Peter Fineis and Party in Overturned Automobile

What might have been a fatal accident occurred Saturday evening when Peter Fineis' car, containing Mr. and Mrs. Fineis and their brother and sister, Mr. and was, Mrs. Rice is at a farm house and cannot be moved for several days; Mr. Rice was cut on the head by a piece of the broken wind-shield so several stitches had to be taken; Mr. Fineis was slightly hurt in the stomach and on one of his shins, and Mrs. Fineis received a bad nervous shock and had her shoulder bruis-

They were returning to Port-land from Houghton lake and when near Elwell met a rig with two women in it who refused to give a share of the road. Mr. Fineis kept blowing his horn and slackening up, but as they paid no attention, rather than hit a ouggy with two women in, he urned farther out and because of a dense growth of shrubbery and weeds did not see the ditch until the machine was thrown over. The two men and Mrs. Fineis let go their hold and were thrown into the mud and water but Mrs. Rice hung to the ma-chine which landed on top of her, crushing her chest. The others began to look around for her and when they discovered her she was black in the face and could not speak and in three minutes more would have been crushed to death. The three, by lifting and shoving, succeeded in getting it loose and helped her out. No bones were broken but she was terribly bruised across the chest where the machine rested, her ace was badly swollen and she vas scarcely breathing. She was taken to a nearby farmhouse and two doctors and two trained urses were soon on the spot. The fenders of the machine were badly bent and the windshield and side lights broken. The women in the buggy hurried away. No one seemed to know them.

Superintendent Frazee reports enrollment in Lowell schools up to deptember 8 as follows: Total enrollment in all departments, 507; seniors, 16 boys and 16 girls, 32; total High school enrollment, 165; total non-resident enrollment, 90. Four seniors yet to be enrolled.

With the best of prospects attending, the public schools of Lowell are opening for the year's work. Although the classification of the students has not yet been completed indications would point to the largest enrollment in the history of the local institution. This is due to the fact that Lowell will soon have its new school building ready for occupancy and the pupils are anxious to have the advantage of the additional facilities consequent upon the competion of the structure.

With an attendance of about one thousand the Lowell Chautauqua for 1915 reached high water mark Friday evening, sept. 3, with the Kilties band as appreciated entertainers. This aggregation did much to bring up the average calibre of the ten programs, which as a whole were disappointing, especially in the musical numbers; though creditable mention should be made of Lecturere Spencer, Kelly, Mrs. Brown and Dr. Brown, and the Venetian Quartet.

Over five hundred season, tickets were pledged for a Chautauqua mext year but they were not turned over to the Central system which furnished this year's course. Contract will be placed with the course was liberal and the Board of Trade after paying last year's lastic and all bills has a balance.

Why Postpone a Profitable Investment?

It may take a score of years for some folks to finally have a good heating system installed, but that's because they have more patience than others.

All men, in their final decision, decide on the one thing that serves them best, but frequently they economize by looking at the dollars retained at the time by the purchase of a cheaper article.

They find these dollars are lost and others with them in them in the purchase of extra fuel, repairs and replacements. Then they decide on something good. We have the best there is made today: The Round Oak Moistair Furnace, also several types of the famous Peninsular furnaces. We have other cheaper ones, to be sure if you must have them, but we do not consider it a profitable investment. May we show you why this is true? We employ at the present time an expert tinner and furnace man and can do your work scientifically and in a workmanlike manner.

Two sessions were held, in the morning and afternoon. At the second session, the new law which convened them was discussed in all of its phases.

Two propositions entered into the discussion. The first was the power of the presiding judge. In one way many were convinced that he could, if so minded, be a czar. He could take judges out of their own circuit and put them in others without interference. Judge Wiest promised that he would not force any judge to leave his own circuit unless he voluntarily agreed to go.

The second proposition dealt with the compensation. An opinion of Attorney - General Fellows made to Auditor-General Fuller conveyed the impression that under the law, any presiding judge would not produce extra compensation from the state. CHAPTER XI-Continued

Samson did not appear at the Lesott house for two weeks after that He had begun to think that, if his going there gave embarrassment to the girl who had been kind to him. it were better to remain away. "I don't belong here," he told him-self, bitterly. "I reckon everybody that knows me in New York, except the Lescotts, is laughing at me behind my back." He worked flercely, and threw into his work such fire and energy that it came out again converted into boldness of stroke and an almost savage vigor of drawing. The instructor nodded his head over the easel, and passed on to the next student without having left the defacing mark of his relentless crayon. To the next pupil. he said:

"Watch the way that man South draws. He's not clever. He's elementally sincere, and, if he goes on, the first thing you know he will be a portrait painter. He won't merely draw eyes and lips and noses, but character and virtues and vices showing out through them."

And Samson met every gase with some one who might be laughing at him openly, or even covertly, instead of behind his back. The long-suffering fighting lust in him craved opportunity to break out and relieve the pressure on his soul. But no one laughed.

One afternoon late in November, a hint of blissards swept snarling down the Atlantic seaboard from the polar floes, with wet flurries of snow and rain. Off on the marshes where the Kenmore club had its lodge, the live decoys stretched their clipped wings, and raised their green necks restively into the salt wind, and listened. With dawn, they had heard, faint and far away, the first notes of that wild chorus with which the skies would ring until the southerly migrations ended -the horizon-distant honking of highflying water fowl.

Then it was that Farbish dropped in with marching orders, and Samson. yearning to be away where there were open skies, packed George Lescott's borrowed paraphernalia, and prepared to leave that same night.

While he was packing, the telephone rang, and Samson heard Adrienne's voice at the other end of the wire. "Where have you been hiding?" she demanded. "I'll have to send a truent officer after you." "I've been very busy." said the man.

a total of six, for in pursuance of the carefully arranged plans of Mr. Farbish, Mr. Bradburn had succeeded in inducing Wilfred Horton to run down for a day or two of the sport he loved. When Horton arrived that afternoon, he found his usually even temper ruffled by bits of maliciously broached goseip, until his resentment against Samson South had been fanned into danger heat. He did not know that South also was at the club and he did not that afternoon go out to the blinds, but so far departed from his usual custom as to permit himself to sit for several hours in the and Wilfred Horton were introduce and acknowledged their introduction with the briefest and most form nods. During the course of the most though reated side by side, each i fully designed affairs, the one element that made most powerfully for the success of Farbish's scheme was pure accident. The carefully arranged meeting between the two men, the adreitly incited passions of each, would still have brought no clash, had not Wilfred Horton been affected by the firsting effect of alcohol. Since his college days, he had been invariably abstemious. Tonight marked an exception.

He was rather surprised at the cordiality of the welcome accorded him, for, as chance would have it, except for Samson South, whom he had not yet seen, all the other sportsmen were men closely allied to the cal and financial elements upon which he had been making war. Still, since they seemed willing to forget for the time that there had been a breach, he was equally so. Just now, he was feeling such bitterness for the Ken-tuckian that the foes of a less personal sort seemed unimportant.

In point of fact. Wilfred Horton had spent a very bad day. The final straw had broken the back of his usually unruffled temper, when he had found in his room on reaching the Kenmore a copy of a certain New York weekly paper, and had read a page, which chanced to be lying face up (a chance carefully prearranged). It was an item of which Farbish had known, in advance of publication, but Wilfred would never have seen that sheet had it not been so carefully brought to his attention. There were hints of the strange infatuation which a certain young woman seemed to entertain for a partially civilised stranger who had made his entree to New York via the police court, and who wore his hair long in imitation of a biblical character of the same name. The supper at the Wigwam inn was mentioned, and the character of the place intimated. Horton felt this objectionable innuendo was directly traceable to Adrienne's ill-judged ter said nothing, the glance was subtle friendship for the mountaineer, and and expressive. WAS NOT FOR HER SLEEP

Little One Got What Consolation She Could Out of Foregoing Promlood Reward.

The parentally imposed afternoon nap has long been childhood's bane. Harry S. Smith, secretary of the park board was telling the other day of difficulties of afternoon napping experienced by his offspring. A youthful daughter is especially given to insomnia at the time in the afternoon when it is insisted that she shall map. It is no fault of hers. She strives strenuously to woo Morpheus, but to no avail. The sleep god is coquettish and he comes only when he can steal upon his victims. The other afternoon the tot was doing her best to sleep. Dutifully she closed her eyes, breathed rhythmically and counted sheep jumping over the fence, as instructed. Sleep would not come. But it would never do to disappoint a parent. So when the question came, "Are you sleeping, daughter?" she murmured slumberously,

But her message was not convincing. So she was offered a dime as a reward for sleeping. Time and again she made the effort, but always it was fruitless. Then she began to squirm. Finally she sat up in her bed. Her manner was eloquent of conviction of the futility of further effort, after resignation of claim upon the reward. "Oh, I don't care; I don't want the dime." she said. "My bank is a penny bank, anyhow."-Louisville Times.

The marketing of farm timber presents some of the same difficulties, but n an aggravated form, that the farmer meets in the selling other crops, says a Forest Service contribution of the riculture, just issued. The farmer finds it hard to get enough for his saw timber on the stump to the mill man, such sales ordinarily being made for a lump sum. The mill man, experienced in estimating, goes through the woods and sizes up the quantity and value of the timber he wants. The owner, being a farmer and not a lumberman, seldom knows anything about estimating lumber and has only the vaguest idea of what it ought to bring. The consequence of this condition is that the farmer often re

From "Michigan—the Land of Flenty."
HE climate of Michigan is insular to a marked degree on account of the influence of the great lakes.

The determining factors of climate for any locality are chiefly latitude and the relative distribution of land and water. Other important factors are the topography of its land surface and the situation of the area in question with relation to the general movement of storm centers.

All of Michigan is situated in a latitude that is conducive to some kind of agriculture, and its comparatively long days and short nights during the crop season are not only conducive to crop growth, but they reduce to a minimum late frosts in spring and early frosts in autumn.

In lower Michigan the longest day of the year in summer is nearly 15% hours, while at New Orleans the longest day of the year is a little more than 14 hours in length. In upper Michigan the longest day of the year is nearly 16 hours. The daylight promotes all vegetable growth, while the short nights reduce the probability of frosts and also shorten the period of diurnal coolness.
