN THE SUPERLATIVE DEGREE.
Little Son's Explanation Seemed to Cover the Case.

Little son, aged seven, whose training has been of the most painstaking and conscientious, rather took away his mother's breath in describing the dog's game of ball. He ended with: "And, mother, Topsy caught the ball in her mouth, and then just ran like h—"

"Like what?" cried the startled mother. "W'y, like h—, don't you know, mother?" innocently. "No, I don't believe I do. Just how is that, dear?" she asked faintly. "Well, I don't know jus' what it means, myself," he confessed, "but it's a whole lot faster than 'hickety-split!'"

CASE OF ECZEMA IN SOUTH.
Suffered Three Years—Hands and Eye Most Affected—Now Well and Is Grateful to Cuticura.

"My wife was taken badly with eczema for three years, and she employed a doctor with no effect at all until she employed Cuticura Soap and Ointment. One of her hands and her left eye were badly affected, and when she would stop using Cuticura Soap and Ointment the eczema came back, but very slightly, but it did her a sight of good. Then we used the entire set of Cuticura Remedies and my wife is entirely recovered. She thanks Cuticura very much and will recommend it highly in our locality and in every rock and corner of our parish. I. M. Robert, Hydrópolis, La., Jan. 5 and Sept. 4, 1906."

A Hopeless Case.
"Yes," said the business man, "I have given up trying to collect that little bill from Hillkins. You see, he is a big, muscular fellow, and he used to throw my collectors out."

"Then why didn't you employ a woman collector?" inquired a writer in Sare Moments. "He couldn't do that to a woman."

"That's what I thought, so I got to and sent her round, but she never came back."

Tripped.
Gunner—So you think the DeBlowers are faking about their extended European tour?
Guyer—I should say so. They said there were so many Americans in Venice that many had to walk in the middle of the street.
Gunner—Well?
Guyer—Why, the streets of Venice are canals.

NEW FALL STYLES

In Suits, Shirts, Gloves, Neckwear and other Furnishings

The fall offerings selected carefully from the leading manufacturers are now here and we invite your inspection of the new styles and shades. As a matter of economy, strictly its cheaper by far to buy a suit or overcoat of known quality and repute than to buy a "pig in the poke" in the foolish hope that you are practicing economy.

Therefore see that the Sincerity label is in the next suit or overcoat you buy. We call attention to some of the articles that are especially worthy of mention for early buying. Shirts of the latest pattern, Gloves that are up-to-date, new shapes and shades in neckwear, one of the new style suits and overcoats at

From Our Point of View

That the great South, which clung to human slavery with a death-like grip to loosen which required four years of carnage, is to lead the entire world in war upon slavery to King Alcohol, seems to be assured. State after state is falling into line with complete or partial prohibitory laws of a practical nature. Georgia has voted for state prohibition and many counties in Kentucky and Tennessee formerly celebrated for their "moonshine" whiskey have declared against the legalized saloon. Mississippi and Texas are in like condition, and the reform is progressing in Alabama and North Carolina. While all this has been done with a view to stopping race riots, which strong drink had done much to incite, these states demonstrate that prohibition can prohibit, they will have done a service to mankind that will go far to offset the evils of their treacherous struggle for Negro slavery.

Monday's Detroit Journal castigates the Ladies' Home Journal for leaving its legitimate field as a family magazine for that of public scandal and muck raker. The monthly is accused of discussing topics of questionable suitability for the family circle, and the opinion is expressed that unless the Ladies' Home Journal resumes its proper sphere, it will soon be occupied by other publications. The Detroit newspaper's criticism is not altogether unwarranted, and it suggests to our mind that the best editor of a woman's journal would be a woman. Certainly, there is no lack of lady journalists fully as talented as Mr. Bok and presumably better qualified to discuss womanly topics for women.

The growth of the want advertisement idea is remarkable. Long an important feature of city dailies it has spread to rural districts and country newspapers everywhere, giving evidence that people are learning that a twenty-five-cent notice in the paper may save twenty-five dollars worth of running and trouble and be much more effective at that. No matter what you have to sell, if it has any value someone wants it. If you want to buy, some one can supply you. The newspaper with its thousands of readers is the best and cheapest medium to connect buyer and seller.

Barrisan and Canadian newspapers which but recently were commenting severely upon the San Francisco "hoodlums" who attacked the Japanese at San Francisco, are at loss how to treat a smaller but far worse outbreak against the little brown men which occurred at Vancouver Saturday night. "Hoodlum" in one case, "hoodlum" in the other; but the pill is a bitter one and but few have swallowed it. Evidently, the line between the domatus of Uncle Sam and Johnny Bull marks no great difference in human nature.

The uses of concrete as a substitute for timber are increasing. The concrete fence post is followed by the concrete telegraph or telephone pole. Prices for cedar poles have soared to a point almost prohibitory.

The Grand Army of the Republic, holding its forty-first annual encampment this week with an estimated attendance of 50,000, shows the remarkable vitality and staying powers of the survivors of the conquering hosts of the sixties. As the average age of the veterans is but 60 years, the organization is good for 25 years yet. Let us hope that these last years may be the best years for these old boys in blue, and as loyal citizens let us withhold no part of the honor which is their due.

Detroit is disgraced by a number of brutes in police uniform who club law-abiding citizens and visitors unmercifully and drag them to jail, finding amusement on the way by pounding their helpless victims on face and hands. The police commissioner has so far refused to act; but Detroit's decent citizens should make him move or separate him from his job; or people having business at Michigan's metropolis will refuse to trust their persons to the mercy of a lot of uninformed thugs.

The fact of the Helms company in raising its own contract price for cucumbers and daffodils at the beginning of a season, now nearly spent, speaks well for the fairness of the managers, and will be a strong argument when placing contracts next year. Evidently, the Helms people are good folks to do to.

Got a plenty for their money. Those Howard City fair goers who paid their money to see a girl risk her life in a balloon act. These prof of these exhibitions should cease. This sort of amusement is not so essential that men should hire their fellows to tempt Providence in order to furnish it.

Of a sympathy goes out to Brother Saunders of the Middleville Sun in the loss of his daughter, Miss Bessie, whose acquaintance we made on the St. Louis trip several years ago. She was a bright and cheerful young woman and has made a brave though losing fight for life.

Let the people of Lowell and eastern Kent stand by their home candidate for delegate to the Constitutional convention, William A. Watts. There should be no party politics in this election. The constitution when made will rule all the people. Let it be a fair one.

Boss Atwood, who has opposed Governor Warner's reforms, is a Tuscola county candidate for delegate to the Constitutional convention. No doubt the machine will be well represented at the convention. Let the people look to their own interests.

What with burglaries, assaults and highway robbery, things have been more interesting than funny here for some time past. With a large sized suspicion as to the criminal in one case, important clues as to others, might result from an arrest.

Now that Son-in-law Nicholas has declared that Roosevelt will run again if the demand is unanimous, efforts should be made to convert Foraker, Rogers, Harriman & Co. It might be well, too, to sound Grandpa Cannon.

The seedless orange, the horseless carriage, wireless telegraphy; and now the stingless bee. Will wonders never cease?

People who distribute their patronage on the principle that "any old thing is good enough, even when you can as easily do better," have themselves to thank when the entire community is shamelessly disgraced.

The weather man will please sit up and take notice! Corn, bean, potato and tomato growers need several weeks of sunshine. Deliver at once and oblige a whole lot of Lowell farmers.

High prices and busy markets make all roads lead to Lowell these days. Join the procession everybody, and watch the advertising columns of THE LOWELL for trade inducements.

Mixing stock again! This is said to be the rock upon which the Belling Hall concern went to smash. "Haste makes waste," when it is haste to be rich.

The Constitutional election September 17, may prove the most important in the history of the state. Let every citizen do his duty.

A TEST OF VALOR

By George T. Pardy

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

There was much joy among the officers stationed at Fort Eagle, when Amy Sanborne made her debut among them. Life at a frontier army post is a humdrum sort of existence, and the arrival of a pretty girl naturally becomes an event of great importance, socially speaking.

Amy was the colonel's niece, and her journey from the east was undertaken at the request of her aunt, who believed that a trip to the far western country would be a pleasant novelty to the girl, whose letters indicated that she was somewhat weary of the whirl of fashionable society of New York and Washington. There was but one officer at the fort who failed to pay homage to the charms of the eastern belle. As he was unmarried and only 28 years of age, his apparent desire for solitude astonished Miss Sanborne.

"Aunt Lizzie," she asked, one day, "can you explain why Lieutenant Tracy keeps so much to himself?"

"I am sorry for him," said the colonel's wife, in a low tone. "He is in disgrace as the result of an accident in the field. He was placed with a detachment of his men to hold a certain position during an engagement with hostile Indians. The Indians managed to break through and get away, owing as they said, to Lieutenant Tracy having lost his head at a critical moment. He was cleared at the investigation that followed, but the reproach of cowardice still clings to him. Military men are very strict in such matters, and poor Tracy, justly or unjustly, suffers for his error."

"And how can his honor be restored?" queried the girl.

"Only by some brave action on his part, my dear, but he may have to wait half a life time before an opportunity comes. He is greatly to be pitied, Amy."

Several days later there was food for gossip at Fort Eagle. The colonel's niece and the taboored Lieutenant Tracy had been seen together several times. The wife of Captain Rainforth appointed herself a committee of one to run over to the colonel's house and ask the girl from the east if she had heard the dreadful story about the officer.

"I have heard it three or four times already," was the reply, "and I think he has been wronged. I can see no reason why I should cut him."

Other women came to argue the matter with Amy, but she possessed a stubborn will and her sense of justice compelled her to stand firm. It was about the middle of July when a small detachment under command of a sergeant was sent down the south road to Moss creek to improve the crossing of the stream for the convenience of the freighters. Lieutenant Tracy was ordered to ride out and see what progress was being made. Amy was fond of riding and when invited to accompany the lieutenant she gladly consented.

They way was over a succession of ridges and dry gullies, and they were chatting away merrily, when a band of Indians, numbering 25, suddenly appeared in the narrow valley down which they were headed. After a long look at the band the lieutenant said:

"I cannot account for the presence of those fellows at this place."

"But there is peace with the Indians," protested the girl.

"That makes no difference. Whenever they can break away from the agent they are ready to burn a ranch house or murder any white man they come across. We must ride straight ahead, as pulling a held face on is our only chance. Keep your horse well in hand."

As they went forward at a walk, the Indians closed together as if they meant to obstruct the way, but not a weapon was uplifted. Tracy headed for the center of the band, but not a pony moved until the horses of the two riders almost touched their nose to nose. Then they gave way slowly and a line was opened. Amy was about to express her relief when Tracy said quietly:

"The danger is not over, these fellows may attack at any moment. We could wheel to the left and find a clear road to the fort, but the men at the creek must be warned. If we can reach them there will be force enough to stand the Indians off."

Amy glanced at him in admiration. Her intuition had proved correct. This man, resolute and cool in the face of danger was surely no coward! They were some 10 rods away from the Indians when Tracy raised a warning hand.

"Listen," he said, "they are coming and we must ride for our lives. Keep cool and we'll win through yet!"

A yell came from the redskins and away went pursuers and pursued at a gallop. For fear of alarming the soldiers at the creek the Indians rode silently after their first war cry and did not attempt to use their rifles. At the end of two miles the foremost warrior began to gain.

Tracy turned in his saddle. He raised his heavy revolver and fired. The Indian lurched forward, struck squarely in the chest, and toppled to the ground.

Sergeant Scully and his squad of men were working away on the banks of the ford over Moss creek, when a shout and the hoof beats of hurrying horses gave the alarm. They looked up to see their lieutenant and the colonel's niece riding desperately toward them while hardly half a mile behind galloped the war party.

The soldiers seized their guns as the fugitives drew rein among them and dismounted. As the warriors came on in a headlong charge, a volley blazed from the carabines of the troopers, and the Indians swerved abruptly to the right and disappeared behind a ridge. A large tree had been cut down in making the new road across the creek, and the lieutenant ordered the men to begin throwing up a defense.

A quarter of an hour's work with axes and shovels gave them an inclosure which it would have been difficult to carry by assault. Presently the Indians rode into sight again and the fight began in grim earnest. In about five minutes the fire of the attacking party ceased suddenly and the whole body dashed forward with a yell. They were met with a continuous volley from carabines and revolvers, but though several Indians dropped, the main body reached the defense, and for a couple of minutes there raged a savage hand-to-hand fight over the logs. The girl from the east crouched down with eyes shut and her hands over her ears, she was trembling with fear, when Sergeant Scully laid his hand on her shoulder and said:

"You may stand up now, miss. We've beaten 'em off and I think they've had more than enough of it, but we've got some dead and wounded ourselves."

"Lieutenant Tracy"—she cried, excitedly. "Is he hurt?"

"Yes, miss, and there's two dead besides!"

She rose and looked around, to find the officer lying on the ground with a bullet in his shoulder. "It doesn't amount to much," said Tracy, as Amy knelt beside him sobbing bitterly. "It's more of a shock than a hurt, and I'll be all right in a few minutes. Sergeant, have the reds gone for good, do you think?"

"Yes, sir. They've mounted their ponies and vaned. They're a pretty badly whipped set, sir."

"Not caring to run the risk of falling into an ambush or encountering any other stray bodies of hostiles, the lieutenant determined to remain where they were, knowing that their nonarrival at the fort would surely cause a searching party to be sent out. The wisdom of this course was demonstrated later in the afternoon when a squad of troopers made their appearance at the creek and escorted the missing ones back in triumph."

The next two weeks were the happiest that Lieutenant Tracy had ever known. Every officer at Fort Eagle revised the unfavorable opinion he had expressed in former days of the comrade who had been accused of cowardice, and apologies poured in on Tracy from all points of the compass.

He was also a hero in the eyes of all the women at the fort, but for this he cared little. It was enough for him the girl who had stood sturdily by him in misfortune should have learned to love him. For Lieut. Tracy's real reward was given him when Amy Sanborne became his wife.

Strange Rat Nest.
During the first week of June my gardener called my attention to a large nest five feet from the ground at the top of a strong thorn hedge which partly overhangs a large pond, says a writer in The Field. He also pointed out that the nest was made of green sticks, some of which were as large as an ordinary cedar drawing pencil and quite a foot in length and, further, that these sticks had been broken off from the top of the hedge at intervals for six or seven yards.

I did not disturb the nest, but on examining the stumps of the green sticks, which could be plainly seen in the hedge top, I found that each was marked very plainly by the incisor teeth of a rodent, and I at once concluded that the nest was the work of water rats, of which there are many in the pond. The nest is quite as large as a crow's and is lined inside with the dried leaves of the hedge (white-thorn).

English Pauperism.
Some startling figures of comparison have been made to show the great cost of English paupers. The English poor law foots up an expense of more than $75,000,000 a year, which is as great as the entire annual expenditure of the kingdom of Holland, almost as much as that of Australia and New Zealand combined and equal to the whole public expenditure of Denmark, Greece and Norway.

Lessens Jar of Machinery.
Though many plans to lessen the jar of machinery have been tried, annoyance from steam hammers, etc., continues. A new French remedy is to place under the machine a two-inch elastic plate, consisting of two sheets of steel with an intervening layer of coiled springs surrounded by felt.

Missouri Is Longest River.
The Missouri is the longer river, and the Mississippi really joins the Missouri. But the Mississippi was discovered first and obtained the reputation of being the principal stream.

STANDARD OIL'S LITERARY NEMESIS

Miss Ida Minerva Tarbell, the unrelenting foe of trusts and monopolies and the literary Nemesis of the Standard Oil company, was born in Erie, Pa., in 1857, and was graduated from the Tusculum High school and Allegheny college. In 1883, when she was 25 years old, she became editor of The Chautauquan and held that position for eight years. Then she became a student at the Sorbonne, Paris, and later at the College of France. While in Paris she wrote some articles which attracted the attention of S. S. McClure, and for several years she was one of the editors of McClure's Magazine. She has written lives of Napoleon, Lincoln and Mme. Roland. Her great literary success was her series on "The History of the Standard Oil company."

STRANGE ANTIQUITY OF EGYPT.
Country Has Remained Unchanged Through Centuries.

A man alighted from a train, and after walking laboriously up the short flight of stairs which led to the waiting-room, stopping a few times on the way to rest, he looked round for a place to sit down. His wan, thin face, heavy eyes, and general appearance of weakness and dejection attracted attention, and a kind old gentleman accosted the stranger and asked if he could be of any assistance.

"No, thanks," the young man drawled out; "I'll get along if I take my time about it."

"Are you ill?"

"No, I'm not ill. But I feel as if I were completely done up."

"Been in an accident?"

"No, I'm just tired, that's all. Thanks; you may call a hansom for me, if you will. Don't believe I could ever walk out to the tramway. I don't mind if you carry my bag. I'm so tired."

"What's the matter with you?"

"Oh, nothing much; I'm just returning from my holidays. I'll be all right in a week or two."—The Bits.

A Famous Saying.
You have probably heard or read the famous saying: "I had rather be the first man in a village than the second man in Rome," and have wondered,

Many tourists who have crossed the Mediterranean to Alexandria and have made the three-hour journey thence by express to Cairo, establish themselves in one of the fashionable hotels, do a little shopping in the native quarter, see a mosque or two, a native wedding, ride a camel the quarter-mile distance from the Meza house to the sphinx, and perhaps go as far as to visit Saqqara—a day's excursion from Cairo—then return homeward fancying and also declaring that they have seen Egypt.

So they have, in a sense, but Cairo is no more representative of Egypt as a country than New York is of the entire United States.

To see upper Egypt, with its fascinating life, its mud cities, and its quaint scenery, is like turning the leaves of an old history and studying the engravings, for neither the country nor the people has changed to any appreciable degree since the days of Mohammed, unless it be in the accomplishment in which all seem to be equally well trained—that of begging backwards. Egypt is spoken of as being unmodernized, but there is no indication of anything more modern than 2000 years ago between Cairo and Luxor—or, more properly, the little English city of Kom Omba, beyond Luxor, where an English company has perhaps, who first used it. Plutarch attributes it to Julius Caesar. The story is, as he tells it, that when Caesar came to a little town in passing the Alps, one of his friends said, in a jocular way: "Can there be here any disputes for offices, and contentions for precedence, or such envy and ambition as we see among the great?" To which Caesar answered, very seriously: "I assure you that I had rather be the first man here than the second man in Rome."

True Philosophy.
Let us see that whenever we have failed to be loving, we have also failed to be wise; that whenever we have been blind to our neighbors' interests, we have also been blind to our own; whenever we have hurt others, we have hurt ourselves much more.—Ruskitt.

Fatigue and Character.
Just as fatigue lessens our ability to withstand diseases—which attack the physical man—so it lessens our ability to withstand temptations, which attack the moral man. This is not because the temptations are more numerous, but because there is less energy of resistance.—World's Work.

His Sacrifice.
"I fear that you must have sacrificed your conscience occasionally," said the sincere friend.

"Well," answered Mr. Dustin Stax, "a man ought not to expect to be as successful as I am without some sacrifice."

IN HIS CLIENT'S INTEREST.
It was his first year in practice, and his first client was a better known than respected burglar. In an interval he approached a veteran member of the bar and sought for advice.

"And how long do you think I ought to make my speech to the jury, sir?" he finished up.

"I should say about an hour," said the old hand.

"An hour! Why, I thought ten minutes would be ample! Why so long?"

"Well," said the advisor, "you see, they can't sentence him till you're finished, and the longer you talk the longer he'll be out of jail!"—Chicago Journal.

His Promise.
"Pat."
"Yes."
"Supposin' I was dead?"
"Yes."
"And me wife was still livin'?"
"Yes."
"And she was as beautiful as a quene?"
"Yes."
"Would yez marry her for my sake and support the childer?"
"Yes. Thank yez, Mike."
"Why do yez thank me, Pat?"
"Fer puttin' in that about me not havin' to marry her unles-s she was as beautiful as a quene. Yez have me promise."—Chicago Record-Herald.
