Brushes

If hair brushes could talk they would first of all say, "Keep us dry!" If you cannot keep your hair brushes dry, keep them as dry as you can. They will last twice as long dry as they will wet. Probably the brush most easily kept dry and clean is one with a solid back or with an aluminum back. Ordinarily the more you pay for your brush the better it will be, and what is more, the cheaper it will be too.

> The Quality Advances More Rapidly Than The Price

The best way to get prices is to see the brushes and ask how much they are. From 25c up.

Lowell's new high school buildng was the scene of a large and happy gathering last Thursday evening, when Lowell High School Alumni association met for its fifteenth annual banquet.

The guests were met and welcomed at the entrance to the Junior high room by the reception committee, Dr. and Mrs. O. C. McDannell, Mr. and Mrs. Art Hill, Miss Edith Mange and Lee Lampkin. From there, at eight o'clock, they marched to the banquet hall in the gymnasium the high in the gymnasium, the high school orchestra furnishing appropriate music for the march as well as during the serving. He proceeded to give in his own good way, under the subject "Three of the Seven Ages," touching little talk on the old school days, greeting his former pupils present, and comparing the old log schoolhouse with its crudities to the splendid new building with its modern equipment, as good or better than that of any Michigan town of this size, at the same time reminding his audience that this accomplishment is the result of the influence of former pupils and graduates, which influence was put in shape to do this work by the present superintendent. He paid a kindly tribute to the Lowell business men, who are ever ready to promote any work for the benefit of Lowell. He ended with a few words to the graduates and the (Continued on last page,)

INSURE YOUR BUILDINGS

Insure your buildings against decay by using Pure Linseed Oil Paints---prices are a little higher--but no chances of being lower and it only adds a few dollars cost on an entire job, not enough to pay for delay.

Remember, a year's delay after your buildings need the paint costs you at least 15 per cent more for material to cover them-lumber is too valuable to neglect.

Governor Ferris was certain that the republican would nominate Roosevelt as their candidate for the presidency and he believed that Roosevelt's nomination would be the signal for Chase S. Osborn to place his name on the gubernatorial primary ballot. While there will be a strong demand made by the democratic leaders for the governor to carry the standard again this fall, state terials. house politicians believe the democratic chief executive will keep out of the contest this year. Another political announcement was made by National Committeeman Charles B. Warren of Detroit, when he declared most emphatically that he would not be a candidate for United States senator to succeed William Alden Smith in 1918. While Warren was issuing denials of his intention to enter the senatorial race in 1918, Alton T. State Fire Marshal Winship has issued a few hints how to prevent fire.

It is an old maxim that fire is good servant but a hard master. Shakespeare wrote: "A little fire is quickly trodden out; which, being suffered, rivers cannot quench."

Fires are the result of accident, of spontaneous combustion, and of design. If they have been accidental the cause can generally be discovered, and it will be found they might have been prevented.

If the following precautions are taken, fires from accident or spontaneous combustion will seldom occur: Keep your house, store or factory

Washington-President Wilson issued a call to National Guard organizations of every state in the union for service on the Mexican border.

Although the purpose of the action, as set forth in the formal call, is for the protection of the American frontier from invasion, the opinion prevailing throughout Washington is that it marks the first step of intervention in Mexico. SOCIAL SECRETARY BENHAM

Shortly before Mrs. Galt became Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, the social secretary at the White House, Miss Isabella Hagner, resigned to be married. Thereupon an old friend of the lady who was soon to become the mistress of the White House was appointed to the place, and she has filled the rather difficult position with conspicuous success. Miss Edith Benham, the social secretary, is a daughter of the late Rear Admiral Benham. Her mother was Miss Edith Seaman before her marriage. Miss Benham took up social secretary work after the death of her father. She was peculiarly fitted for it by education and environment. One of her first engagements was with Baroness Rosen, wife of the Russian ambassador, whom she served through that ambassador's regime here. She has also acted in the same capacity for Mrs. Bryce when Mr., now Lord, Bryce was British ambassador; for Mrs. Crane, wife of Secretary Murray Crane; for Mrs. Theodore Shonts during her Washington residence and during the festivities attending the marriage of Miss Shonts and the duc de Chaulnes; for Mrs. Marshall Field for two seasons, and for the first Mrs. Duncan McKim. Miss Benham was educated in Paris during the time of her father's duty would treat all armed Americans in in European waters and lived for some years on the Pacific coast. She is a charter member and secretary of the Society of Sponsors of the United States Navy. She did much of the research work needed in the compiling of the book, "Ships of the United States Navy and Their Sponsors," published by the society. She acted as sponsor at the christening of the cruiser San Francisco when her late father was on duty on the Pacific coast and was also sponsor for the torpedo boat Benham, named for her father. Not only is Miss Benham the daughter of an admiral, but the granddaughter of a commodore in the United States navy. She is a linguist of ability. The post of social secretary to the first lady of the land is one of no mean degree of responsibility.

Wilson's "Weakness."

Editorial from The Detroit News.

It may not much matter who administers the next presidential period of the United States. But it does matter that fairness and balance of national thought characterize this presidential campaign above all others. And there are many gratifying signs that the nation is disposed to judge calmly and with scrupulous justice between the claims of the two candidates and parties on the issues to be determined—esis to be they to schr "'yacillating weakness" "GAP'resident Wilson. It equally appears from the democratic preliminaries that their contention will rest upon the alleged wisdom and strength displayed by the president.

The difficulty in proving President Wilson to have been "weak" is a very real one, since the alleged "weakness" has not involved the nation in actual difficulty. It would have been possible for Mr. Wilson to have asked Congress to declare war on Mexico-or to have created such a state of affairs as to have compelled congress to declare war— the day after he came into office. And that war would have been going on now, with possible complications arising in Mexico's behalf from European and South American nations. A war with Mexico would have thrown our Monroe Doctrine into the world ring to be fought over-and the end of it no man could foresee. Of course, Mr. Wilson did not do that. This is part of the "weakness" charged against him.

Again: Mr. Wilson could have declared war on Germany the day after the Lusitania sunk. He would have had strong support from an angered country and an aroused congress. For days the nation was a dangerous mass of tinder, waiting only the igniting spark. The president knew that such heats of anger suddenly cool when the actual pressure of war begins to be felt, and that the people who cried loudest for war would be the very first to turn and rend the excitable president who gave them what they asked in a moment of irresponsibility. So, the thought of war was not even countenanced by the administration. And that is another item in the alleged "weakness" of the president.

Every course must be judged by its results. Another course than that which the president pursued in every question he has had to handle would have meant war. President Wilson never had any choice to make-it was always simply peace OR war. He always chose peace; and for that he has been called a vacillating weakling.

It is one of the strangest psy-chological exhibitions this country has ever offered to the analytical mind. Here is a nation spared the unnameable horrors of modern war, and yet a part of it professes to be dissatisfied, and a whole political party as-serts that it is right to be dis-satisfied. Would Germany, surveying her loss of 700,000 young men killed, and 1,300,000 men crippled for life—would Germany today be calling it "weakness" if by the exercise of diplomacy and by "the writing of notes," the Kaiser had been able to stave off the war? Would France have called it "weakness" in President Poincare, if he had been able to preserve France whole in the midst of world cataclysm? No; these men would have been hailed as being stronger than war itself! Well, in the same way, our own man mounts his shoulders; an-

The Common Mistake About Prices

THERE'S ONE MISTAKE THAT'S VERY COMMONLY MADE by many people when they go to buy things; it's the mistake of thinking that a PRICE really means anything, taken by ITSELF.

If you stop to consider that, you'll see at a glance how foolish it is to buy ANY-THING simply because it's LOW-PRICED; and yet when you consider much of the selling method employed these days, you'll see what a figure PRICE cuts in selling merchandise; you see how the quoting of a LOW PRICE will cause buyers to throng the counters—many of them buying without much knowledge of the REAL VALUE of the merchandise, but SIMPLY because it's LOW-PRICED.

Take the matter of men's clothes for an example. We have suits here as low as $10 and as high as $25. You can buy a suit at EITHER of these prices, or at-ANY PRICE in between, at almost any good clothing store. It's quite ABSURD for us to expect you to come to us for clothes just BECAUSE they're $10 or $25, or ANY OTHER price; you can match our PRICES almost anywhere.

Honestly, we don't WANT you to come here, nor EXPECT you to come for any such superficial reason. We would like to have you come here because of the SPIRIT OF SERVICE we have; because your money—$10 or $25—is LESS IMPORTANT to us than your SATISFACTION; because WHATEVER the price you pay, we're going to see that you get MORE VALUE per dollar than you'il get anywhere else. We want you to come for president has been stronger than other follows; he holds four men war itself. He was strong enough to thwart the tricks of other nations to lure us into this war. He was strong enough to thwart then the athelete begins to walk the war party at home that tried its best to goad us into this war. If that is "weakness," to what shall we give the name of strength? A great deal of fun has been had over "note writing"—although we used in other days to be fond of quoting "The pen is mightier than the sword." But President Wilson had just two tools he could use—his pen with his brain behind it, OR YOUR LIFE. That its of the past President with them the athelete begins to walk with them. He sways and strains. He chooses his footing with painful care. His limbs look as if they might collapse beneath him, But does anyone call that weakness? No; for they do not look at the swaying, but at the tremendous burden borne.

Likewise, in the more trying days of the past President Wilson had just two tools he could use—his pen with his brain behind it, OR YOUR LIFE. That the war party at home that tried with them. He sways and strains.

The system of ice delivery must be as efficient as our mail service or other public utilities. Only when we remember that practically the entire current supply of household foodstuffs are at the mercy of the ice man do we realize the importance of the service rendered.

The cost of ice and necessary delivery service is small when compared with the actual saving of foodstuffs.

Reliable ice service is the back bone of economy and health in the home during the summer months. Analyze the proposition fairly! Horses that serve on the ice wagon are only in service four months of the year. Other equipment and putting up ice cost a large amount of money. Still the price of ice and service rendered is about one per cent of the actual cost of foodstuffs protected. Pretty cheap insurance when you stop to think it over. Figure this out for yourself and you'll decide that efficient ice service is worth while.

CHAPTER I.

At the Home of Hugo Chevet. It was early autumn for the clusters of grapes above me were already purple, and the forest leaves were tinged with red. And yet the air was soft, and the golden bars of sun flickered down or the work in my lap through the laced branches of the trellis. The work was but a pretense, for I had fled the house to escape the voice of Monsieur Cassion who was still urging my uncle to accompany him on his journey into the wilderness. They sat in the great room before the freplace, drinking, and I had beard enough already to tell me there was treachery on foot against the Sleur de la Salle. To be sure it was nothing to me, a girl knowing naught of such intrigue, yet I had not forgotten the day, three years before, when this La Salle, with others of his company, had halted before the Ursuline convent, and the sisters bade them welcome for the night. 'Twas my part to help serve, and he had stroked my hair in tenderness. I had sung to them, and watched his face in the firefight as he listened. Never would I forget that face, nor believe evil of such a man. No! not from the lips of Cassion nor even from the governor, La Barre. I recalled it all now, as I sat there in the silence, pretending to work, how we watched them embark in their canoes and disappear, the Indian paddlers bending to their task, and Monsleur la Salle, standing, bareheaded as he waved farewell. Beyond him was the dark face of one they called De Tonty, and in the first boat a mere boy lifted his ragged hat, I know not why, but the memory of that lad was clearer than all those others, for he had met me in the hall and we had talked long in the great window ere the sister came, and took me away. So I remembered him, and his name, Rene d'Artigny. And in all those years I heard no more. Into the black wilderness they swept and were lost

The Choice of a Husband. It was just before dark when Moasieur Cassion left us, and I watched him go gladly enough, hidden behind the shade of my window. He had been talking for an hour with Chevet in the room below; I could hear the rattle of glasses, as though they drank, monsieur, 'twas on that account I and the unpleasant arrogance of his voice, although no words reached me clearly. I cared little what he said although I wondered at his purpose in being there, and what object he might have in this long converse with my uncle. Yet I was not sent for, and no doubt it was some conference over furs, of no great interest. The two were in some scheme I knew to gain advantage over Sieur de la Salle, and were much elated now that La Barre held power; but that was nothing for a girl to understand, so I worked on with busy fingers, my mind not forgetful of the young Sieur d'Artigny. Chevet did not return to the house after Monsleur Cassion's canoe had disappeared. I saw him walking back and forth along the river bank, smoking, and seemingly thinking out some problem. Nor did he appear until I had the evening meal ready, and called to him down the arbor. He was always gruff and bearish enough when we were alone, seldom speaking, indeed. except to give utterance to some order, but this night he appeared even more morose and silent than his wont, not so much as looking at me as he took seat, and began to eat. No doubt Cassion had brought ill news, or else the appearance of D'Artigny had served to arouse all his old animosity toward La Salle. It was little to me, however, and I had learned to ignore his moods, so I took my own place silently, and paid no heed to the scowl with which he surveyed me "Cassion is Not Likely to Be Caught across the table. I grow tired of my work as a college instructor and buy a New England farm on sight. I inspect my farm and go to boord at Bert Temple's. Bert helps me to hire a carpenter and a farmer. Hard Cider, the carpenter, estimates the repairs and changes necessary on the house. Mike commences plowing. I start to pruns the orchard tree. Hard Cider builds book cases around the twin fireplaces. Mrs. Temple hires Mrs. Pillig for me as a housekeeper, and announces the coming of a new boarder from New York, a haifsick young woman who needs the country air. I discover that Stella Goodwin will make a delightful companion and believe she ought not to return to the hot and dusty city for a long time. I squeeze her hand slyly.

The girl dropped her rag is the pail, and stood looking about.

"Oh, the nice room!" she cri "And oh, the dirty plano!"

I went out to begin on the books, when I returned I brought the pile bench, as well. The girl was busy we the east window, and I set the bed down in silence. She was seated up it, when I arrived with the third lot and through the house were danced the sounds of a Bach gavotte.

She stopped playing as I enter and looked up with a little smile apology.

"Please go on!" I cried.

"I guess we won't do any more arches today," I replied, "or you won't, at any rate. You'll go home and rest." She looked at me an instant with just the hipt of her twinkle coming back. "I'm so unused to taking orders," she said, "that I've lost the art of obedience. Move the post a little to the right, please." I did so, and we worked on in stlence. We had built the wide central arch by the time the sun began to drop down into our faces. There were only five arches more to build.

"I shall write tonight and have the roses hurried along," said I.

We walked back toward the house and looked over the lawn, past the sundial, and saw the farm through the trells, and beyond the farm the trees at the edge of my clearing, and then a distant roof or two, and the far hills. The apple blossoms were fragrant in the orchard. The persistent song sparrows were singing. The shadow of the dial post stretched far out toward "It is pointing toward the brook."

I said nothing about her coming to the farm; I don't know why. Somehow, I was plaued. I wished her to make the first move. In some way, akle, hock, stiffe, knee or throat. It was all due to my asking her to choose the paint for my dining room, and that seemed to me ridiculous. There was no sun to wake me in the morning, so that I slept till half-past six. Outside the rain was pouring steadily down, and I found Bert rejoicing, for it was badly needed. After breakfast I waylald Miss Goodwin. "No work on the trellis today," said , swallowing my pique; "so I'm going to fix up the south room. I'm going to make twin fires out of some of the nice, fragrant apple wood you haven't sawed for me, and hang the Hiroshiges, and unpack the books, and have an elegant time-if you don't make me do it The girl shot a look around Mrs.

Bert's sitting room, where a small owl stood on the mantel under a glass case and a transparent pink muslin sack filled with burst milkweed pods was draped over a crayon portrait of Bert as a young man. I followed her glance and then our eyes met. "Just the same, they are dear, good souls," she smiled.

"Of course." I answered. "But to sit here on a cold, rainy day! You may read by the fire while I work. Only please come!"

"May I read 'The Foundation of the Nineteenth Century,' Doctor Upton?"

she said. "You may read the dictionary, if you wish." I replied.

She went to get her raincoat. It was cold out of doors, and the rain drovin our faces as we splashed down the road. The painters had made a fire in the kitchen range, and as we stepped in the warmth greeted us in a curious. friendly way. I brought several logs of dead apple wood into the big room and soon had the twin hearths cheerful with dancing flames. Then I went back to the shed, and brought the two cushions which had been on my window-seats at college, to place them on the settle. But as I came into the room, lustead of finding the girl waiting to sit by the fire, I saw her with sleeves rolled up washing the west window. Beyond the Frontier

By Randall Parrish

A fine new story of love and adventure by one of the greatest of American fiction writers.

It tells of early days in the great Middle West when the intrepid La Salle and his faithful friend Tonty, were blazing the way for civilization.

You will enjoy every installment of this remarkable historical story as it is published cerially in these columns.
