Looking Back Over 67 Winters

LOWELL AS WEBSTER MORRIS REMEMBERS IT IN 1856, BEFORE VILLAGE DAYS

Webster Morris as he looked in 1867. Editor Ledger—Dear Sir: In compliance with your request for a few reminiscences of Lowell in the early days, will try to give you readers some faint idea of conditions in Lowell in 1856—sixty-seven years ago; let them compare them with the present and draw their own conclusions.

It was in August of that year, and nature was doing its best (so it seemed to me) to outlive itself in magnificent gifts. To my young eyes the woods, water and sky were nowhere else as beautiful, or could be. The village itself could not share in these advantages. In fact it was not a village at all, not being incorporated until the next year. A country road, lined irregularly on both sides for three-fourths of a mile with cheap wooden buildings, would more nearly describe Lowell as it was in 1856. The two best looking buildings as I recollect them were a store on the corner east of the Methodist church and the Lowell house. Either structure would have been a credit to any prosperous village. A school house stood on the present site of the church, and a maiden lady named Jennings conducted a private school at the foot of the hill east and north. Her home stood close to the residence of Stephen Denny, one of the earliest settlers. He was a fine old Frenchman, and had a flock of children. James Ecker, jolly, genial soul, lived on Main street further east. These two schools comprised the only educational institutions of the village. Here the three boys were taught, and a boy or girl who went higher had to go away from Lowell to do it. As a result but few were higher, but many took a course in the school of experience where hard knocks was the master. On the street leading to the bridge from the schoolhouse Jake Chapman built a home, and further south Joseph Wilson and my father did the same. The three buildings are now as then. The old schoolhouse was moved to near the point of the triangle made by the new street now used going south. That street was not opened until 1870. The Baptist church was presided over by Rev. Charles Gluba. There were but a few buildings on Main street west of the M. E. church, until near Washington street. Ted Howe lived on the south side and Mr. West, father to Jud and Hiram, near by.

The three-story brick at Main and Washington occupies the site of a large wooden building owned and occupied by King & Amphlett; on or next to the corner south of the M. E. White shoe shop and east several small wooden buildings, one occupied by a young man named Chas. Krause, harness maker; another by a man named Porter, the only one of the law in Lowell. On main, west of Washington, north side, stood the Lowell house, now occupied by the Chandler Johnson building (Masonic hall or feed block), and west at Monroe, now occupied by the City hall and Pullen block, was another big rambling structure used as hotel, saloon, hall alley, billiard room, etc. In this building the stranger could "sit in" on any game from craps to "draw," and was lucky if he escaped with a whole skin. On the corner south a man named Savery kept a meat market, the same building stands as it did then. Milo Hiller afterward acquired the property, and for several years Mrs. H. occupied the ground floor as a millinery store, the upper story being used by Mr. H. as a photographer gallery. This block was built nearly solid, one place was Young's grocery, another Dutch Albert's (the only name I remember here) was also there. The Masonic building (old then) was occupied by Chapin & Booth, general store. The next lot east was vacant. Then a year or two later Cyrus Clark moved in a building for a drug store, and next to it on the corner became the last resting place of the big store, east of the M. E. church, heretofore mentioned. The Clark store was also moved from the locality, and both were burned down during the war. The building now occupying the site of the Clark store was built by the writer in 1867. Moving buildings was a common practice in those days, and few business places could boast of having been built where they stood. Beginning at the site of the bank and going west to the mill were a few shanty buildings, and a few more in the moved-in buildings. The Lowell mills were then as now. In the fall of 1856, John Blain moved his smithy from a point east of the foot of the hill to the north side, on the corner of Main and Monroe, now occupied by the Graham building. Further west were a few one-story buildings, one used by the postoffice, one by D. H. Mason, and one by the Lowell house. There was a large on-the-ground cottage near the mill. There were no buildings on the bridge, and to a man up a tree, looking as they did, were never had been. Nature did much for Lowell, but forty years ago some of its citizens destroyed its greatest charm—the river.

What's Doing in Church Circles

EVENTS PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE WITH LOWELL CHURCH WORKERS

Lowell Methodist News "You would never move to a town where there were no churches. Are you showing your appreciation by attending?"

Regular services next Sunday as usual. The enrollment of the Vacation Bible school is 92, with a fine daily average. Monday the teachers planned a surprise for the boys and girls by showing the slides which illustrated some of the songs they are now learning. The Sunday Day W. F. Kendrick visited the school and spoke highly of the work being done.

The delegates who recently attended the State Epworth League Institute held in Albion, gave their reports last Sunday evening. They were certainly very interesting and several of our young people are already planning to attend the institute next year.

The election of the lay delegate to annual conference that was to have taken place last Sunday at Vergennes was postponed until next Sunday afternoon.

MOTHERLESS GIRL, HERSELF A MOTHER, TAKEN TO ASYLUM The Saranac Advertiser of July 25 has the following:

Mrs. Mildred Moore, 17 years of age and the mother of a two-month-old babe, was taken to Traverse City Friday for treatment for her mental condition, which recently became pitiful. She was formerly Mildred Colwell, living north of the river and east of Saranac, and her mother died some years ago. She was married at 16 and officers state her life has been an unhappy one. She was taken to a rescue mission in Grand Rapids when her baby was born and since that time has been suffering much from physical ailments. It is believed that with proper care she will recover entirely. Her husband is said to be in Grand Ledge and it is stated that efforts are being made to get in touch with him. ### Farm Bureau Picnic Camp Lake Aug. 1.

August 1 has been set for the second annual Kent County Farm Bureau picnic. Camp Lake, a mile and a half east and one and a quarter miles north of Sprta is the spot. Dr. Eben Mumford, well known to Kent county farmers, will address the picnickers after dinner.

H. A. Fick of Kent City will have charge of the sports, of which there will be a plenty. Horse shoe pitching, bundle pitching, base ball, swimming and others. Winners in the "barnyard golf" events will represent Kent county at the tournament being staged by the West Michigan State Fair this year. Two base ball teams representing different parts of the county will cross bats in the afternoon. A. D. Longfellow, owner of the grove where the picnic is to be held, has a five dollar prize for the person who can walk a greatest pole and take a flag from the top of it.

The pole is suspended from the end of the dock over the water. Being very bathing suits. A tug of war will decide who has the strongest men, the north or south half of Kent county. A box of cigars goes to the winners.

There is an excellent bathing beach for those who want to cool off. Plans are under way to have music from one of the bands in the northern part of the county. Last year it was estimated that 2,000 people attended the picnic at Lowell and an excellent time was reported by all.

People in the northern part of the county know pretty well how to get to Camp Lake, but for the others we would say to go north on M-13 two miles north of Rockford, then west on gravel road six miles, then north about a mile and a quarter. Those who can get to the picnic ground from the south should come up M-54 and go east through the main street of Sprta about one and a half miles and then north.

Ypsi-Reed Shipping Baby Cabs East-West

The Ypsilanti Reed Furniture Company shipped this week from its Lowell factory two carloads of baby cabs to Chicago and one carload to New York City. So far, the West has the best of it; but when those New York babies see the Lowell cabs, we expect the howl for more will make little old Chicago sit up and raise her lid.

Anyhow, the Lowell factory is well cleaned up on its old orders and is ready to care for some nice orders taken by the company salesmen at the Grand Rapids furniture show; and in a business way we calculate the sun is going to shine on both sides of the Ypsi-Reed's Lowell fence pretty soon and start a little real prosperity romping over on the surrounding community.

Let 'er shine! Say we.

Sarcophagus of Alexander the Great

One of the greatest masterpieces of ancient art is the sarcophagus of Alexander the Great. It was discovered in 1867 by men who were excavating near Sidon. It is constructed from a pure white block of Paros marble, eleven feet long, five and three-fourths feet wide and four and two-thirds feet high, and is ornamented by a lid nearly three feet high. The relief sculpture on the front represents a victory of Alexander.

We are prepared to execute the order for an imposing sarcophagus or a simple, memorial tablet. The smallest order is executed with painstaking attention to details as one of larger dimensions.

Looking Back Over 67 Winters (Continued From First Page.) On the west side there were several stores--five or six--which were cleaned out by fire during the winter of '56 and '57, but were quickly rebuilt and six or seven years later again destroyed. Jarve Train then set the pace with his opera house, since which no wooden buildings have been built on the block. On the site of the City bank and several stores west stood the Franklin house, presided over by Arza King, and north of the bank on the river side U. B. Williams held forth. Among other names I remember were A. L. Dresser, Norman Blais, Merritt Wilson, Simon Hunt, Arvine Hunter, Henry W. Booth, Leonard Hunt, Geo. Clutz, Geo. Einarson, a Mr. Blaisdell, Henry Bosworth, Ed. Crow, Abe Vandenberg, Ad. Kniffin, Myron Savery, Dr. Arvin Peck, A. M. Ellsworth, C. R. Perry and Shamus Way, Cyrrian and John S. Hooker, John Shear, Earl Hopper, and Geo. Avery, Chas. Bass, Knight, Hatch, Hildreth and many others. I forgot to mention the fact that the Lowell house was built of logs originally, but so camouflaged with siding, lath and plaster that no one would have guessed the truth. When the building was burned in the Spring of 1865 the secret was revealed. The logs were not entirely consumed until several weeks after. W. J. M.

U. S. FAIR SHOW AID TO FARMERS PROGRESSIVE DAIRY METHODS WILL BE FEATURE OF EXHIBIT TO HAVE LATEST INFORMATION Heading the big dairy exhibit, which is intended to assist Michigan farmers to greater production and more profits in their dairy work, the United States government is to erect 25 attractive booths at the $5,000,000 Michigan State Fair which will be held from August 31 to September 9. Dairy herd improvement is taught with the view of encouraging farmers to raise pure bred stock so that they may have a double market--sales of milk and pure bred calves. Maps will show that the states having the greatest number of pure bred bulls are the states with the highest average milk production. It will be shown as a result of investigation into the cost of milk production that the farmer spending over 65 cents for feed for each dollar worth of milk produced is losing money. Interesting relationships between the various factors of production, which show definitely the greater or lesser power of the high-producing cows, are also presented. Extensive information will be supplied on the feeding of calves in various sections. An interesting bit of information will be the government's announcement of the finding of a meal that is a satisfactory substitute for milk. Increasing milk production through herd management will be demonstrated for the benefit of the dairymen. Here it will be shown that milking increased production 11.5 per cent. Box stalls, it will be shown, increase production 5 per cent as compared with stanchions, while exercise was proven to slightly increase the production of butterfat and to increase feed consumption. How to eliminate silage savor and odors will be explained as will the use of dairy products on the farm, and methods of cleaning milking machines. Scientific breeding of dairy cattle to predetermine the qualities of offspring will be one of the lessons taught in the movement for better cattle. Incidentally, the investigators have determined that nearly all the Holstein cattle in the United States are descended in a direct male line from one bull.

Green butter, condensed milk, pasteurization, dairy statistics, moving pictures, cow-testing, co-operative marketing, value of quality, international trade, and costs are also mentioned in the government program. "This exhibit," said George W. Dickinson, secretary-manager of the fair, "is quite exhaustive and should prove of immense value to all those engaged in the production and sale of dairy products. It is new in nearly every detail and up to the minute in every way." Pride South Before a Fall. A young society matron was talking her baby for an airing in its buggy. She was fairly grunting down the boulevard, so proud was her pride in the first born. Two little girls, playing on the street, looked up at her as she passed, then they turned to the other and said, "Now, that's what I'm going to be when I grow up. I'm going to be a maid, so I can take people's babies out for an airing."--Kansas City Star.

Disorder Destroyed Love. I was a bricklayer, and had our trade in love with the Latin teacher. He was the most looking man I ever saw. I had ever heard! One day I stepped at the place with my brother, and saw a detour. Dirty shirts, soiled collars and crumpled up suit were strewn all around the room. The sight quite overhauled me. Love flew out of the window.--Starbuck.

Therapeutic Found Only in Cayton. The mineral fountain, now largely lost to the manufacturer of the nation for the most looking man I ever saw. I had ever heard! One day I stepped at the place with my brother, and saw a detour. Dirty shirts, soiled collars and crumpled up suit were strewn all around the room. The sight quite overhauled me. Love flew out of the window.--Starbuck.

Game for Broken Green Springs. According to an Ohio orientalist's experiments, water springs are broken during thunderstorms by the sudden change that occurs in the moisture in the air.
