SCHOOL NOTES.
 The Agricultural department of the high school has tested several bushels of corn for different farms. The percentage germination ranges from 7.7% to 90% with the average between 50% and 70%. This shows that corn must be planted thick with a large risk or else tested to insure an even stand.
 We are willing to help you with your testing.
 Agricultural Department.
 Athletic Association was held at the Y. M. C. A. building, Grand Rapids, last Saturday afternoon. The meeting was well represented by nearly every high school outside of Grand Rapids. The association voted unanimously to again come to Lowell for the County meet, Friday, June 4th, was selected as the date of the meet.
 The meeting manifested good prospects of the most extensive and most keen, contesting for honors than any previous meet.
 Seymour Heschke, a graduate of Lowell High school in class of '25, won honors in stock judging while attending M. S. C. this winter. Seymour was in competition with about 150 other short course students, part of whom were doing second year work. These second year students were taking stock judging as regular class study. Seymour, with only the preparation given in his high school department won the silver loving cup for placing first in judging beef cattle. Besides this, he was third from highest in all judging.
 The agricultural department of Lowell High school does not take too much credit from this honor, however, as Seymour is a student of agriculture outside of his classroom as well as in there.

KEENE FIRE TAKES HOME

KEENE FARM BUILDINGS FATALLY DESTROYED IN TUESDAY NOON BLAZE. WIND FAVORED FIRE.
 The farm home and barn of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Carr on M. 66 in Keene township, seven miles north-east of Lowell were totally destroyed by fire at noon Tuesday, supposed to have been caused by a defective chimney.
 The direction of the wind favored the spread of the flames to the 40x60 barn, which with all its contents was destroyed. The family car in one of the sheds was saved, as was the granary, though the contents of the latter were damaged by water.
 Most of the household goods and some clothing were saved by the neighbor women, as the men were out on the farms and had not come home to dinner. Nothing was saved from the cellar. Loss about half covered by insurance.
 About forty neighbors gathered in the afternoon and helped Mr. and Mrs. Carr move to the vacant house on the George Hart farm only about 100 rods distant, after cleaning and making same ready for occupancy.
 Mr. and Mrs. Carr had cleared the farm, erected all the buildings and lived there ever since their marriage and only recently they celebrated their 33rd wedding anniversary.

LOWELL LITERARY CLUB.
 The Lowell Literary club met at the home of Mrs. Sarah McPherson, Tuesday, April 13. The subject of the program was "Conservation" of which Mrs. E. Dailor acted as chairman.
 After the virola selection, "The Forge of the Forest," Mr. M. B. McPherson was introduced and gave a very interesting talk on "Conservation," with suggestions on forestation, and strict obeying of fish and game laws.
 A group of three readings "Trees" by James Parkington, "What do we plant when we plant a tree?" by Henry Abbey and "Trees," by Joyce Kilmer, were very pleasingly given by Mrs. Elmer White.
 An Old Fashioned Garden, Olive Kline, "The Conservation Beautides" were read by Mrs. Clyde Collar.
 The program closed with the virola selection: "The Mill in the Forest."

OLD PIONEER NAME RETURNS

SCHNEIDER CLOTHING STOCK BOUGHT BY VAN DYKE & ALTHEN, RECALLS OLD-TIME MERCHANT.
 The M. P. Schneider & Son clothing stock has been purchased by Van Dyke and his son-in-law, Phil Althen, who will close out the stock and continue the business at the old stand under the firm name of Van Dyke & Althen.
 To old residents of Lowell and vicinity this announcement will bring to mind many former interesting reminiscences, recalling as it does the pioneer clothier, Charles Althen, who conducted a flourishing business at that same stand for many years, which still remains the property of his widow.
 And now, in the person of his son Phil, long a salesman for his father, the name Althen reappears in the business directory of Lowell. Associated with him as senior partner is another well-known clerk of the house of Althen in the period prior to 30 years ago, Rudolph Van Dyke, whose name, except for two short intervals, has ever since been associated with the grocery and shoe business here.
 The original house of Althen Clothier, was followed by Lalley & Anderson, Lalley & Shuler, Lalley & Schneider, and then upon the untimely death of the popular and enterprising John J. Lalley, by M. P. Schneider & Son, who are now succeeded by Van Dyke & Althen, to whom is extended the right hand of fellowship.

AMERICAN FOREST WEEK.

President Coolidge has designated the week of April 18 to 24 inclusive, as "American Forest Week" and has urged all patriotic citizens to unite in the common task of forest conservation and reforestation.
 Most of us would gladly comply with the President's appeal if we knew how. There is at least one thing that we can do. Most of us during the summer take at least one automobile ride, which is made more enjoyable by the beauty of the forests, the wild life to which they give cover and the lakes and streams to which they give source.
 We can contribute largely to the protection of these forests and at the same time add to the pleasure of our trip by tacking a fire protection poster on one or more telephone poles. The Federal Government has sent to the chairman of conservation for the West Central District of Michigan, Mrs. E. Dailor, 313 Washington avenue, a supply of these posters for your use. Won't you respond to the president's appeal and do your little by calling for a poster or telephoning 367 to have one laid aside for you and posting it on an early trip?
