That the sun-fish deserves a piace in the list of giant fishes may be judged from the fact that examples weighing 200 to 500 pounds are not rare, and that much larger ones are occasionally met with. The largest known specimen, harpooned in 1893 at Redondo Beach, California, weighed 1,890 to 500 pounds. On such a monster, Aing on one side, pounds. On such a monster, Aing on one side, there would be room for 30 men to stand. The strong teeth, shaped like a turtle's beak, suggest that hard-shelled animals constitute its food, but as far as known jelly-fish are its chief diet. The Vineyard represents the world in which God has planted the true vine. This is set forth with peculiar power by Isalah (ch. 5). He compares the nation of Israel to a vineyard planted by God, "the well beloved," who had loved them with everlasting love. He did everything possible for them, that they might bring forth the best fruits,-obedience, sincere worship, righteous living, the beauty of holfness, love, joy, peace and all the fruits of the Spirit, intelligence, noble character and missionary work among the nations. He placed them in the best ountry in the world for the purpose. He hedged them round with laws and divine institutions, and with his own loving care defended them from all enemies. He planted in this vineyard the vines of his promise, his word, his commandments, institutions of religion, instruction in holy things. He placed there the winepress, which repesents the various advantages conferred on the people to help them to bring forth good fruit and present it to the Lord. Every influence, every institution, the teachings of the proph- Helen-I never know when ets, the hymns of David, the worship friend Gruet is joking and when he is at the sanctuary, all aided the people in earnest. to produce and develop the virtues, Henry--He's in earnest when praise, love, character, benevolence, tries to borrow money.
