Public Schools. Lowell

School Notes Furnished by Superintendent E. J. Martin.

On one of our "busy days" recently while passing through the grammar department, we noticed a large number of toys of various description being collected by the children consisting, as we concluded, of well worn keepsakes such as trains of cars, dolls, miniature carpenter tools, balls, tops, games, etc., etc.
We wondered why such things should be brought to school; and upon in quiry, found that the pupils were magnanimously responding to a call sent out by the relief conmittee who are providing for the unfortunate children and mothers whose fathers and husbands were taken from them in the recent mine disaster in Pennsylvania. CHARGES WILL BE SERVED ON MR. GLAZIER, OR HIS ATTORNEY.

THE STATE'S INTEREST

Though the Official Is Reported as Very III, the Proceedings for Removal Were Begun This Week.

Charges against State Treasurer Glazier will be served upon that official, at his home in Chelsea, some day this week. Personal service will be had if possible, otherwise the formtorney, James S. Gorman.

The matter was decided upon Saturday at a conference between Gov. Warner and Atty.-Gen. Bird and Attorney Seward Merriam, of Detroit, who and countess have not been happy to has been retained upon behalf of the

In addition to the Glazier case the sea Savings bank, and in the event that the bank is not able to pay back the $684,000 of state funds that were deposited in it by Glazier, the surety companies must then be required to make good the amount of Glazier's bond. He gave a bond for $150,000 as state treasurer and, in addition, the state funds in the Chelsea baank are protected by a $200,000 surety bond. Neither the governor nor attorneygeneral have any disposition to take advantage of Mr. Glazier's condition, but sufficient time has now elapsed to make it imperative that steps be taken to protect the interests of the state. Mr. Glazier will be given some ten days more in which to make answer to the charges, which will follow the outline already given. If he then be unable to appear, a reasonable extension will be granted, after which it will be insisted that Glazier make his appearance through his attorney. Those in touch with the situation say that Glazier is a very ill man, and some of his friends entertain doubts of his recovery. However, it is believed that he will be able to confer with his attorney after the charges have been served on him and make answer to them. What answer Glazier will make can only be conjectured. though the intimation has been that

It has also been hinted that Glazier will tender his resignation after having taken advantage of the opportunity to make an explanation, but, of course, no confirmation of this report can be had until some statement is made by Attorney Gorman, who refuses to discuss the case in any way until he has had an opportunity of gocondition of the state treasurer will

The visible resources of the bank are placed at $272,574.42, of which the receiver considers $126,098 good and the balance doubtful. Most of the doubtful assets are the loans made to Frank P. Glazier and stocks in Glazier enterprises. In an affidavit filed in court Glazier waives all objections to the appointment of a receiver, and the appeintment of W. J. Dancer will undoubtedly be made permanent.

Label the Sausage.

Judge Wiest, of the Ingham circuit court, in an opinion handed down, holds against the use of cereals and water in the manufacture of sausage. The decision was rendered in the proceedings brought by Armour & Co., of Chicago, to secure an injunction restraining the state dairy and food department from interfering with the sale of its sausage, by a threat of arrest, on the ground that the sausage is adulterated. The judge said in part: "With the general public of this generation, largely reared on farms and in small villages and remembering home-made sausage, there is no occasion to look at a dictinary in order to define sausage. The comon understanding is that sausage is composed of chopped meat, seasoned, and the definition must control as against a manufacturer's process of adding cereals and water."

The court says further that cereal is cheaper than meat and water, cheaper than the cereal which brings the manufactured product within the scope of the law prohibiting adulterations. It is further said that while the sausage may be sold it must be labeled to show that it contains water and cereals.

The decision is an important one in view of the large interests affected, and the fact that it is a second attempt of the meat company to prevent the dairy and food department prohibiting the sale of the sausage in this state.

The State's Cash.

About $400,000 is available for state use until the December taxes come in between January 10 and 15, according to the report at the close of the year's business. The cash balance was $1,487,471.98. Of this $685,000 is tied up in Glazier's Chelsea bank. There except Wednesday. 10c, 20c, 33c. LIFE OF is also on deposit in the state treasury, $364,000 belonging to depositors of the City Savings bank of Detroit.

DAIRY COWS IN STALLS.

Make Their Fastening as Secure and Comfortable as Possible.

How difficult it is to change the opinions and the customs of men in anything! There is perhaps no harder task than to change the methods by which farmers keep their cows. The old stanchion is everywhere present except in the southern part of the country where cows are not tied up much. In the cold parts of the country the old rigid stanchion is the most convenient method for fastening cows, A substantial fed rack is a good in- and it is used. # New Coiffures

At first sight the coiffures of to-day seem to differ very little from those of last season. There are, however, some very material changes, according to Julia Bottomley. Pompadours are fuller, wider, more off the brow. Very new ideas in cow stalls are brought often they show a shallow parting at the middle. These changes were necessary in order to wear successfully the enormously large hats with their flaring brims, which are the most pronounced features of the new season. Waves We notice that nearly all of these and curly-locks about the face are a necessity; puffs may hardly be dispensed with and whole wreaths of these smooth accessories are often used.

The back hair is worn low on the crown of the head. As a rule there is not much hair left to dispose of, after providing for the ample pompadour. What remains is pinned in a flat coil to the crown of the head usually, and a wreath or half-wreath of puffs adjusted about it. The puffs are to be adjusted to suit the hat worn. One therefore meets with them placed at various angles, Quite often the hat is put on before the puffs are pinned to place, in order to decide just where they are most needed. It therefore happens that they may waste hay and fodder was formerly be required. The third point that is lie across the back of the head or across the front, just back of the pompadour, strewn around the yard and tramped made much of is the security of the or in a wreath entirely around the crown, or at various angles.

If one has abundant hair the low coiffure is best suited to those hats with extended back brims. With the long sweeping ostrich plumes, which will appear in falling cascades of feathers in many handsome patterns, a low coiffure harmonizes better than any other style.

Women Decorate Hatpins.

Fashionable women are at present giving their spare moments to forming and decorating hatpins. One must have so many, and the pins play such an important part in the effect of a hat that every woman must have a dozen or two special ones for each chapeau. The disks are immense and are almost flattened. Women buy the plain disks, burrow holes with tools, and after battering in strong gum in the holes, sink and paste sapphires, or pearls, or rubies or emeralds. Against the enameled surface the effect is fine.

Those of copper are levely, but we see pretly enameled ones of all colors. The more jeweled the more chic, for the plain hatpin is seen no more.

Coats of Fur Plushes.

The perfection to which the imitation of fur pelts has been carried in plush cloths has led to their recognition and fashionable use for handsome long coats both for day and for evening wear. Made up with linings of satin brocades, or the plain satin made elaborate with embroidery and lattices of narrow chiffon ruches, as one sees them this season, these "near furs" assume elegance and are sold at high prices.

From Our Point of View

To MANY old citizens who have not kept pace with political events, the be driven. selection of Bourke Cochran, New York's great Democrat orator, to speak of the Great Emancipator at the Lincoln club banquet, may indicate a colored gentleman in the fence. | the membership. Surely, at this rate But Lincoln's memory like that of Washington belongs to the entire American people and no good citizen will permit another of whatsoever party to out-do him in loyalty to either. Then again, Lincoln represents all that is best in democracy and republicanism. He stood first, last and all the time for common humanity; and in this respect was ideally democratic. Of course, there may be some deep-laid scheme up but we prefer to credit the Lincoln club with broad-mindedness, and to accept it as an evidence of that coming realignment of political parties for which thousands of good men are anxiously looking. Anyhow, we ex. pect to improve the opportunity to hear Taft, Guild, Cochran and the rest. We have always found the Lincoln feasts a source of inspiration and information; and hope that we shall always be a stranger to the spirit exemplified by the old woman who said she was willing to be convinced but she would like to see the one who could convince her. At any rate, it is always well to know what the other fellows are doing. That is good policy in war or peace.

THE President has again demonstrated his capacity for kicking up an unnecessary rumpus. The last one is in the Navy and the act was simi lar to his promotion of Surgeon Wood to near the head of the Army -a doctor in command of a Navy hospital ship. If this sort of thing becomes popular, people may soon be going to blacksmiths to have their teeth filled. If the correct way to train an officer for the Army or Navy is to send him to a medical college, the converse should also be true, and the employment of West Point graduates to doctor our families be the proper thing. The matter will be threshed out in Congress; and the affair-together with the President's abuse of Admiral Brownson for resigning-will be among the least creditable acts of the Roosevelt administration.

THE American Economist, which should be re-named "Hide-Bound Protectionist," is opposed to the nomination of Taft by the Republicans and sneers at the proposal of either Bryan or John Johnson by the Democrats. What the Economist wants is an old stand-pat, figurehead fossile like Cannon or a reactionist and obstructor like Foraker. The Economist, by the way, is published at 339 Broadway, and of course is in close touch with the Wall street crowd which started the recent panic. Consequently, it is dead against whatever or whoever opposes the skin games of its pets: and that is why the Economist hates Theodore Roosevelt and his choice, Secretary Taft. And that too is why the people should demand whatever the Economist opposes

FROM veterans of the Confederate army come protests against Kisser Hobson's plan to pension Southern soldiers. They say it is the duty of the states, for which they fought, to pension them. Hobson's newest proposition is to have the government start a weekly paper of its own to inform the people of the doings at Washington, evidently blind to the fact that such a service is already be ing given by the country's thousands of dailies and weeklies at no expense to Uncle Sam. If Hobson's desire is to attract attention, he might stand on his head, hang by his toes or try his silly-boy kissing game again-any thing but making laws of his ridiculous notions.

The miners strike in the Goldfield district has falled and the men are scurrying back to save their jobs. This strike was declared because during the financial stringency the operators announced that they would have to pay in checks. For this silly pretext, the men have lost weeks of work, their families have suffered and the mine owners have lost thousands of dollars. Added to this is the expense to state and federal governments necessary to main-former Lowellite.

Long Beach, Cal., Dec. 30, 1907. Mr. F M. Johnson,

Editor, Ledger, Lowell, Mich, again, and as we are a good way from home can't think of doing without our weekly "letter". We are having delightful weather, and the ladies are going in their shirt waist suits and everyone has their summer clothes on especially in the middle of the day, and the children go barefoot here the year around. Mrs. Mesecar and myself were out to the Ostrich Farm which is just on the outskirts of the city just over the city limits, and perhaps a little story about the same would interest the "Folks" at

The ostrich is a native of Australia and South Africa. The industry of raising ostriches in captivity uncle Mr. Ketchum at Sheridan. for their plumage is, however, carried South California. The first Ostrich farm was established in this country ill with pneumonia this week. in 1878; the first in Calif., in 1884, and now we have a fine farm with 30 birds on the outside of our very beautiful and enterprising little city. American Ostrich farms make the ruling price of ostrich feathers. As compared with the half-starved birds ive climes, the American bird is wonderful to behold, not only because of his increased size, but also because of I is enhanced beauty of plumage showingthat the ostrich like other forms of life can be brought to the highest state of perfection by systematic care, selective breeding and nutritious

The climate of South California is peculiarly adopted to the raising of the ostrich and many farms will be the source of many large fortunes in the near future. The birds, like people grow larger and live longer here than elsewhere, the hens lay more eggs, the percentage of the hatched eggs are larger, the rate of mortality among the chicks is less and the young mature more quickly the plucking average more in weight and the beau ty and the richness of the plumage iuneurpassed.

The birds are so ugly as to be fascinating. They are not afraid of man or any of the larger animals, and are amply able to protect themselves against almost any animal that might attack them in their native haunts They have a large and bony foot with two toes, the middle one ending with a large toe nail that is sharp and large and when angered they fight by striking forward and down with this. They can strike hard enough to break the leg of a horse, and at the same time the long sharp spike would dis-embowel a max with ease. They act perfectly natural in captivity, and are a source of undisguised pleasure to old and young alike.

young alike. They are not dangerous except as the male is approached by strangers as he is guarding the family nest of eggs. the female is timid and gentle, and the male is more bold and warlike Battles are often to the death between the males and are fiercely fought, and as they are very jealous of their mates, they have to be kept in separate pens a pair in each pen.

Every hen has her suitor and every male must choose its mate. At the age of four years the distinguishing markings have appeared which give to the male the black and white and to the female the dark drab plumage.

The chicks at the time of hatching are about a foot high and grow at are about a foot high and grow at an enormous rate until they reach a state of maturity. The average life of the ostrich is 60 years, and while there are records of their attaining the age of 120 years these are rare, and as they never mate but once this is a serious affair, and they take a great deal more time and pains at is a serious affair, and they take a great deal more time and pains at this than most people, but once they make up their mind they are constant and should the mate die the other will remain single the remainder of their lives, they have no need of a divorce court in Ostrich land. The nest is an article of simplicity being merely a shallow hole scooped out in the sandy soil. The male does the work and shows the mate where it is by standing over it flopping his wings for hour, and after a long time he attracts the mate. She will lay a setting of about fifteen eggs, laying one every other day. Then the male sits for six weeks being relieved at meal times by his spouse who con sents to do the "house work" while he feeds. When the chicks emerge from the shells the father gives them his undivided attention and proceeds to bring them up properly, a lesson to bring them up properly, a lesson-some human fathers might with pro-

Their growth is quite rapid nearly a foot a month in height for six months by which time they are talle than a man. They often attain a height of 8 feet and rarely 10 feet. Their weight when full grown is from 300 to 400 pounds, the first feather picking takes place when the chickare six to eight months old and the process is repeated every six to eight months thereafter. The small feathers of the wings are pulled but the larger ones are cut while in their prime and the quill stump is pulled out after it has dried up and is dead. The bird selected to be picked is driven into a small inclosure and a small sack like a salt sack is drawn over its head and in this shape a child can lead them any where and do anything with them. They have less brainfor their size than any other anima or bird known, the eyes are so set in the head that the bird can see on al sides at the same time and as they have a very keen vision they are very tations, rendering some fine vocat hard to approach in their native and instrumental music. Is assured you when you buy Dr. Pierce's family medicines-for all the ingredients entering into them are printed on the bottle-wrappers and their formulas are attested under oath as being complete and correct. You know just what you are paying for and that the ingredients are gathered from Nature's laboratory, being selected from the most valuable native medicinal roots found growing in our American forests and while potent to cure are perfectly harmless even to the most delicate women and children. Glycerine plays an important part in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia and weak stomach, attended by sour risings, heart-burn, foul breath, coated tongue, poor appetite, gnawing feeling in stom-ach, biliousness and kindred derange-ments of the stomach, liver and bowels. Besides curing all the above distressing ailments, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a specific for all diseases of the mucous membranes, as catarrh, whether of the nasal passages or of the stomach, bowels or pelvic organs. Even in its ulcerative stages it will yield to this sovereign remedy if its use be persevered in. In Chronic Catarrh of the Nasal passages, it is well, while taking the "Golden Medical Discovery" for the necessary constitutional treatment, to cleanse the passages freely two or three times a day with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. This thorough course of treatment generally cures the worst

In coughs and hoarseness caused by bronchial, throat and lung affections, except consumption in its advanced stages, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most efficient remedy, especially in those obstinate, hang-on coughs caused by irritation and congestion of the bronchial mucous membranes. It was surprising to see what a clearance he made in an hour. The existence of the fault helped him a good deal, as the percolation of water at this point had oxidized the stone to rottenness. To his great joy he discovered that a few prods with the pick laid bare a small cavity which could be easily enlarged. Here he contrived a niche where Iris could remain in absolute safety when barricaded by entirely sheltered from the one dangerous point on the opposite chiff, nor need she be seen from the trees.

He picked up a fagot with its queer attachment, shouldered a rifle and smiled when he saw the businesslike sir with which Iris slung a revolver

They walked rapidly to Smugglers' cove, and the girl soon perceived the ingenuity of his automatic signal. He securely bound the block of wood to a tree where it was hidden by the undergrowth. Breaking the bullet out of a cartridge, he placed the blank charge in position in front of the hammer, the case being firmly clasped by a bent nail. To the trigger, the spring of which he had eased to a slight pressure, he attached a piece of unraveled rope, and this he carefully trained among the trees at a height of six inches from the ground, using as cartiers nails driven into the trunks.

The ultimate result was that a mere swish of Iris' dress against the taut cord exploded the cartridge.

"There!" he exclaimed exultantly. "When I have driven stakes into the sand to the water's edge on both sides of the cove, I will defy them to land by night without giving us warning." "Do you know," said Iris, in all seriousness, "I think you are the cleverest man in the world."

He was manifestly pleased by the success of his ingenious contrivance and forthwith completed the cordon. To make doubly sure he set another snare farther within the trees. He was certain the Dyaks would not pass along Turtle beach if they could help it. By this time the light was falling.

"That will suffice for the present," he Maynard told the girl. "Tomorrow we will place other sentries in position at strategic points. Then we can sleep in the castle with tolerable safety."

By the meager light of the tiny lamp they labored sedulously at the rope ladder until Iris' eyes were closing with sheer weariness. Neither of them had slept much during the preceding night, and they were both completely

For two shivering hours they waited there until the sun was high over the cliff and filled sea and land with its brightness. At last, despite the girl's tears and prayers, Jenks insisted on making a reconnoissance in person.

Let this portion of their adventures be passed over with merciful brevity. Both watch guns had been fired by a troop of tiny won-wou monkeys. Iris did no, know whether to laugh or cry, when Jenks, with much difficulty, lowered her to Mother Earth again and marveled the while how he had managed to carry forty feet into the air a young woman who weighed so solidly. They sat down to a belated break fast, and Jenks then became conscious that the muscles of his arms, legs and back were aching hugely. It was by that means he could judge the true extent of his achievement.

CHAPTER IX. HE sailor went after those monkeys in a mood of relentless severity. Thus far the regular had dwelt together in peace and mutual good will, but each diminutive wou-wou must be taught not to pull any strings he found tied promisesously to trees or stakes. As a preliminary essay Jenks resolved to try force combined with artifice. Thenceforth, when some adventurous monkey, swinging with hands or tail among the treetops in the morning search for appetizing nut or luscious plantain, saw one of those fearsome bogies, he raised such a hubbub that all his companions scampered hastily from the confines of the wood to the inner fastnesses.

During each of the two daily examinations of the horizon, which he never omitted, Jenks minutely scrutinized the sea between Rainbow island and the distant group. It was perhaps a needless precaution. The Dyaks would come at night. With a favorable wind they need not set sail until dusk, and their fleet sampans would easily cover the intervening forty miles in five

Here he could make a He rushed into Iris' room and gathered determined and prolonged stand, and her ip his arms. He explained to the in the end help must come. So he dis missed the navigation project and devoted himself wholly to the perfecting of the natural fortress in the rock.

That night they finished the rope ladder. Indeed Jenks was determined not to retire to rest until it was placed. He did not care to try a second time to carry Iris to that elevated perch.

One of the first things he contemplated was the destruction if possible of the point on the opposite cliff which commanded the ledge. This, however, was utterly impracticable with the appliances at his command. The top of the rock sloped slightly toward the west, and nothing short of dynamite or regular quarrying operations would render it untenable by hostile marks-

During the day his rifles at ninety vards' range might be trusted to keep the place clear of intruders. But at night - that was the difficulty. He partially solved it by fixing two rests on the ledge to support a rifle in exact line with the center of the enemy's supposed position, and as a variant on the outer rest he marked lines which the entire front available to the foe.

Even then he was not satisfied. When time permitted, he made many experiments with ropes reeved through the pulley and attached to a rifle action. He might have succeeded in his main object had not his thoughts taken a new line. His aim was to achieve some method of opening and closing the breech block by means of two ropes. The difficulty was to secure the preliminary and final lateral movement aid of the pole and the rope placed of the lever boit, but it suddenly occurred to him that if he could manage to convey the impression that Iris and he had left the island the Dyaks would go away after a fruitless search. The existence of ropes along the face of the rock-an essential to his mechanical scheme - would betray their whereabouts or at any rate excite dangerous curiosity. So he reluctantly abandoned his original design, though not wholly, as will be seen in due course.

> In pursuance of his latest idea he sedulously removed from the foot of the cliff all traces of the clearance effected on the ledge, and, although he provided supports for the tarpaulin covering, he did not adjust it. Iris and he might lie perdu there for days without their retreat being found out. This development suggested the necessity of hiding their surplus stores and ammunition, and what spot could be more suitable than the cave?

So Jenks began to dig once more in the interior, laboring manfully with pick and shovel in the locality of the fault with its vein of antimony. Rainbow island had given him the one thing a man prizes above all elsea pure yet passionate love for a woman beautiful alike in body and mind. And now it was to endow him with riches that might stir the pulse of even a South African magnate, for the sailor, unmindful of purpose other than providing the requisite cache, shoveling and delving with the energy peculiar to all his actions, suddenly struck a deep vein of almost virgin gold.

To facilitate the disposal at a distance of the disturbed debris he threw each shovelful on to a canvas sheet, which he subsequently dragged among the trees in order to dislodge its contents. After doing this four times he noticed certain metallic specks in the fifth load which recalled the presence of the antimony. But the appearance of the sixth cargo was so remarkable when brought out into the sunlight that it invited closer inspection. Though his knowledge of geology was slight, he was forced to believe that denizens of Rainbow island the specimens he handled so dubiously contained neither copper nor iron pyrites, but glittering yellow gold. Their weight, the distribution of the metal through quarts in a transition state between an oxide and a telluride compelled recognition.

Treasures Found in Our American Forests.

That our American forests abound in plants which possess the most valuable medicinal virtues is abundantly attested by scores of the most emine medical writers and teachers of this and other countries. Even the untalored Indians had discovered the usefulness of many native plants before the advent of the white race. This information, imparted freely to the whites, led the latter to continue investigations until to-day we have a rich assortment of most valuable American medicinal roots.

Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., believes that our American forests abound in medicinal roots for the cure of most obstinate and fatal diseases, if we would properly investigate them, and, in confirmation of this conviction, he points with pride to the most marvelous cures effected by his "Golden Medical Discovery," which has proven itself to be the most efficient stomach tonic, liver invigorator, heart tonic and regulator, and blood cleanser known to medical science. Dyspepsia, or indigestion, torpid liver, functional and even valvular and other affections of the heart yield to its curative action.

The reason why "Golden Medical Dis- and other displacements caused by covery" cures these and many other weakness, ulceration of uterus and affections, is clearly shown in a little kindred affections, often after many book of extracts from the standard other advertised medicines and physimedical works which is mailed free to any address by Dr. R. If you have not got them this year you may have them next. It costs very little to put in the pipes when the partitions are open, but it is a great nulsance to tear the house to pieces to put them in after the plastering is done. When the pipes are put in have them properly tested. Sometimes plumbers are careless about testing pipes, and the neglect often leads to further trouble.

HINTS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

Milk remains fresh longer in a shallow basin than it would if kept in a deep jug.

To clean a clothes line boil it in soapsuds containing soda, then rinse and hang it out to dry.

Baking tins should be washed as clean as possible with a strong solution of soda, and then scoured with a piece of pumice stone. This will keep them in excellent condition.

Combs soon split if washed. A stiff nail brush is a good thing for cleaning them. After using the brush take a damp cloth and with it wipe between each tooth of the comb.

To clean knives easily take a flat cork, dip it in slightly moistened knifes powder and with it rub up and down the blade till all stains are removed. Then wipe with a duster.

When not in use, scrubbing brushes should be turned bristles downward. Thus the water will run out of them and the will dry, whereas if they are placed on their backs the water would soak into the wood and loosen the bristles.

To clean brass excellent results may be obtained by rubbing first with a paste made of powdered bathbrick and parailin, and then with bathbrick alone. Another plan, also very successful, is to use lemon juice and powdered chalk in the same manner as the bathbrick and paraffin.
