MOONSHINE STILL RAIDED

CLARENCE AND LOUISE REUTELSTER HELD FOR TRIAL IN KENT CIRCUIT COURT.

Clarence Reutelster and wife Louise were arrested Sunday night or Monday morning by Deputy Sheriff Pat Bowes charged with the manufacture and possession of the so-called moonshine liquor and the former was lodged in the Village jail. Arraigned before Justice A. M. Andrews they were bound over for trial at the Kent circuit court, bail being fixed at $500 each. Same was furnished and the accused were released.

Milo Thornton, brother of Mrs. Reutelster, who was arrested by Marshall Layer on the same night on the Reutelster premises for being drunk, was fined $20 and costs.

All three arrests followed complaint call at 9 P. M., Saturday by neighbors to Deputy Bowes that a disturbance at the Reutelster house had alarmed the neighborhood for the safety of a child, a call that was promptly answered by Mr. Bowes, although he had stated that he would not mix in purely village affairs after severance of his official relations therewith a year or so since.

Following the arrest of Reutelster over the premises until Monday at 4 a. m., when, armed with sufficient authority, the arrest of Mrs. Reutelster was made by him.

A moonshine outfit, which had been taken apart and the different parts scattered and concealed about the premises, was captured, a bag of hot mash having been dumped on the Deputy's leg as he lay in hiding watching the performance.

Considerable interest was manifested in the display of paraphernalia at the City hall later Monday morning before the major portion thereof together with several gallons of strong liquor were removed to the Sheriff's office in Grand Rapids by other deputies.

Reports of "doings" at the Reutelster house have been current about town for a year or more and the concluding performance is a natural and unavoidable result.

It seems that Officer Bowes has, at least, a valid claim on the Village for a new pair of pants, as one leg of the same was discolored by the hot and moist mash. We hope he will take no offense when we suggest that right there is where he "got his foot in it."

WOULD MARK BEAUTY SPOTS IN KENT COUNTY

Several Grand Rapids organizations already are carrying on the work for cleaner residences and preservation of natural beauties in Kent county. The Grand Rapids Advertising club will have as one of its policies in the fairgrounds tourist camp the keeping of the camp in excellent condition for each arriving tourist.

Efforts also are being made to post signs on the various highways near beautiful scenery asking motorists to stop and enjoy the outlook. The Isaac Walton League, through Fred Utley, the Grand Rapids Motor Club have taken up this signing proposition with the road commission. One view in particular is mentioned as worthy of marking—that on M54 about a half-mile south of Lamoreaux road. From the hilltop there persons can see miles across Kent county.—Grand Rapids Press.

GENE WOOD JOINS HIS LATE WIFE

Burial of C. Eugene Wood, a former resident of Lowell was made in Oakwood cemetery, Monday, under Masonic auspices. Mr. Wood died in Lansing, Friday following a brief illness.

He had been a resident of Lansing since 1916, going there with his family from Lowell, where they had lived for ten years, coming here from Saranac, where all the children were born. He was an instructor in patternwork in the Engineering department of the Michigan State College. Later he was State Sealer of Weights and Measures. For two years he was City Sealer of Weights and Measures in Lansing.

He was a member of Lowell Lodge, No. 90, F. & A. M., under whose auspices the burial was made.

Mr. Wood was born in Brooklyn, Michigan, July 6, 1862. He was married to Maggie A. Green at Ionia, 37 years ago, who died February 23, last.

Surviving are one son, J. Clyde Wood, 223 No. Magnolia, Lansing; three daughters, Mrs. Roy Crowe of Northville, Mrs. Lester A. Parker and Miss E. Blanche Wood of 1891 Burlingame, Detroit, a brother, Rev. E. K. Lewis, Bellevue and one granddaughter, Margaret Anne Wood of Lansing.

ROCKFORD YOUTH IS QUIZZED AFTER CAR KNOCKS DOWN GIRL.

A youthful motorist, thought to have been driving members of a Rockford baseball team to their homes following a picnic at Lowell, was believed by officers responsible last night for running down nine-year-old Eleanor Farr in the village of Cannonburg and leaving the girl, her left leg fractured, helpless in the road.

Upon receiving a call from Cannonburg on the accident, Sheriff William L. Smith called Deputy Sheriff Spring at Rockford to intercept the party upon its arrival at that town. Spring reported last night he stopped a car he believed had figured in the accident, but the driver, a Rockford youth, denied having hit the girl. He was ordered to appear before the sheriff today for questioning.

The girl was taken to Butterworth hospital and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Glendon O. Farr, of Port Arthur, Texas, were notified. The Farris had been visiting Mrs. Farr's mother at Cannonburg. Deputy Sheriff Edward Linkfield, in charge of the investigation, was informed by witnesses that the car hitting the child was speeding 40 miles an hour through the village.—Grand Rapids Herald, June 5.

Mebby Yes, and Mebbly No By R. W. McCULLOCH (© 1925, Western Newspaper Union)

THE little old man set a cautious foot on the topmost step and let his face twist awry with the pain of the climb, before he saw the shatteringly figure standing at the head of the rickety stair. "Sorry, Mrs. Hurraday," he said, "but it was you that guessed right after all when you—" He stopped there. The lady was not the only one waiting in the studdy hall. He saw a head or two at nearly every door except his own. "Oh, you needn't have got me up a party!" he exclaimed. "I told you I'd give up the room today if I didn't find a job!" The woman's fat fingers clutched his wasted arm. "Oh, Mr. Dicks!" she whispered. "He's shot 'er! Why don't the police ever come?" "What's that?" he asked in surprise. A man, clad only in trousers and a red undershirt, came edging toward them. He stopped at arm's-reach from a closed door and called harshly: "Come out o' that!" In a moment he leaned and his fist struck the door a blow that was promptly answered by a shot from within. The man in the red undershirt fled, heads vanished, and doors slammed. Mrs. Hurraday's flopping heels clattered down the stairs; but from below she looked back at the little old man left alone in the hall. He stood quite still for a time; then she saw his face take on something like a smile, and he moved away. Hearing his limping step, she took courage and crept back. She saw him standing before the door in which a white flick now appeared, heart-high. In one of the panels, where he stooped and tried to peer through the newly made bullet-hole. "Open up," he said gently, as he knelt. "Open up and come out!" "Low o' me!" Mrs. Hurraday gasped. She put her two fat, griny hands before her eyes and turned away. She heard the old man's halting step on the bare floor before she dared to look again. She saw him go into his own room and return with a chair. "Come out," he called, "or I'll be climbing in to get you." At last the old man got his leg through the transom and was struggling himself under the open sash when

"Oh, officer!" Mrs. Hurraday sobbed. "Such a deal for anyone to give a poor widow woman like me! An' they only took the room a hour ago. Murder an' suicide both! An' old Mr. Dicks is goin' in to open up the door!" One of the patrolmen mounted the chair and looked into the room. With a quick movement he drew his gun. "What is it, only?" asked the sergeant, in a whisper. The officer, with his eyes at the transom, waved back a warning. He saw a young man, chalk-white, crouching in a corner, a revolver held steadily before him. He saw an old man limp toward the crouching figure, swerve toward the single window to avoid stepping over a slippers; grayish leap on the floor, turn and stand as if waiting. Then an open, slow-swinging hand hid two staring eyes for a moment as it landed against the white face. The crouching youth straightened, shrunk back, let the revolver fall. Daily, the patrolman on the chair, had shoved the barrel of his gun over the edge of the transom frame. He waited, then brought the weapon down. He eased himself to the floor and moved the chair aside. When the key in the lock turned, he sprang into the room. After the ambulance surgeon had gone in, Daily came out, notebook in hand. "The woman's dead—murder, all right," he said, "attempted suicide, too, maybe—or I guess wrong."
