State Fire Marshal Winship is much pleased by an opinion from Attorney General Fellows on one phase of the laws concerning fires in this state. The opinion is to the effect that if fire whether deliberately started or by accident or unavoidable circumstances and spreads to the property of another the owner of the latter property may sue for damages unless every possible effort is made to prevent the spread of the flames.

Mr. Winship declared that he expected that the opinion would prove very useful in enforcing the state fire marshal laws and local ordinances tending toward fire prevention.

Among the bills passed by the recent legislature, which will become a law August 24th, is one which requires all insurance agents to make application for license to do business, to pass a rigid test, the examiner being the commissioner of insurance. This law gives the state an opportunity to prevent any agent the commissioner deems unfit, from doing business. The agent, according to the application blanks sent out by Commissioner John T. Winship, is required to make a full report of his activities in insurance and other lines of work. He is asked whether he expects to engage in the insurance business exclusively, and what else he intends to MYTICE IN NEBONCE BLK., LOWELL, MICH them have claims against him.

STARVE OUT THE HESSIAN

PREPARED BY THE UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE .

ORGANIZE TO FIGHT THE FLY

The county demonstration agents in northern Oklahoma, together with a number of entomologists and other agricultural experts recently held a meeting at Claremore. Okla., and formulated a campaign to starve out the Hessian fly in their locality. This is an excellent method of starting the work or organizing the farmers to eliminate the fly, according to the department's spe-cialists, and by all means should be followed throughout the fly-infested territory. These Oklahoma agents and farmers have already adopted a specific campaign, which, in short, is the same as recommended by the United States department of agriculture, as follows:

STARVE OUT THE HESSIAN FLY.

The Hessian fly, being in the "flaxseed" stage in wheat stubble and in unharvested wheat from June till September, or even October in the South, can be destroyed by carrying out the following methods of

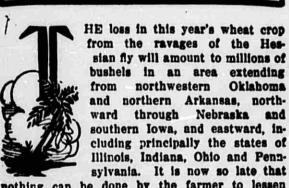

1. Burn, where possible and safe, all stubble and ruined wheat. 2. Disk all stubble and ruined wheat immediately after harvest, where burning is impracticable. 3. Plow under deeply all stubble and ruined wheatfields before August 15; harrow the ground, and roll if necessary. 4. Harrow, disk, pasture, or otherwise effectually destroy all volunteer wheat.

5. As a measure preparatory to sowing, plow as early and deeply as existing conditions will permit; disk, harrow, and roll until a thoroughly pulverized, compact seed bed is obtained. 6. Do not sow wheat until after fly-free date. 7. Rotate your crops if possible.

nothing can be done by the farmer to lessen the devastations of the Hessian fly to this year's crop, but it is nearly time to commence the fight against the fly to reduce the toll which it will assuredly take in 1916, if the fly is allowed to lay its eggs by millions on early sown wheat or volunteer wheat this fall. Millions of acres will again be sown to wheat this fall in the area in which the Hessian fly is now working so much

In order to understand the situation fully, it is necessary to know what the fly is like, how it is capable of causing such enormous losses, and how it transforms from the egg to the fully developed insect. Comparatively few farmers are able to recognize this pest, except in what is known as the "flaxseed" stage, which, even then, is often mistaken for the egg.

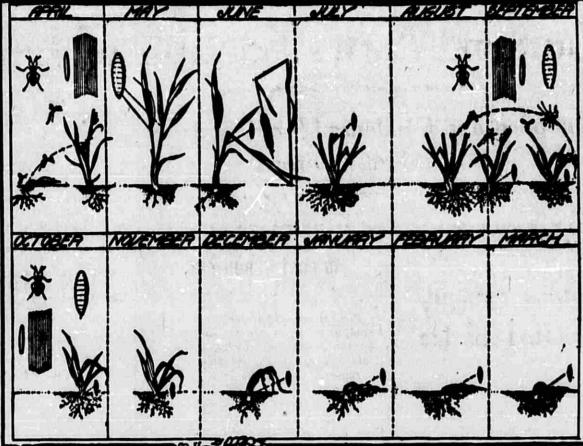

There are two generations of the Hessian fly each year, one in the fall and one in the following spring, the latter being the children of the former. Therefore, if there were no flies to lay eggs in the fall, it stands to reason that there could be none to lay eggs in spring.

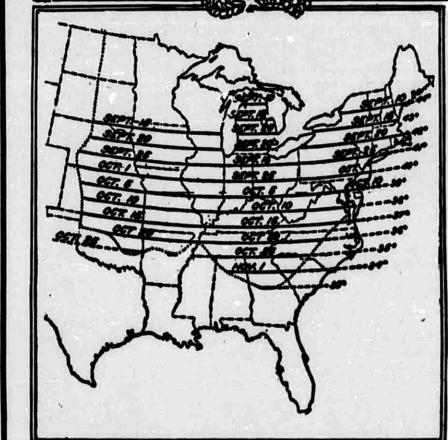

In the course of its development the insect passes through four different stages. The adult is a small, long-legged, dark-colored fly, very much resembling a small mosquito. The egg is very small, long, slender, and of a shining, reddish color, and is placed by the female fly in the grooves on the upper surface of the wheat leaves, both in spring and fall. The magget batches from the egg, makes its way down the leaf, and wedges itself between the leaf sheath and the stalk of the plant, where in some cases a dozen or more may be found partly overlapping one another. When it becomes full grown its skin hardens, changing to brown, and from its form and color it is then commonly known as the "flaxseed." which is the pupal or resting stage

Beginning about April 1, files emerge from the "flaxseed" that have passed the winter in the fall wheat, whether early sown or volunteer. These flies deposit their eggs on the leaves of the uninfested plants, the eggs batch into maggots in from four to eight days, and the maggots become grown in about twenty to thirty days and then change to "flaxseed." This constitutes the spring generation. After harvest the "flauseeds" of this generation can be found in the stubble just above the ground, or often higher up where the straw has broken over.

While, as stated, the Hessian fly emerges from the "flaxseed" stage throughout an extended period of time within the entire area of its distribution, in any given locality this emergence of the adults in destructive abundance occupies but a few days. The life of the female after she makes her way forth from the "flaxseed" probably does not extend beyond a period of five or six days. Thus it is that a delay in wheat sowing in the fall until after the flies have appeared and largely disappeared becomes of such vital

The first flies of the second or fall generation begin to issue from the "flaxseeds" about the middle of August and continue to issue till about

Map showing approximate dates in the fall, in various parts of the country, after which, under normal meteorological conditions, wheat may be sown without exposing it to serious attacks of the Hessian fly. The dotted line indicates the southern and western boundaries of Hessian fly distribution in the eastern United States. Owing to the influence of humidity and elevation on the time of appearance of the adults in the fail, the dates after which wheat can be sown with safety vary as between the semiarid West, the region of the Great Lakes and Middle West, and the Appalachian Mountain region.

the last of October, according to latitude, the maximum emergence occurring during the last two weeks of September or the first week in October, depending on the locality. This second generation infests volunteer wheat and all wheat sown before the fly-free date. The "flaxseeds" of fall-sown wheat till April of the next year, when adults issue from them and begin another season.

No farmer need be in the least uncertain as to the extent to which his wheat is infested in the fall. An infested plant stands straight upward in the drill row, with broader leaves of a darker green color, does not tiller, and therefore does not spread out and cover the ground between the rows. The Hessian fly attacks wheat, rye and barley, but not oats.

Last year during the period from late May until October, the department of agriculture issued repeated warnings and advisory statements to the public press in its weekly news letters, telling farmers that there was impending danger of a serious outbreak of the Hessian fly during the year 1915. These warnings, based on observations made from field stations throughout the entire area of the threatened outbreak, were not for the purpose of creating undue alarm, but were fully justified, in view of the great abundance of the Hessian fly at that time and the almost entire absence of the particular species of parasite or natural enemy that is most influential in holding the pest in check. It is to be hoped that farmers generally will profit by last year's experience, and in no case plant wheat during August, but wait until the date indicated on the accompanying map as to the proper time for planting in their locality.

Nowhere, either in the East or West, should wheat be sown on wheat stubble if this course can possibly be avoided. However, in the East. as well as in some portions of Iowa and Missouri. the wheat stubble is universally seeded to timothy and clover, and, therefore, any kind of cultivation of these stubble fields is rendered impractical, though in most cases it would be far petter to sacrifice all except the very best seeding. Neither can the fields be burned over without destroying the young seeding, and where these conditions prevail the only practical method that the farmer can use is that of delaying his wheat sowing until the files have made their way from the stubble to the fields and died there without being able to find any plants upon which to deposit their eggs.

It should be borne in mind that the most practical and effective methods of controlling the Hessian fly are identical with the best methods of producing the maximum yields of wheat. It is entirely possible for the farmer to fight the Hessian flay by the process of good farming, involving thorough cultivation, good seed, and a rotation of crops. The most serious objection to most practical and effective method that can be employed to control this pest in the field-namely, late sowing-is that there is danger of so delaying the growth of the plants that they do not become sufficiently advanced to enable them to withstand the winter. Much of the delay in the growth of late-sown plants in the fall can be eliminated by paying close attention to the preparation of the soil and to the quality of the seed; but if the soil lacks in fertility or has been poorly prepared, a slight attack, that vigorous plants overcome, is fatal, because of the badly nourished condition of the plant itself. The best advice that can be given is to begin the preparation of the field in the fall precisely as though it was expected to sow at a very early date, but instead of sowing use the disk harrow and the roller, even after it appears to be a waste of labor to till the field further. When a finely pulverized, compact seed bed has been secured, the seed should be selected.

unnaturally shriveled or otherwise imperfect kernels cannot produce healthy wheat plants. When the kernel sprouts it at once sends fibrous roots down into the soil from which to draw nourishment for the young plant, and if little or no nourishment is secured the wheat plants are put into somewhat the condition of stunted calves, pigs, or other farm animals which are underfed. These farmers should, above all others, be most familiar with the conditions of their own localities as to weather, soil and latitude. They should also of all others be the most familiar with their own fields. No one can lay down an exact date upon which each and every farmer may sow his wheat and be assured of absolute immunity from Hessian fly attack

OUR SPOILED HUSBANDS

How far the American wife can safely knw-tow to her lord and master without "spoiling" him is a question which depends more or less upon the man's personality, but there are some points which are of almost universal application.

The husband who works all day, works for the home and the dear ones in that home, is entitled to quite a large amount of fond wifely indulgence-in fact, up to a certain point he may be and should be "spoilt."

But beyond that certain point a very gentle, but very firm, line may be drawn, because the best man ever born will become selfish and exacting if a woman voluntarily constitutes herself his slave.

And there are some wives who almost unconsciously put themselves in this unsuitable and degrading position, who fetch and carry and pet and pamper until the master of the house becomes as dictatorial as an eastern potentate. Take the case of a couple who married only recently and who may be referred to as Mr. and Every morning now, before Mr. North gets up.

his wife spreads out socks and undergarments in exactly the most convenient and adjustable position; she takes the rasor out of the case; she fills the bath and she puts out a selection of the most likely ties. Then she waits in anxious humility until Harry opens the bathroom door and shouts "Ready!"which means that she may now brush and part and brilliantine his hair, fasten his collar, put in his links, lace his boots, pull up his socks. turn up his trousers, fillet his fish, butter his toast, pour out his coffee, fill his tobacco pouch, find his ticket, brush his hat, roll up his umbrella. collect his money, polish his eyeglasses, unfold his handkerchief, look for his watch and finally open the gate and watch him down the road. These or similar slavish attentions are repeated in the evening. Of course, the wife who refrains from doing all in her power to make home truly a "home. sweet home," for the man who works hard to pay the rent and taxes is not worthy of her will place upon the market this year wifehood. No affectionate consideration should 500,000 pounds of wool prepared under be spared, no wish overlooked, no request for the supervision of men familiar with gotten, no loving service withheld-it is her happiness to do all she can for him who does so much for her-her supreme pleasure to make her rolled, classed and baled according to will subservient to his.

But there are times and cases when a line must be drawn, and the wise wife is she who looks out for danger signals which tend to show that she is giving way just a little too much .-Cleveland Plain Dealer.

FRANK M. SPARKS of the Grand Rapids Herald announces an increase of state taxes 134 per cent in ten years.
Governor Ferris, who is said to want a third term, is investigating. Looks like locking the barn door after the horse is stolen. In his second campaign Mr. Ferris had much to say about his non-veto policy, placing the responsibility on the legislature, etc. Now, the average legislature can be depended upon to pile up expenses and the people need a governor who will keep tab on the "You-tickle-me-and-I'll-tickleyou" bills, and all extravagances and unwise and unneccessary expenditures of the public funds. He claimed that a large share of his first term expenses was due to the extreme or mistaken economy of Governor Osborn's administration; but Mr. Sparks shows that Governor Ferris' second term bills are 47.7 per cent more than those of his first. We like Mr. Ferris and believe him to be a fine man and a conscientious official; but we are reminded of some things Mr. Osborn said in his last campaign and see no adequate reason for breaking the third term precedent.

but few who boastingly advertise the fact in the local paper, as does a Mr. Mickle in the Omaha Bee. Discounting the "High-cost-of-living" talk and characterizing the complaint as silly, he tells how he has supported a wife and six children and saved money on a small salary and this is how: "No foolishness, no movies, candy, ice cream or fineries, no luxuries," except 40c a week on tobacco for himself, only one pound of meat a week and he eats it all himself, "the family is better off without it." substitutes cheese for butter and "doesn't leave the buying to his wife." Collier's editor says: "A few of him would make a Muckle." And his stenographer truly remarks: "People read this sort of thing and then wonder why some of us prefer to remain old maids." Economy is praiseworthy but depriving little children of all the joys of life while wasting 40c per week on tobacco for himself, is contemptible.

Hart, Schaffner & Marx Suits Are Going

This is about the time when we look over our stock criticically and decide that some of our suits must be disposed of, at a sacrifice if necessary.

> The only fault we can find with these suits is that they have not found anybody to buy them. Maybe they're not to blame for that; probably our fault. They're certainly good suits: worth all we've been asking for them.

Now they've got to go, and you are simply adding to the value you'll get by cutting the top off the prices. It's a very simple way to get things moving; we have a lot of confidence in your judgment in seeing the advantages to you in these prices.

by, the yacht Lola's owner, accidentally sees a torn photograph of a young girl. That night the consul's safe is robbed. The police find that Hornby is a fraud and the Lola's name a false one. In London Gregg is trapped nearly to his death by a former servant, Olinto. Visiting in Dumfries Gregg meets Muriel Leithcourt. Hornby appears and Muriel Interview. Gordon Gregg, dining aboard with Horn Leithcourt. Hornby appears and Muriet introduces him as Martin Woodroffe, her father's friend. Gregg sees a copy of the Woodroffe disappears. Gregg discovers the body of a muriered woman in Rannoch wood. The body disappears and in its place is found the body of Olinto. Muriel and Gregg search Rannoch wood together, and find the body of Armida, Olinto's wife. When the police go to the wood the body has disappeared. In London Gregg meets Olinto, alive and wefl. don Gregg meets Olinto, alive and well. Gregg traces the young girl of the torn photograph, and finds that she is Elma Heath, niece of Baron Oberg, who has taken her to Abo Finland, and that she holds a secret affecting Woodroffe. On his return to Rannoch Gregg finds the Leithcourts fled from Hylton Chater, who had called there. He goes to Abo, and after a tilt with the police chief, is conducted to Kajana, where he finds Elma, imprisoned. A surgical operation has made her deaf and dumb. He escapes with her.

CHARTER XI-Continued.

The unfortunate girl whom I was there to rescue drew back in fright of day. My ears were strained to against the wall for a single second. then, seeing that I had closed with the hulking fellow, she sprang forward, and with both hands seized the gun and attempted to wrest it from him. His fingers had lost the trigger, and he was trying to regain it to fire and so raise the alarm. I saw this, and with an old trick learned at Uppingham I tripped him, so that he staggered and nearly fell. An oath escaped him, yet in that moment Elma succeeded in twisting the gun from his sinewy hands, which I now held with a strength begotten of a knowledge of my imminent peril. He was huge and powerful, with a strength far exceeding my own, yet I had been reckoned a good wrestler at Uppingham, and now my knowledge of that most ancient form of combat held me in good stead. He shouted for help. his deep, hoarse voice sounding along the stone corridors.

As we were struggling desperately, the English girl slipped past us with the carbine in her hand, and with a quick movement dragged open the heavy door that gave exit to the lake. longer held the sentry's weapon in her hands. Then at the same moment I heard a voice outside cry in a low tone: "Courage, excellency! Courage! I will come and help you."

It was the faithful Finn, who had been awaiting me in the deep shadow, and with a few strokes pulled his boat up to the narrow rickety ledge outside the door.

"Take the lady!" I succeeded in gasping in Russian. "Never mind me." and I saw to my satisfaction that he guided Elma to step into the boat, which at that moment drifted past the little platform. I struggled valiantly, but I was slow-

A sudden idea flashed across my mind, and I continued to struggle, at the same time gradually forcing my enemy backward towards the door. He cursed and swore and shouted until. with a sudden and almost superhuman effort, I tripped him, bringing his head into violent contact with the stone lintel of the door. There was the sound of the crashing of wood as the rotten platform gave way, a loud splash, and he sauk like a stone, for although I stood watching for him to rise, I could only distinguish the woodwork floating away with the current. As I stood there in horror at my deed of self-defense, the place suddenly resounded with shouts of alarm, and in the tower above me the great old rusty bell began to swing, ringing its brasen note across the broad expanse of waters. Behind me in the passage I saw a light and the glitter of arms. A shot rang out, and a bullet whizzed past me. Then I jumped, and nearly upset the boat, but taking an oar I began to row for life, and as we drew away from those grim, black walls the dr. Faint and hungry, yet we still kept courage. Fortunately we found a little spring, and all three of us drank eagerly with our hands. But of food we had nothing, save a small piece of hard rye bread which the Finn had in his pocket, the remains of his evening meal, and this we gave to Elma, who, half famished, ate it quickly.

How many miles we trudged I have no idea. Elma's torn shoe gave her considerable trouble, and noticing her limping. I induced her to sit down while I took it off, hoping to be able to mend it, but, having unlaced it, I saw that upon her stocking was a large patch of congealed blood, where her foot itself had also been cut. I managed to beat the nails of the shoe with a stone, so that its sole should not be lost, and she readjusted it, allowing me to lace it up for her and smiling the while.

Forward we trudged, ever forward, across that enormous forest where the myriad tree trunks presented the same dismal scene everywhere, a forest untrodden save by wild, half-savage lumbermen. My only fear was that we should be compelled to spend another without shelter, and what its effect might be upon the delicately reared girl whose hand I held tenderly in mine. Training the Memory. Training the memory, as the term has been understood, is misleading. It would be better to say that you train yourself in the handling of various kinds of material, using all your faculties in the process. To remember, in the fullest sense of the term. you must assimilate. You must perceive the object, understand it and treat it rationally. Thus you get it fixed in your mind. The process changes as the material to be handled changes. If the material to be "worked up" is similar, the training gained in working up one kind will help in working up another. But in the slightest variation in the material there is a corresponding variation in the process, and some new elements

On Misery creek, at the foot of a rock from which he has fallen. Sally Miller fade George Lescott, a landscape painter, unconscious, and after reviving him test for assistance. Samson South and ally, taking Lescott to Samson's home, the met by Spicer South, head of the family, who tells them that Jesse Purvy has been shot and that Samson is suspected of the crime. Samson denies it. The shooting of Jesse Purvy breaks the truce in the Hollman-South feud.

He sauntered down the road, but. when he had passed out of vision, he turned sharply into the woods, and began climbing. His steps carried him to the rift in the ridge where the white cak stood centinel over the watch tower of rock. As he came over the edge from one side his bare feet making no sound, he saw Sally sitting there, with her hands resting on the moss and her eyes deeply troubled. She was gazing fixedly ahead and her lips were trembling. At once Samson's face grew black. Some one had been making Sally unhappy. Then he saw beyond her a standing figure, which the tree trunk had hitherto concealed. It was the loose-knitted figure of young Tamarack Spicer.

"In course," Spicer was saying, "we don't 'low Samson shot Jesse Purvy, but them Hollmans 'll 'spicion him, an' I heered just now thet them dawgs was trackin' straight up hyar from the mouth of Misery. They'll git hyar against sundown." Samson leaped violently forward.

With one hand he roughly seized his cousin's shoulder and wheeled him "Shet up!" he commanded. "What Tam'rack?" he inquired, his lips twisting in amusement. "Thet's my business."

"Well, git hit out-or git out yeself, afore I throws ye offen the clift." Sally showed no symptoms of alarm. Her confidence in her hero was absolute. The boy lifted his hand, and pointed off down the path. Slowly and with incoherent muttering, Spicer took himself away. Then only did Sally rise. She came over, and laid a hand on Samson's shoulder. In her blue eyes, the tears were welling.

"Samson," she whispered, "ef they're atter ye, come ter my house. I kin hide ye out. Why didn't ye tell me Jesse Jurvey'd done been shot?" "Hit tain't nothin' ter fret about, Sally," he assured her. He spoke awkwardly, for he had been trained to regard emotion as unmanly. "Thar hain't no danger."

She gazed searchingly into his eyes, and then, with a short sob, threw her arms around him, and buried her face on his shoulder. "Ef anything happens ter ye, Sam-she said, brokenly, "hit'll jest kill me. I couldn't live withouten ye, Samson. I jest couldn't do hit!" The boy took her in his arms, and pressed her close. His eyes were gasing off over her bent head, and his lips twitched. He drew his features into a soowl, because that was the only expression with which he could safeguard his feelings. His voice was "I reckon, Sally," he said, "I couldn't

CHAPTER V.

From time to time that day, neighbors had ridden up to Spicer South's stile, and drawn rein for gossip. These men brought bulletins as to the progress of the hounds, and near sundown, as a postscript to their information, a volley of gunshot signals sounded from a mountain top. No word was spoken, but in common accord the kinsmen rose from their chairs, and drifted toward their leaning rifles. "They're a-comin' hyar." said the head of the house, curtly. "Samson ought ter be home. Whar's Tam'rack?" No one had noticed his absence until that moment, nor was he to be found. A few minutes later, Samson's figure swung into sight, and his uncle met him at the fence.

"Samson, I've done asked ye all the questions I'm a-goin' ter ask ye," he said, "but them dawgs is makin' fer this house. They've jest been sighted a mile below."

willin' ter invite 'em in." Then, the two men turned toward the house. Already the other clansmen had disappeared noiselessly through the door or around the angles of the walls

Fifteen minutes later, Lescott, standing at the fence, saw a strange cavalcade round the bend of the road. Several travel-stained men were leading mules, and holding two tawny and impatient dogs in leash. In their number, the artist recognized his host of two nights ago.

They halted at a distance, and in while the dogs were yelping confidently and tugging at their cords, young Samson South-who should, by their prejudiced convictions, be hiding out in some secret stronghold-sat at the ton step of the stile, smoking his pipe, and regarded them with a lack-luster absence of interest. Such a calm reception was uncanny. After a whispered conference, the Lexington man

There was a half-mo- a sullen flush to the other's cheek ment of terrific suspense, then the beasts clambered by the seated figure, passing on each side and circled aimlessly about the yard—their quest unended. They sniffed indifferently about the trouser legs of the men who sauntered indolently out of the door. They trotted into the house and out again, and mingled with the mongrel home pack that snarled and growled hostility for this invasion. Then, they came once more to the stile. As they climbed out, Samson South reached up and stroked a tawny head, and the bloodhound paused a moment to wag its tail in friendship, before it jumped down to the road, and trotted gingerly onward. "I'm obliged to you, sir," said the man from the Bluegrass, with a voice of immense relief.

The moment of suspense seemed past, and, in the relief of the averted clash, the master of hounds forgot that his dogs stood branded as false trailers. But when he rejoined the group in the road he found himself looking into surly visages, and the features of Jim Hollman in particular were black in their scowl of smolder-

"Why didn't ye ax him," growled the kinsman of the man who had been shot, "whar the other feller's at?" "What other fellow?" echoed the Lexington man. Jim Hollman's voice rose trucuently, and his words drifted, as he meant them to, across to the ears of the clansmen who stood in the yard of Spicer South.

But Jim Hollman, whose eyes were fixed on Samson, refused to talk in a modulated tone, and he shouted his reply:

The Lexington man went back. For a minute or two Jim Hollman sat scowling down in indecision from his saddle. Then he admitted to himself that he had done all he could do without becoming the aggressor. For the moment he was beaten. He looked up and from the road one of the hounds raised its voice and gave cry. That baying afforded an excuse for leaving Mounting, they kicked their mules into a jog. From the men inside the fence came no note of derision, no faces until their enemies had passed out of sight around the shoulder of the mountain. The Souths had met and fronted an accusation made after the enemy's own choice and method. A jury of two hounds had acquitted bloodhounds to the family of Jesse them. Not Acquainted With Adam. In his interesting book of memories, "Sixty Years in the Wilderness," Sir Henry Lucy has an amusing story about Sir Francis Burnand. Sir Henry and Sir Francis were talking together at a big public luncheon when a very important-looking guest, arrayed in a brilliant uniform, came up and effusively shook hands with Burnand, who appeared surprised at the act.

"I see you don't know me from Adam," said the stranger. "My dear sir," answered Burnand gravely, "I didn't know Adam."

WOMAN CRIED

Suffered Everything Until Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Florence, So. Dakota. - "I used ( ) be very sick every month with bearing down pains and backache, and had headache a good deal of the time and very little appetite. The pains were so bad that I used to sit right down on the man advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I got a bottle. I felt better the next month se I took three more bottles of it and got well so I could work all the time. I hope every woman who suffers like I did will try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. P. W. I.ANSENG, Box 8, Allyn, Wash.

Why will women continue to suffer day in and day out or drag out a sickly, haifhearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such silments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

"Premium" Flour

As connected with Lily White Flour, the premium means that in order to secure the proper grades of the different varieties of wheat from which it is made we pay an extra price or "premium."

This is to encourage the farmer to consistently bring us the best of his yield. It is a policy that has been followed by this organization for years. You get the benefit in

But though the wheat we buy is the best that can be had for money, our process of milling demands that even more be done. The wheat is secured. Those who have seen the operation call itsanitary laundering. It is enough to say here that each individual kernel comes out ready to be milled, spotlessly, shiningly clean.

Each variety is milled separately and carefully watched. Then they are blended, a certain quantity of this, a certain amount of that until the result is a perfectly milled flour, successful in every purpose to which any flour may be put.

Consequently it is more economical and satisfactory to use than any other you can buy.
