BIG ADVANCE IN INSURANCE RATES

LOCAL AGENTS GIVE REASONS FOR RECENT ACTION.

Recommendations of Measures Now Needed to Secure Reduction of Rates.

The rates of insurance on the three-story brick store buildings situate on the south side of Bridge street, commencing at Howk's store and from thence west to the mill, have been increased recently, and in some instances 100 per cent or more.

The reasons assigned for this extraordinary increase are, the opening in the west brick wall, for two windows in the second story, said openings being in the west wall of the building east of the mill of the King Milling Co., a special hazard, said opening, not being protected with suitable shutters, constitute a menace.

The vaudette on the first floor of the said building is also a special hazard. Vaudettes, when provided with every appliance to increase safety, are regarded as dangerous by insurance companies, and an increase of 1 per cent in the rate is usually demanded on the building occupied by one.

There is also an opening in the wall between the Towsley block and the building occupied by the vaudette, which opening is on the second floor and not properly protected.

The Towsley block and Kopf block and the Yeiter & Wadsworth building have openings connecting them not properly protected. In the rear of these stores, separated only by a narrow alley, are frame buildings which at times have an abundance of inflammable material in and about them.

There is a fire wall between Yeiter & Wadsworth and the Booth block but it does not rise above the roof.

Thus it will be seen that this group of stores extending from the vaudette building to the meat market are particularly one hazard, exposed by the mill on the west, and by wooden buildings containing inflammable material on the south and all liable to be destroyed by the same fire.

Suitable shutters on the openings for the windows above referred to and such doors in the openings of the division walls as prescribed by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, would not only decrease the rates of insurance materially, but would result in a substantial protection to said buildings and the stocks they contain.

Under the circumstances now existing, if the mill of the King Milling Co. should burn, there is no telling where the fire could be checked. The destruction that would follow would give our village a blow from which it would be difficult if not impossible to recover.

Lowell has had a fearful lesson in the past. Would it not be wisdom to take every precaution for the future?

WAS STRUCK BY CAR

Peter McPherson Receives a Scalp Wound while on Way to Train. From Grand Rapids Herald March 11.

Effective action of the fender on Grandville avenue and West Bridge street car No. 128 undoubtedly saved the life of Peter McPherson, a well to do Vergennes farmer, who was struck while crossing Bridge street last night. The man who is 61 years old escaped with a severe scalp wound and injuries to the hip. He will recover.

The car in charge of Conductor Ray C. Patterson and Motorman Otto Platt; was east bound. When near Mill street McPherson left the south sidewalk of Bridge street to cross to the Grand Trunk depot. In walking around a passing rig he failed to notice the approach of the car, and walked on the track directly in front of it. He was struck, thrown to the pavement, but the fender tripped and picked him up carrying him a distance of 15 feet, when the car was brought to a stop.

Dr. Newell Holcomb, who was near, rushed to the aid of the old man. He was picked from the car fender and taken to Butterworth hospital in the police ambulance. It was found on examination that he had sustained a long scalp wound and bruises about the left hip. He did not

LOWELL JOURNAL APPROVED CONDEMNED OPERA HOUSE PLANS

TWO DAYS AFTER JOHN ROWSON'S EXPOSURE OF THEIR DANGEROUS CHARACTER

It Published a Glowing Description of the Unsafe Project, and said "That We Feel Proud to Say is Lowell's Opera House." Deadly Parallel Tells the Story. The Proof of the Pudding.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 23, 1909.

D. G. Look, President, Lowell, Mich.

Dear Sir:—

A careful examination of the three-story brick building known as the Opera House Block, Lowell, Mich., reveals the following conditions. The east wall down as far as the joist line of the third story ceiling is badly cracked and the bricks are badly spalled. A large portion of these bricks are very soft, the joints are not filled with mortar as shown by looking into the center of walls at window openings.

The south wall is springing, evidently caused by the roof and joists pulling in at time of fire, besides the same trouble with soft brick and spalled brick.

The center wall between the auditorium and stage is badly cracked, the bricks soft and the joints of brick not filled with mortar.

The front of building from the roof joist line to top is very poorly constructed. The piers should continue to the cornice line. This wall is pulled into the building evidently by joist and roof falling at the time of the fire.

The west wall is in fairly good condition and except for the wood lintels over openings and the brick fire walls, is in a satisfactory condition. In my judgment the following work should be insisted upon to make this a public hall safe for occupancy.

The east wall from front to rear should be torn down to the bottom of the third story joist line except a possible 8 feet at the front which should be racked back so as to leave a tie to the front wall.

The center wall should be all taken down to the bottom of the joist line similar to the east wall, and at the south end in the second story back as far as the large crack in wall about 20 ft down to second story joist line. The south wall from the east corner as far as the first window opening west of the center wall should be removed as far down as the joist line of the third story. The front wall should be taken down to the roof joist line.

I would recommend that all old soft brick be thrown away as these have contributed largely to the decayed conditions now existing. Use good hard burned brick laid up with gauged mortar composed of one part Portland cement, three of lime and five of good clean sand. Bricks to be kept dry. The following should be insisted on. All joist to have a bearing on the walls 0.5 4" well anchored to walls by iron anchors 1/2 x 2" x 24" long every 6' well spiked to joist with the end turned up to hold the wall. All anchors to extend to walls 8". The walls where joist are laid parallel with same should be anchored back at least three joist.

All openings over windows, etc. should be either arched full thickness of walls or a railroad iron lintel used.

Under no condition would I allow the joist of the third floor to be put into the present walls. To do this you would have to cut the joist holes of wall to within four inches of the outside. In the present condition of these walls you are liable to have a collapse.

No plan of the roof trusses could be seen and from the explanations given me by the owner of the building I could not give any definite opinion as to the safe load they will carry. This is a very important part of a building and if the heavy loads of office and snow during a Michigan winter causes a collapse with a hall filled with people a great many lives would be lost.

I am of the opinion that the State has supervision over the placing of fire escapes on public halls, opera houses, etc. In my judgement the better place to locate this would be at the southwest corner with stairs leading to the east landings to be made to accommodate tenants of the second story.

Respectfully submitted, John Rowson.

WORK STOPPED BY INJUNCTION

COURT COMPELS RAYMOND TO ABANDON CONDEMNED PLANS

For Rebuilding Train's Opera House Building Must Be Made Safe For Public Use.

Reconstruction work on Train's opera house was stopped Thursday evening March 11 by an injunction served upon Mrs. Train and her agent V. S. Raymond by the village authorities.

This work had been persisted in according to Raymond's plans and contrary to the recommendations of expert Builders Rowson and McNabb, whose reports are published in adjoining columns, and also against the protests of the village council and the remonstrances of friends.

The owner insisted on believing that the village has it in for her, a charge in which there is not one iota of truth. When Mrs. Train secured from the fire insurance companies a liberal settlement which would enable her to rebuild in a first class manner the people were glad for her and THE LEDGER expressed their gratification and its own.

The findings and recommendations of Rowson were approved by the Council's committee—Trustees Peckham, Wingard and Mattern and also by Building Commissioners Frank R. Ecker and James A. Scott and their report was adopted by the village Council at its meeting of March 8 and a resolution was carried ordering Mrs. Train and Raymond to desist from rebuilding the opera house with the material then on hand and in the manner as proposed by them and indicated by the work already done.

This notice was served upon the owner and her agent March 9 and no attention being paid to same, the injunction proceeding of March 11 followed.

VAUDETTE SOLD

By Frank Howk to Saunders & Edwards.

The Ideal Vaudette was sold by Frank Howk to Saunders & Edwards of St. Johns, who gave their opening show last Saturday to a good patronage.

The new proprietors are giving the plant a thorough overhauling to insure comfort and safety. The operating room will be lined with asbestos and sheet iron as a precaution against fire from the film. Front, side and rear doors provide ample means of exit.

A stage for vaudeville performances will be added to the equipment. An entertainment was given yesterday and a new number is booked for Saturday.

Mr. Howk, who has conducted the vaudette for the past year, has given the public a good clean service and retires from the business with the good will of his many patrons.

A St. Patrick's Party.

Mrs. Don Smith entertained twelve of her lady friends at her home Tuesday evening at a St. Patrick's party. The rooms were tastefully trimmed in green and each one as they went in received a green shamrock with an Irish name on it, which she went by during the evening. Irish stories were told after which the guests were told that there were twelve prizes concealed in the room, after these were found, among which was a souvenir spoon found by Miss Mary Scott, dainty refreshments were served, the favors being green carnations.

Mrs. Cora Belle Howes, reader, will give a recital at the Congregational church March 30. Those connected with "The Queen Esther" entertainment know something of Mrs. Howes' ability. All turn out and hear her.

At the annual meeting of the Old Residents association Monday afternoon, the old officers were re-elected. Owing to there being no place suitable for holding the annual reunion, adjournment was taken subject to call by the president.

SCOTT & MACHAM.

From Our Point of View

It will be seen by the report of local insurance agents that the law is only partially responsible for the recent increase in insurance rates on adjoining and neighboring buildings. Property owners should promptly comply with the requirements, both for their own benefit and that of the entire community.

There is not even now a shadow of a bill on the part of the legislature, or of any person in it, toward Trill's open house. The opportunity to do a good service to the community and a fine stroke of business for the owner is still open.

It will be seen by the deadly paragraph printed on the first page of this paper that two days after the completion of the plans for condemning the Layton and plans for rebuilding the opera house, that the Lowell Journal not only approved the plans but announced its coming price in the job to be. This was February 23, and Rowson's recommendation of the plans was published in the Lowell Journal on February 23. That Rowson had been employed by the Council and that his report would condemn Rowson's plans were matters of common knowledge for several days before the Lowell Journal's editorial in a manner that would public approval. Now, after all this time, with first fulsome praise of the condemned plans, and then silence, the Lowell Journal tries to escape under cover like a curlew, by talking about "misdigesting." Several years ago, when The Ledger at considerable expense telegrams to and from California and with all the risk of a legal contest with its publisher, exposed a case of bigamy involving a Lowell family, leaving The Ledger to bear the burden alone. Of course in this and a multitude of other matters during our sixteen years' existence, The Ledger has been needed by scores of others to the public and a desire to do the right thing at the right time, because it was right. The loyal, steadfast and over-increasing following we have had all these years is a sufficient vindication.

Some people assume an air of superior wisdom when they discover a typographical error in a newspaper, when the simple truth is they are displaying ignorance of the gross kind by making "much ado about nothing." The further truth is that all the mental and physical work of the newspaper is done by a perfect newspaper, and no man of ordinary sense who knows that there are a thousand chances for mistakes where one is made expects that such a paper ever will be printed.

The proofs of high class books are always read and corrected as many as seven times; and yet we are informed that, but three or four perfect books have ever been produced. Nonetheless some eye-glassed proof reader could destroy even that small thing, usually the literary work of the severest critics, and we are told that "those who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones." Those who look for absolute perfection anywhere this side of heaven might as well get on their knees and pray to the petty gods, and then, the out of St. Peter's sisters and then by the gates will afford them subjects for criticism, and we only hope that they will not "monkey around" on the outside so long as to miss the big show altogether.

Geo. T. Angell, editor of Our Dumb Animals and father of the humane educational movement in America, passed his reward Tuesday from his home in Boston, at the goodly age of 86 years. He was truly a grand old man, always speaking "for those who are not heard," and he was a noble character. He was a man of great heart who will afford them subjects for criticism, and we only hope that they will not "monkey around" on the outside so long as to miss the big show altogether.

Not only has The Ledger no enmity towards liquor dealers as men and fellow citizens, but it has the kindest of feelings towards them. Their business is legal and we would do them a favor by separating them from St. Peter's sisters and then by the blame in the matter. Our position frequently stated is this: The liquor dealer who obeys the law is as good as the law; and the law is as good as the people who make and tolerate it.

Cheap substitutes for a genuine article fail to satisfy. Here is one of many indications. About a year ago a Lowell woman decided to get along without The Ledger in her home, but last month she decided to get along with it. She had paid two dollars for two more years and her husband now has $1,191.21. "Truth crushed to earth will rise again."

"No RMS wanted"—"No boys fighters used apply"—"None but sober men employed." You can read signs and ads, like these all over the country—in factories, in railroad yards, in the newspapers—everywhere. Young men, read the handwriting on the wall. Old men, help the boys by bringing the saloon out of business.

The Ledger does not need to assume anyone that it is not engaged in spite work. No newspaper man worthy the name carries private grudges into the conduct of his paper. The newspaper is not the proper vehicle for the venting of personal grudges.

Little Jessie Johnson, daughter of Charles Johnson, who is to be about in the house after the funeral, is in need of a good nurse and a good mother. The newspaper is not the proper vehicle for the venting of personal grudges.
